FLORIST.....

BASKET OF MY MARYLAND.

My Maryland rose, with the possible exception of White Killarney, has been more in the eye of the trade than any other variety in the last ten months and as autumn comes on it is likely to occupy a still more conspicuous position, for last fall it did so well with the few who were growing it that it attracted the attention of practically every grower, a large number planting it in great quantity—one grower put in over 25,000 plants and many others went in equally heavy in proportion to their glass. If the rose fails to make good from a growers' point of view, there will be many disappointed men in the trade, but there is little prospect of that, for the only breath of suspicion which has been heard against it is in regard to the possibility of its standing still during the winter months.

From the retailers' standpoint the success of My Maryland was assured from the start. It is a handsome rose from every point of view and sure to enjoy a large and steady demand as soon as the trade at large knows the supply will be constant, as it will be when the fall cut is on.

How well the rose is adapted to decorative purposes is shown in the accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph made at the store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, where the basket was made up for a display piece. The color of the rose is already a favorite with the best class of trade.

AUTUMN COLOR STUDIES.

Rich Harmonies for the Designer.

Of all seasons of the year, the autumn has the most varied, rich and alluring colors. Spring, with her greens, lilacs and pink and white buds, and blushing new shoots emerging from their gray blankets, is modestly attractive, but the dignity and maturity of autumn colors, as they blend their golds and purples and crimsons, form the richest harmonies in nature.

When Jack Frost has oxidized leaf after leaf, what wonderful bronzes, browns, yellows, reds, pinks and greens can be found on an oak tree! Every night his brush is busy, till whole hill-sides are patches of red to the man in the moon and by daylight are fairly ablaze. An earlier rival to his caprices is the artist of the Hydrangea paniculata, who turns its creamy trusses to pink and then to brown. The waving plumes of the smoke tree, as they change the soft crimson pink for a dun color, are of like spirit.

The possibilities of mums seem widened with the use of some of these accessory outdoor leaves and flowers, both as to suitability of coloring and form.

Native and Imported Products.

Time was when foreign foliage was welcomed, rather than the foliage which was found at our doors and in near-by woods. If a distant corner of the world could but contribute its products, they would find a ready market on that account, all of which is well enough, but let us not neglect to cultivate a love and a proper use for what is beautiful at home. Why not use native wheat, timothy and fancy grasses in season, as well as imported, bleached wheat?

The aristocracy of Brazil buy metal wreaths in preference to their own gorgeous flowers, just because they are expensive. If necessary to the proper appreciation of our best native products, climates they are good on the trees till December. Among the other attractive and brilliant autumn leaves are the maples. They are not the best of keepers, however, and should be cut as near the time of using as possible. Sumach is a good keeper. It will dry and hold its color for a month or six weeks.

Oak Leaves With Mums.

Well matured and autumn colored oak leaves make good foundation material for large designs, and good decorative material, too. Try a wreath or cross of short-stemmed red, bronze or cream colored mums with a spray of oak leaves over it, or reverse the construction and use the red oak leaves as a setting for a broad wreath or casket cross, and decorate with a long-stemmed spray of cream or bronze mums, or Daybreak asters. Or make the base for a stately standing piece of the same leaves and finish with a selected few long-stemmed mums in salmon—not heliotrope pink—white asters, phlox or golden rod. Hydrangeas or auratum lilies are unusually good with red or bronze foliage. An all white de-perhaps we might raise the price on them. Indeed, this is no joke. If you can gather, keep and market the finest autumn leaves in your section of the country, ask a fair price for the job.

The oak leaves, by the way, are the best keepers of all the autumn foliage. If cut in the prime of their color, packed in flat layers with paper between, and kept in a dry, cool place, free from the air, they will last for weeks. In average sign, with a touch of one of the less prominent colors of the base, would make a fitting climax for the base just described.

Background for House Decorations.

In a decorative way for a room, use screens, garlands, borders and whole sections of walls in this rich colored material. Stretch a bronzed wire netting across the side of a room and trace a de-

An earlier rival to his services is the autumn crocus, Hydrangea paniculata, who turns its cream-colored trusses to pink and then to blue. The waving plumes of the smoke tree, as they change the soft crimson pink for a clear color, bright like spirit.

The possibilities of mums seem widened with the use of some of these accessory outdoor leaves and flowers, both as to suitability of coloring and form.

Native and Imported Products.

sign, with a touch of one of the less prominent colors of the base, would make a fitting climax for the base just described.

Background for House Decorations.

In a decorative way for a room, as screens, garlands, borders and wall sections of walls in this rich colored material. Stretch a bronzed wire netting across the side of a room and trace with sign on it, allowing the meshes to show liberally; that is, leave parts of the netting exposed where the design does not extend, or cover the whole netting as a background and set a large display piece of yellow mums in a basket or vase, or other pottery receptacle which is in itself quite undecorated. This scheme would be acceptable for a fall wedding or reception background. Oak leaves would make bronze wedding bells, with mum clappers.

Oak and other rich autumn leaves as background work for casket sprays are too well known and appreciated to need much comment. The deep reds are fine for almost any color of mums except for the heliotrope pinks. These will be shown to better advantage with the duller bronze.

Mums of Duller Hue.

The duller colored mums are more ticklish to handle and colorize correctly. Try those inclined to heliotrope with creams; combine light yellow with violet, deeper shades of their own color, Farleyense, Asparagus plumosus, pine boughs, pink cosmos or wild asters, and tie with orchid ribbon lighter in color than themselves. With the dull bronzes and yellows use cat-tails, light but distinct yellows and creams, bronze reds, yellow and brown pansies, brilliant autumn foliage in yellow, bronze and red, yellow-green foliage and autumn shaded moire ribbon, with the possible addition of light, variegated grass and natural wheat.

These dull, neutral colors are to be seized upon with all eagerness for their toning abilities. They will set off a few straggling, bright, odd colors which fight with the favorite, orthodox colors. A vase of them off by themselves somewhere in the store often makes a sale without effort. Occurring most commonly in the bronze and heliotrope colors, they can often be mated with the brilliant tints of the opposite color.

Heliotrope Pink Mums.

Speaking of the more decided heliotrope pink mums reminds one of the many soft combinations which may be brought about them and wild asters, with cosmos, with light heliotrope phlox if it survives, with violets, with Carnot, Golden Gate or Uncle John roses. With most shades and tints of this color of mums, Bridesmaid or Killarney or equally deep pink roses are a trifle too strong. The more brilliant and deeper yellow mums take, as harmonious settings, cat-tails, light creamy tints of mums, Shasta daisies, white cosmos, Hydrangea paniculata in its bronze stage, touches of gray foliage as found in Florida moss, poplar leaves or birch bark, and ties of changeable green and gray ribbon.

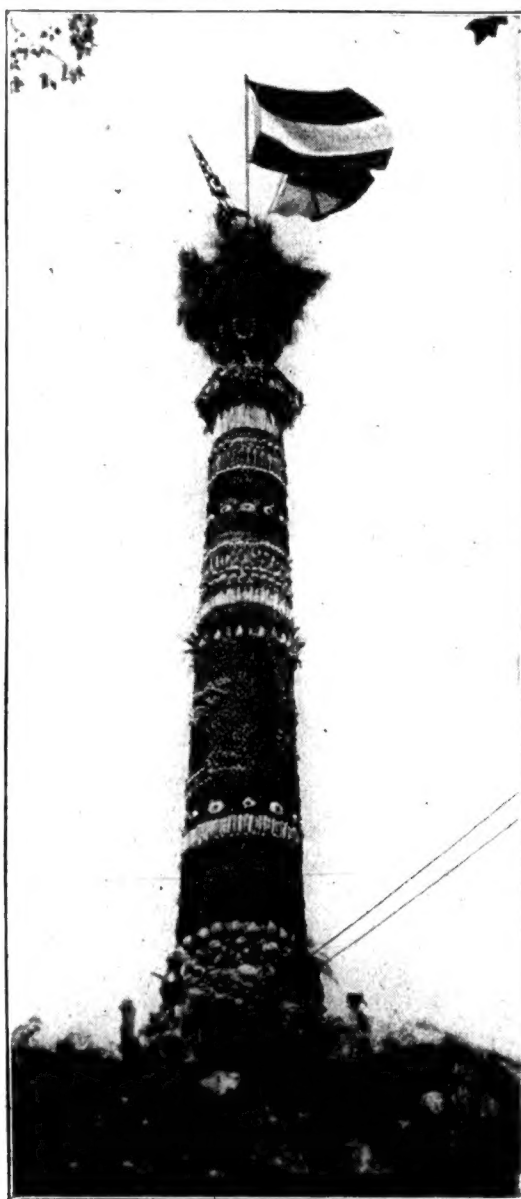

An array of gay colors in mums, softened and blended and separated by autumn foliage, along with their own foliage, may be used throughout a range of colors for decorative purposes.

Centerpiece for Banquet Table.

Beginning with the white, let us in imagination arrange a centerpiece for a long banquet table. At one end, after placing the whites, introduce a light yellow. Use enough of these to emphasize the color, and run into the medium and thence to the pumpkin color, which in turn you displace with the bronze. By this time the center of the table is reached or passed, and it is time to begin with the reds. Some of them have old-gold reverse petals. This will connect easily the reds and yellows. After planting a little patch of the pure reds, we have reached the most critical point of coloring. There is a slender connection made by a few varieties between the pure reds and the heliotrope. Mum foliage and some brown foreign foliage will aid. Dull the off end of the red section with this brown and a few of the salmon pink mums, also few and far between. Then find a pink which is neither one nor the other, and then one which leans toward the heliotrope. Then, after having been liberal with the green, you have your connection made and can revel in the heliotrope pinks from light to dark.

Thus the rainbow scheme is completed without violation of our color conscience. With all this, bear in mind that lavenders and purples take on a redder hue by artificial light, that yellows lose cast and salmon pinks deepen.

Chrysanthemum foliage is often seen tinted brown or red, and is as good a developer as green foliage.

Combinations in Spray Work.

For spray work, asters and elderberry flowers make an agreeable combination, and in later decorative work the umbels of elderberries themselves are good with white, light yellow or heliotrope mums.

The foliage of many conifers is almost as feathery as asparagus or adiantum—the hemlock and larch, for instance. Try them with Japanese mums or the plummy types of asters, always preferring their own foliage, but using the conifer foliage where extra foliage is needed.

Hydrangeas and phlox are acceptable in large sprays or heavy design work, only it takes a watchful eye to avoid combining the salmon pink of the hydrangea with the many variations of the heliotrope pink phlox. With these large, heavy flowers, wide satin or moire ribbon is preferable to chiffon.

White asters and Shasta daisies take kindly to each other in the bases of pieces, in centerpieces or in basket work; also rose colored asters combine well with pink and white cosmos. Gladioli of the violet pink order make a worthy spray with an upright bunch of violets in the lavender ribbon tie.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

FLORISTS BUILD TOWER.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, often is called on for some strong stunts in the line of decorative work. The concern is the principal reliance of the decorative staffs of several of the large State street department stores and almost always is asked for a bid whenever a big fair or business show is proposed in the city.

Last week the Schwaben Verein held its big picnic at Brand's park and the central feature of the decoration was a 50-foot tower of vegetables and greens, erected by the Wittbold force.

IOWA FLORISTS MEET.

The seventh annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists was held at the State House, Des Moines, on the evening of September 1, the members, who include most of the leading florists of the state, having spent the day at the State Fair. The officers who conducted the reunion were: President, C. N. Page, Des Moines; vice-president, J. S. Wilson, Des Moines; secretary, Wesley Greene, Davenport; treasurer, Peter Lambert, Des Moines. The directors were: G. A. Heyne, Dubuque; J. T. Temple, Davenport; W. M. Bomberger, Harlan; P. L. Larson, Fort Dodge.

The program for the meeting was as follows:

1. Call to Order.
2. Reading the Minutes of Previous Meeting.
3. Treasurer's Report.
4. President's Address.
5. "Gladioli," by Henry Field, Shenandoah.
6. "Begonias," by C. W. Davison, Des Moines.
7. "Iris," by John T. Temple, Davenport.
8. "Dahlias," by W. M. Bomberger, Harlan.
9. "Annual and Tender Vines for Outdoor Planting," by G. A. Heyne, Dubuque.
10. "Notes on Bedding Plants in Parks," by J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines.
11. "Plants of Recent Introduction that are of Value to the Trade," by J. S. Wilson, Des Moines.

LILIES FOR EARLY EASTER.

I should like to know if I will be safe in relying on giganteum bulbs for my crop for the coming Easter.

W. M. N.

I am growing Lilium longiflorum giganteum for next Easter, although it will be difficult to have them in time. I would say that it would be safer for a grower who has not much experience in forcing lilies to use Harrisii or multiflorum this season.

EMIL BUETTNER.

We feel that giganteum can be got in for Easter, but that it will require considerable forcing. We are going to use about half Harrisii and half giganteum for our own crop for next Easter.

Winter-flowering Sweet Pea Christmas Pink, Grown by Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

WINTER SWEET PEAS.

As Staple as the Violet.

Especially in February and March of 1909 the growers who had a really good article had a fine business on sweet peas. It is only a few years that sweet peas have been grown under glass, but they have by now become as staple as the violet. But there is just this much to remember: It does not pay to have poor sweet peas. Because of the success which some growers had in the preceding season, many others planted peas last fall, and not all will agree that the crop is a profitable one. The trouble was, the stock was not good enough. First-class peas paid well. Their popularity is firmly established, and good peas may be expected to be profitable right along.

The Kind of House.

Most growers plant winter flowering sweet peas on raised benches, perhaps following a crop of mums, but William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., who has made a national reputation on the sweet peas he sends to the Boston market each winter, uses ground beds, employing the house for a spring and summer crop of tomatoes. "To grow the sweet pea to perfection," says he, "you must have a house suitable for the purpose. It should be at least eight feet high on the sides, four feet six inches being glass. My houses are seven feet, and I find the side rows strike the glass, thereby cutting down the crop. My center rows are about right; they are twelve to fifteen feet high. The higher they grow the more and better flowers you get. We plant the rows five feet apart and in a line with the supports of the greenhouse.

The uprights are twelve feet apart, so in supporting we run twine from one support to the other on each side of the row. This I have found the best method of supporting. I have tried wire netting. This is only a nuisance, as the vines do not cling to the wire, which causes just as much tying as if it were not there. The side rows are planted five feet from the sides of the house, and all the heating pipes are on the sides. Peas are very susceptible to red spider, and as they will not stand syringing, the farther you can afford economically to have them from the pipes the better.

"We have not changed the soil in the houses for several years, and find the vines are more vigorous each year. The soil was originally eighteen inches deep, but by the application of manure each year the depth is now considerably over two feet. The tomato crop is on the wane by the middle of August. When these are cleaned out we trench the house over as deep as the soil, bringing the bottom soil to the surface. In the bottom of the trench we put three inches of decomposed cow manure; one foot from the surface we put on three inches more of the same material. The house is allowed to remain in this state until nearly time for sowing the seed. The soil is then usually very dry, so we dampen it down enough to cling together while the house gets another fork over. This time we go down one foot and mix the top layer of manure with the surface soil. We then make the surface as nearly level as possible, and thoroughly water the soil, giving enough to penetrate the entire mass, with a strong dose of liquid horse manure. In about three days, depending on the weather, the house will be ready to plant.

Cultural Details.

"We sow the seeds about an inch and a half apart. We make the drills one inch deep and do not allow more than one inch of soil over them. We do not pull any more soil toward the root, as is often recommended, but let it remain level. If more soil is pulled around the base of the plant, stem-rot is sure to follow. We do not water the plants again until they are up about three inches. Of course, you can grow them on a bench with a few inches of soil, but the results will be just what you make them; a weak growth and a crop of short-stemmed flowers. These soon play out, as there is not enough soil or food for the vines to live on.

"The peas may be made to flower any time you wish by increasing the temperature, but the best results are obtained by growing at a temperature just above freezing until the buds can be felt in the crowns of the plants. Then the temperature should be gradually increased, say 1 degree a night, until you reach 48 degrees. This, I think, is about right, although in midwinter I think they move a little better at 50 degrees. As the days lengthen, a little cooler temperature seems to suit better. A rise of 10 to 15 degrees should be given during the day in sunny weather. In spells of cloudy weather, 55 degrees is high enough during the day. If a high temperature is given in dark weather, the growth gets soft and wilts when the sun comes out bright again.

"While the plants are young they should be regularly fumigated, so that sign on it, allowing the meshes to show liberally; that is, leave parts of the netting exposed where the design does not extend, or cover the whole netting as a background and set a large display piece of yellow mums in a basket or vase, or other pottery receptacle which is in itself quite undecorated. This scheme would be acceptable for a fall wedding or reception background. Oak leaves would make bronze wedding bells, with mum clappers.

An array of gay colors in mums, softened and blended and separated by autumn foliage, along with their own foliage, may be used throughout a range of colors for decorative purposes.

Centerpiece for Banquet Table.

Beginning with the white, let us in imagination arrange a centerpiece for a long banquet table. At one end, after placing the whites, introduce a light yellow. Use enough of these to emphasize the color, and run into the medium and thence to the pumpkin color, which in turn you displace with the bronze. By this time the center of the table is reached or passed, and it is time to begin with the reds. Some of them have old-gold reverse petals. This will connect easily the reds and yellows. After planting a little patch of the pure reds, we have reached the most critical point of coloring. There is a slender connection made by a few varieties between the pure reds and the heliotrope. Mum foliage and some brown foreign foliage will aid. Dull the off end of the red section with this brown and a few of the salmon pink mums, also few and far between. Then find a pink which is neither one nor the other, and then one which leans toward the heliotrope. Then, after having been liberal with the green, you have your connection made and can revel in the heliotrope pinks from light to dark.

Thus the rainbow scheme is completed without violation of our color conscience. With all this, bear in mind that lavenders and purples take on a redder hue by artificial light, that yellows lose cast and salmon pinks deepen.

Chrysanthemum foliage is often seen tinted brown or red, and is as good a developer as green foliage.

Combinations in Spray Work.

For spray work, asters and elderberry flowers make an agreeable combination, and in later decorative work the umbels of elderberries themselves are good with white, light yellow or heliotrope mums.

The foliage of many conifers is almost as feathery as asparagus or adiantum—the hemlock and larch, for instance. Try them with Japanese mums or the plummy types of asters, always preferring their own foliage, but using the conifer foliage where extra foliage is needed.

Hydrangeas and phlox are acceptable in large sprays or heavy design work, only it takes a watchful eye to avoid combining the salmon pink of the hydrangea with the many variations of the heliotrope pink phlox. With these large, heavy flowers, wide satin or moire ribbon is preferable to chiffon.

White asters and Shasta daisies take kindly to each other in the bases of pieces, in centerpieces or in basket work; also rose colored asters combine well with pink and white cosmos. Gladioli of the violet pink order make a worthy spray with an upright bunch of violets in the lavender ribbon tie.

FLORISTS BUILD TOWER.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, often is called on for some strong stunts in the line of decorative work. The concern is the principal reliance of the decorative staffs of several of the large State street department stores and almost always is asked for a bid whenever a big fair or business show is proposed in the city.

Last week the Schwaben Verein held its big picnic at Brand's park and the central feature of the decoration was a 50-foot tower of vegetables and greens, erected by the Wittbold force.

IOWA FLORISTS MEET.

The seventh annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists was held at the State House, Des Moines, on the evening of September 1, the members, who include most of the leading florists of the state, having spent the day at the State Fair. The officers who conducted the reunion were: President, C. N. Page, Des Moines; vice-president, J. S. Wilson, Des Moines; secretary, Wesley Greene, Davenport; treasurer, Peter Lambert, Des Moines. The directors were: G. A. Heyne, Dubuque; J. T. Temple, Davenport; W. M. Bomberger, Harlan; P. L. Larson, Fort Dodge.

The program for the meeting was as follows:

1. Call to Order.
2. Reading the Minutes of Previous Meeting.
3. Treasurer's Report.
4. President's Address.
5. "Gladioli," by Henry Field, Shenandoah.
6. "Begonias," by C. W. Davison, Des Moines.
7. "Irises," by John T. Temple, Davenport.
8. "Dahlias," by W. M. Bomberger, Harlan.
9. "Annual and Tender Vines for Outdoor Planting," by G. A. Heyne, Dubuque.
10. "Notes on Bedding Plants in Parks," by J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines.
11. "Plants of Recent Introduction that are of Value to the Trade," by J. S. Wilson, Des Moines.

LILIES FOR EARLY EASTER.

I should like to know if I will be safe in relying on giganteum bulbs for my crop for the coming Easter.

W. M. N.

I am growing Lilium longiflorum giganteum for next Easter, although it will be difficult to have them in time. I would say that it would be safer for a grower who has not much experience in forcing lilies to use Harrisii or multiflorum this season.

EMIL BUETTNER.

We feel that giganteum can be got in for Easter, but that it will require considerable forcing. We are going to use about half Harrisii and half giganteum for our own crop for next Easter.

Winter-flowering Sweet Pea Christmas Pink, Grown by Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

WINTER SWEET PEAS.

As Staple as the Violet.

Especially in February and March of 1909 the growers who had a really good article had a fine business on sweet peas. It is only a few years that sweet peas have been grown under glass, but they have by now become as staple as the violet. But there is just this much to remember: It does not pay to have poor sweet peas. Because of the success which some growers had in the preceding season, many others planted peas last fall, and not all will agree that the crop is a profitable one. The trouble was, the stock was not good enough. First-class peas paid well. Their popularity is firmly established, and good peas may be expected to be profitable right along.

The Kind of House.

Most growers plant winter flowering sweet peas on raised benches, perhaps following a crop of mums, but William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., who has made a national reputation on the sweet peas he sends to the Boston market each winter, uses ground beds, employing the house for a spring and summer crop of tomatoes. "To grow the sweet pea to perfection," says he, "you must have a house suitable for the purpose. It should be at least eight feet high on the sides, four feet six inches being glass. My houses are seven feet, and I find the side rows strike the glass, thereby cutting down the crop. My center rows are about right; they are twelve to fifteen feet high. The higher they grow the more and better flowers you get. We plant the rows five feet apart and in a line with the supports of the greenhouse.

The uprights are twelve feet apart, so in supporting we run twine from one support to the other on each side of the row. This I have found the best method of supporting. I have tried wire netting. This is only a nuisance, as the vines do not cling to the wire, which causes just as much tying as if it were not there. The side rows are planted five feet from the sides of the house, and all the heating pipes are on the sides. Peas are very susceptible to red spider, and as they will not stand syringing, the farther you can afford economically to have them from the pipes the better.

"We have not changed the soil in the houses for several years, and find the vines are more vigorous each year. The soil was originally eighteen inches deep, but by the application of manure each year the depth is now considerably over two feet. The tomato crop is on the wane by the middle of August. When these are cleaned out we trench the house over as deep as the soil, bringing the bottom soil to the surface. In the bottom of the trench we put three inches of decomposed cow manure; one foot from the surface we put on three inches more of the same material. The house is allowed to remain in this state until nearly time for sowing the seed. The soil is then usually very dry, so we dampen it down enough to cling together while the house gets another fork over. This time we go down one foot and mix the top layer of manure with the surface soil. We then make the surface as nearly level as possible, and thoroughly water the soil, giving enough to penetrate the entire mass, with a strong dose of liquid horse manure. In about three days, depending on the weather, the house will be ready to plant.

Cultural Details.

"We sow the seeds about an inch and a half apart. We make the drills one inch deep and do not allow more than one inch of soil over them. We do not pull any more soil toward the root, as is often recommended, but let it remain level. If more soil is pulled around the base of the plant, stem-rot is sure to follow. We do not water the plants again until they are up about three inches. Of course, you can grow them on a bench with a few inches of soil, but the results will be just what you make them; a weak growth and a crop of short-stemmed flowers. These soon play out, as there is not enough soil or food for the vines to live on.

"The peas may be made to flower any time you wish by increasing the temperature, but the best results are obtained by growing at a temperature just above freezing until the buds can be felt in the crowns of the plants. Then the temperature should be gradually increased, say 1 degree a night, until you reach 48 degrees. This, I think, is about right, although in midwinter I think they move a little better at 50 degrees. As the days lengthen, a little cooler temperature seems to suit better. A rise of 10 to 15 degrees should be given during the day in sunny weather. In spells of cloudy weather, 55 degrees is high enough during the day. If a high temperature is given in dark weather, the growth gets soft and wilts when the sun comes out bright again.

"While the plants are young they should be regularly fumigated, so that there will not be a sign of lice when the plants commence to flower. If they are clean at this stage it will not be necessary to fumigate while they are in bloom. It is impossible to sell sweet peas that smell of tobacco. Tobacco also bleaches the flowers of some varieties.

"Buds dropping is caused by too cool a temperature or a sudden chill, or too much water. Should a house be allowed to go near the freezing point in mid-winter, the wholesale dropping of buds will be sure to follow. They take an abundance of water in the flowering season, but require little in the early stages of their growth. They should be provided with proper drainage, to guard against too much moisture.

Best Varieties.

"Earliest of All, pink, and Watchung, white, will come into flower fully two weeks ahead of other varieties, and for early purposes they are a fine pair to grow together. They are both black-seeded. These will flower in October if sown in August, and will be in full crop for Thanksgiving. For a later crop I prefer Christmas Pink, pink, and Florence Denzer, white. These are the leaders among sweet peas at the present time. Denzer is two weeks later than Christmas Pink, and is white-seeded. It should be sown in sand and transplanted into flowering quarters at the time you sow the seed of Christmas Pink. They will then commence to flower together."

There is a constantly increasing sale for the fancy colors, but as yet pink and white are the staples and are sold in largest quantity. Don't try to economize on the seed. Get the true winter-flowering varieties from a sweet pea specialist.

tion should begin at once and be persisted in, because the buds must be free from fly before they show color. The same thing also applies to red spider, which is often present on the under side of the leaves, right below the bud, and, as soon as syringing stops, the pests swarm up and render the bud useless.

All these little points must be attended to this month, so that when the cool nights compel us to close the ventilators the plants will be clean and ready for the changed condition.

POMPONS FOR SPRAYS.

This is my first year with pompon mums. I am growing them for sprays, three to five branches to a plant, for the Chicago market. Will it be necessary to do any disbudding? Will they need any staking?

W. D. H.

It is not necessary to do any disbudding on pompons, or at most you might just thin out a few of the buds at the tips of shoots that may seem overcrowded. If you desire to show any flowers, you can disbud somewhat by waiting till the buds have grown long enough on their stem to show you just how close they will be, and then disbudding enough so that when the flowers are open they just touch each other. This would hardly pay when growing pompons commercially at wholesale, though with a fancy retail trade one might find it profitable to do so.

Unless the plants were set out late and are very short-stemmed, they will need staking. I find bamboo canes the best for pompons, because they are stouter than iron stakes and stand up better when the shoots are loosely looped up, as they should be.

W. D. H. will bear in mind that he is aiming to produce an attractive spray of flowers and not a stiff stem with a single flower on top, so the sprays should not be bunched tightly together. Catch the base of the plant to the stake and allow the top shoots all the leeway possible.

CHAS. H. TOTTY.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Early Flowering Varieties.

Already the first mums are appearing in the wholesale marts, and, truth to tell, the demand is extremely slow. Golden Glow is the principal variety seen so far, and it certainly seems as though my prediction as to a flood of this variety was about to be fulfilled.

With asters arriving in such splendid shape as they are at present, and business almost at a standstill, there is no need of mums at this season. There is a time for everything, and the time for the mum, if you can catch it, is just after the first frost has nipped the outdoor stock and the market finds itself almost bare of flowers. Then the retailer's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of mums, and the cool, crisp weather induces him to stock up and begin to look for fall business to open up.

It would seem that the profitable way to handle Golden Glow will be to strike it at the end of April, plant late in May and catch a bud about the first week in August. This will give flowers by about September 20, which is early enough to commence cutting. It is the experience of most growers that early planted stock runs to bud altogether after the first break, instead of going on with another shoot as most kinds do, and consequently everybody is sending in a batch of short-stemmed flowers, deficient in decent foliage and generally unsatisfactory, especially in the present condition of the market.

Flowers, with me, are open also on Marie Masse, Robbie Burns, Ralph Curtis and Wells' new early flowering singles, but, speaking financially, they may as well be not flowering at all.

Budding, Staking and Fumigating.

The present is a busy season in the houses. Side shoots and suckers are springing up on every side, and constant working around the plants is necessary. Take all buds now as they show, saving the ones that you are growing for late use, as all the midseason varieties are safe on buds now showing and nothing is gained and much lost by waiting for a later bud.

Plants are growing rapidly now and they should be kept tied up and properly looked after, as flowers with crooked stems will sell only when other stock is gone.

When taking buds it is always well to run over the plants in the early morning or else the cool of the evening, when in contemplative mood the boss walks through the house, smoking his pipe and mentally figuring how far into the winter the mum crop will buy coal. The shoots are brittle in the early morning and after the sun goes down, and one can do just about twice as much work in a given time.

Just at this season the black fly appears again in the houses, and fumiga-

LEAF-SPOT AND STEM-ROT.

I am sending herewith a portion of a carnation plant of the variety Boston Market, and a bud of the Red Lawson. Can you tell me the reason they rot at the joints, like the plant I am sending you? Do you think that too close topping could be the cause, or being too wet in the field? We had lots of rain in the early part of the season and water stood on the ground for a couple of hours after it rained.

I can find buds quite often that are affected like this one I am sending you, on all varieties. As you will see, this bud is badly eaten up with spider, but I had the same trouble with the rot last year and I was clear of spider then. I gave them a good watering when I put them in the bench and they took hold finely, but this rotting seemed to come just as soon as I housed them. They were moderately dry at the root when benched.

Will Bordeaux mixture be of any benefit and how do you apply it? Will one of the sprayers such as are used to put on nicotine be all right? S. M. F.

The spotted foliage and the rotted bud are both undoubtedly caused by too much rain outdoors, and similar conditions in the house. The trouble with the Boston Market is a simple case of leaf-spot and can be gotten rid of by picking off the spotted leaves and spraying with Bordeaux.

The Red Lawsons are troubled with that fungous disease which has caused many growers to discard all the Lawson varieties. It attacks mainly the stem, eating through it and ruining the growth above it. The treatment is the same as for the leaf-spot and other fungous diseases, but it is much more stubborn and is harder to get rid of.

But why grow such ancient varieties, which have long since been superseded? You can find much better scarlets than Red Lawson, and better whites than Boston Market.

The automatic sprayers are just the thing to use for applying Bordeaux. Get a can of prepared Bordeaux from some florists' supply house. Full directions accompany each can, as regards strength to use. Apply about once each week, and wash off before applying again.

FOR DIFFERENT TEMPERATURES.

We should like to have some information as to carnation temperature. Our houses are so arranged that the temperature runs from 5 to 10 degrees warmer in one end of the houses than in the other. We grow Enchantress, Lawson, White Perfection, Fair Maid, Winsor and Queen Louise. What varieties would you advise planting in the warmer ends of the houses?

R. B.

Begin at the cool end of your houses and plant in rotation, as named: Enchantress, Fair Maid, White Perfection, Queen Louise, Winsor, Lawson.

The cooler end should not run below 48 degrees and the warmer end should not go above 55 degrees, for good results.

A. F. J. B.

POTTING INSTEAD OF BENCHING.

We have a nice lot of field carnations, which ought to be taken up, but we shall not have bench room ready before October 1. Would you advise planting them in pots until that time?

A. C.

Since you cannot house your carnations now, which is the proper time, the next best thing you can do is to pot them. If you have a good place to set the pots, either in the greenhouse or in a cold-frame, they will take hold quickly. If you will have your benches ready by October 1, I would advise you to put the plants in moderately small pots, not over 4-inch and smaller if possible, according to the size of the clumps. It will be well for them to be fairly well root-bound when you transfer them into the benches. There will be no suffering from check if the ball of soil holds together nicely. The smaller the pot, the sooner the plant will become reestablished. Be careful to give these plants plenty of room when you set the pots away. If crowded the lower leaves will dry and your plants will be much weakened, and will be slow in starting to grow when you plant them on the benches.

Of course you will not expect much of a Christmas crop from these plants, though there will be more than there would if you left them outdoors until October.

A. F. J. B.

THE LAMBERTS BRANCHING OUT.

The house of carnations shown in the illustration is part of the range of J. Y. Lambert, of Savanna, Ill. The house is thirty feet wide, but was not completely or satisfactorily photographed, on account of the lowness of the sun. The varieties planted in this house are White Lawson and White Perfection, which Mr. Lambert considers the leading white sorts.

J. Y. Lambert, Jr., has purchased the greenhouses of Wm. B. Lovell, at Sabula, Ia., and will conduct a wholesale and retail business in cut flowers, and in bedding, decorative and greenhouse plants. The main office will be at Savanna, Ill.

RHODE ISLAND'S HYDRANGEAS.

The Display at the Summer Resorts.

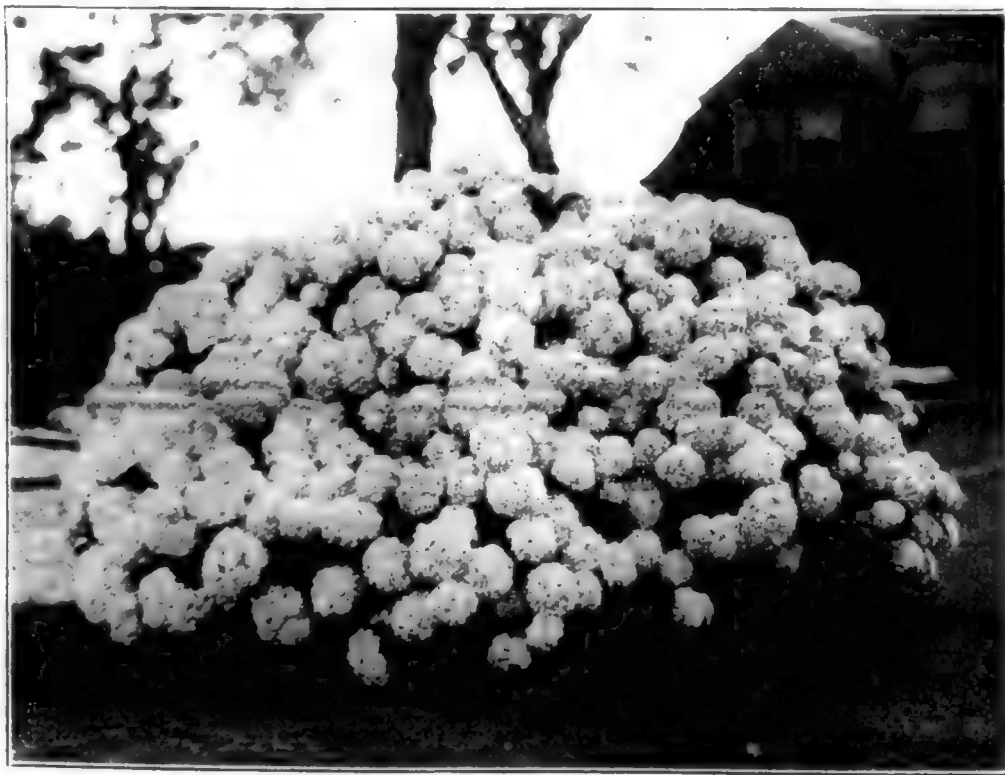

If there is any one thing which the owners of the large estates that border both sides of Narragansett Bay, in Rhode Island, are proud of at this season of the year, it is the unrivaled display of hydrangeas that has become so well known to everybody who pays a visit to Newport, Narragansett Pier, or others of the fashionable resorts.

It is said, by those in a position to know whereof they speak, to be a fact that in few places in the country do the hydrangeas grow and flower so satisfactorily or profusely as along the coast in this latitude. A plausible explanation is the close proximity of the Gulf stream to the shores of Rhode Island and the fact that, even in dry summers like the one just experienced, the air is more charged with moisture than farther inland, and these shrubs, subsisting on the proceeds of absorption through their leaf surfaces, are able to get along with less at the roots. Be that as it may, there is no single horticultural object at Newport, the Pier and several other points which now attracts nearly the attention that the great hydrangea display receives.

An Estate at Warwick Neck.

There may be somewhere a larger and handsomer hydrangea than the specimen illustrated herewith, on James A. Foster's beautiful estate at Warwick Neck. It can at least be stated unqualifiedly that seldom does this favorite shrub attain the dimensions of the plant shown—a circumference of forty feet, combined with perfect symmetry and great flowering ability.

On the grounds of those who are so fortunate as to possess shrubbery the hydrangea follows the rhododendron in blooming. During the latter part of August and early September it is at its best, and, by a beneficent provision of nature, it attains its perfection along the New England coast, where, at the season of its flowering, thousands from

An Estate at Warwick Neck.

There may be somewhere a larger and handsomer hydrangea than the specimen illustrated herewith, on James A. Foster's beautiful estate at Warwick Neck. It can at least be stated unqualifiedly that seldom does this favorite shrub attain the dimensions of the plant shown—a circumference of forty feet, combined with perfect symmetry and great flowering ability.

On the grounds of those who are so fortunate as to possess shrubbery the hydrangea follows the rhododendron in blooming. During the latter part of August and early September it is at its best, and, by a beneficent provision of nature, it attains its perfection along the New England coast, where, at the season of its flowering, thousands from all parts of the United States are passing their vacations.

Cottagers at such places as Newport and Narragansett Pier have been quick to seize upon this fact, and their displays of magnificently bearing plants, the flowers ranging in color from white through pink and various shades of blue, delight the eyes of visitors at this time of the year. Some are in pots and many have been set out, as at Mr. Foster's place, as borders for driveways and walks, where they turn a common path into a princely approach.

The Foster hydrangeas, which border the long driveway from the Warwick Neck road up to the house on the crest of the hill, were originally ten in number. From this nucleus cuttings planted from time to time have produced the rest. All are large, but none quite equals the forty-foot bush in size and beauty.

The Care of Hydrangeas.

James Burke, Mr. Foster's gardener, maintains that the hydrangea is a delicate plant, requiring constant attention. It is quite probable that his success in growing them is due to working on this theory, and that where failure has been the lot of those who have ventured on hydrangeas it is attributable to their acceptance of the common belief that the hydrangea is exceptionally hardy. "Good soil, plenty of water and let nature do the rest," is the common advice of works on horticulture.

The good soil and plenty of water meet with Mr. Burke's hearty approval, but he is willing to go a step farther and assist nature in doing the rest, especially in winter. Each fall the great bushes are buried under the sod, root and branch, there to remain until growing time comes around again. To bury them does not require that the roots be removed from the earth in the first place, but the shoots are gathered into a bunch and bent over until they lie flat in a trench prepared by removing the sod, and the latter is then replaced neatly, forming a warm covering for the dormant plants.

To provide plenty of water has been a problem during the present summer. It has been solved by the adoption of a system of watering. Ten minutes of sprinkling with a hose twice a week for each plant has been the rule, and to its efficacy the condition of the hydrangeas testifies.

The flowers of this shrub naturally run from pink to blue, says Mr. Burke, depending on the soil in which they grow. Their color may also be controlled by doctoring the soil. The rule which governs hydrangea color is that iron means blue and absence of iron, pink. Hence a little attention given to the earth in which the shrubs are grown, whether in tubs or not, will bring almost any result desired. W. H. M.

manure which had been lying eighteen months. Now I find that this manure is full of small worms, about two inches long. Would you please state what I can do to get rid of the worms and what may have caused this? The rose plants are in fine shape so far. G. K.

It could scarcely be necessary to put a mulch of cow manure on your young stock so soon after planting, thus excluding the life-giving rays of the sun from the soil, preventing proper cultivating and hampering evaporation. To give your young stock a show, this ought to be removed and the surface stirred up one inch deep.

These little manure worms are quite harmless to the stock and are of great use in preparing the manure for the use of the plants. They can be easily destroyed by using a mild decoction of lime water on the bench, but if they do not injure the plants or interfere with the drainage, it is better to leave them alone. RIBES.

HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.

Some years ago Willis N. Rudd, that close observer of flowers and accurate judge of their possibilities, remarked to me that if one would obtain a good strain of hybrid delphinium seed, and grow them, he would obtain many beautiful and interesting blooms, with most exquisite and charming blendings of colors. I took the hint and bless him for it.

Each year since then I have grown some 200 seedlings, and the pleasures of anticipation and realization have added greatly to the charms of gardening.

I select or reject as fancy dictates. Each opening spike is a new revelation, and has to stand the test of close criticism and receive its sentence. It may remain, to grow and thrive and lend its charm to its surroundings, or it may be doomed to the dump-pile and thus end its existence.

Last season I made a special effort to obtain choice seed direct from two leading European firms, English and French, both known for the excellence of the strain they grew. I also bought of Henry A. Dreer some which had been obtained from Luther Burbank.

All were sown at the same time, received similar subsequent treatment and were grown on one plot of ground. Within two weeks from the time of transplanting, the Burbank plants were easily recognized, even at a distance, by their more advanced growth and more sturdy habit. But, best of all, they gave a much larger percentage of choice blooms than either of the other batches, and were especially prolific in the pleasing lighter, delicate tints and in doubles and semi-doubles. They bloomed a week earlier than their foreign companions. Seedlings raised from European seed, especially those producing the finest blooms, are apt to have a weak constitution and many die within a few years. The robust nature of the Burbank seedlings promises to give us a long-lived race, with the choicest flowers. Plants from seed sown in heat, in March, will bloom in July. W. C. EGAN.

PREPARING FOR COLD WEATHER

The Roofs and the Heating Plant.

While the good weather holds, the roofs of the houses should be looked over and all necessary repairs done, such as glazing, repainting, etc. This work is much easier of accomplishment when conditions are right, as they ought to be at this season. If the work is deferred till the cold, wet days come, the work will not be so perfect, nor will the same speed be made.

It is also time to look over the boilers, furnaces and piping and put them in good order for the winter work.

Those are duties that are often left over till the last minute, and so, when firing has to be resorted to, we are likely to find everything out of order and a cold, wet night on our hands. The consequence is a serious set-back to the stock and probably a dose of mildew which takes months to get rid of.

Mulching and Potting Material.

This is also a good time to provide and store mulching and potting material for winter and spring use. By allowing this material to lie outside in the cold rains of September and October, much of its value is dissipated and lost. A storehouse for this purpose is absolutely indispensable where best results are required.

After the planting is done, there is usually a host of pots lying around. These ought to be collected, assorted, cleaned and stored, to be in readiness for the next season's work. If allowed to lie around, as frequently happens, to be overgrown with grass and weeds and possibly get frozen, there is great waste and inconvenience.

The coal supply for the season should also have our attention, as by taking time by the forelock we can frequently make better bargains than if we leave such matters until the material is really required.

By attending to these matters in due season a great deal of trouble can be evaded and the winter work made pleasant and profitable. RIBES.

WORMS IN ROSE BED.

I wish you would give me a little information in regard to worms in my rose bed. I have a fine soil, upon which, after planting, I put some rotten cow

MILTONIA CANDIDA.

The genus Miltonia contains some beautiful orchids, the best known being M. vexillaria, Roezlii, Phalaenopsis and specabilis. M. candida lacks the superb beauty of M. vexillaria, but is an easily grown, free flowering and useful orchid, worthy a place in every collection. It is comparatively old in cultivation, having been introduced from Brazil as long ago as 1830. The yellow colored sepals and petals are spotted with brown. The lip is white, tinged with rosy pink. Three to seven flowers are carried on each scape. Two narrow, light green leaves are produced on the top of each bulb. This variety grows well in rather small pots or pans, in fern fiber and sphagnum. Like other Miltonias, they must never be kept dry at the root, or they will suffer. A light position, well up to the glass, suits them, and too dense shade produces dark green foliage at the expense of flowers.

ASTERS COMING GREEN.

Can you tell us what causes our asters to come green? We bought the seed from a good house. We planted the Early Snow, a June flowering variety, and about one-fifth came blind or green. Of Vick's Early Branching about one-third came blind. Now the Invincible are coming in and four-fifths of them are blind. They were planted outside, in a sandy loam, and a liberal quantity of guano was used. Is the cause in the seed being gathered in a green state, or can you state the reason?

J. L. O.

This is a common trouble with asters. The cause is unknown. Seedlings raised outdoors are less susceptible to it than those started under glass, but neither are altogether exempt. In the earlier stages of growth there is no perceptible difference in the appearance of the plants; it does not show until they are nearing the flowering stage.

Your soil should be all right. Asters like soil that is deeply plowed and well enriched with barnyard manure. They also like a change of soil each year.

Nothing can be done to check the disease when once it has appeared. We doubt if these diseases are transmitted in the seed; scientific opinions are rather to the contrary. A curious fact is, that seeds which were with difficulty secured from malformed flowers gave perfectly healthy plants the following year. We can only advise change of soil and that you start the seeds either in a coldframe or in the open air another season.

the plants altogether. Use the hose on them on bright days. Nearly all plants under glass enjoy sprayings overhead.

Myosotis.

While the chief sale for forget-me-nots is in spring, there is a moderate call for them during the winter and a few bunches per week can easily be disposed of. Probably you have old plants of a variety you have been growing. If so, put in a batch of cuttings now. They will soon root and they can either have a portion of bench in a cool house or be dotted along the front of benches containing other plants. M. dissitiflora is a good indoor variety, but there are several special strains offered for growing under glass. Seed sown when suggested a week or two ago will give nice plants, which, if potted off singly, can be used for late winter blooming.

Geraniums.

Do not be in too much of a rush about taking geranium cuttings. Every year many growers lose a large part of their stock by too early propagation. There is no advantage in starting thus early, especially where plants are wanted for bedding out about Memorial day. Outdoor geranium cuttings are now extremely soft and, however great care is taken with them, many are bound to rot if we get a succession of hot days. It is otherwise with cuttings taken from plants grown under glass all the time. These are hardier and the percentage of loss from damping off will be small. September is early enough to propagate geraniums for growers in the northern states and a month later is better in the south.

Heliotropes.

A batch of heliotrope cuttings should now be taken. They root quickly, and if a few are potted along and later transferred to a bench, they will give an abundance of cuttings for propagating purposes and also furnish flowers for cutting. Heliotrope flowers are rarely seen in the markets, even in winter, owing to their poor keeping qualities. If the ends of the stems, as soon as cut, are seared with a lighted lamp or dipped in boiling water, they will keep much better. The same treatment applied to poinsettias is also quite effective.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Bouvardias.

The shortening days and cooler nights indicate the approach of fall, and from this time onward there will be much lifting and potting to be done prior to the arrival of King Frost. Bouvardias are tender plants and, having now made a nice, stocky growth, are in a good condition to lift. Endeavor, if possible, to secure a little soil on the roots, as they do not lift and start growth so easily as some other varieties. If they are to be planted in benches, soak them well and shade the glass until they become established. If grown in pots, keep them outdoors for some time yet, shade for a few days, spray frequently and they will soon recover from their shift.

Bouvardias are easily broken and it will pay to use a stake in the center of each plant, to draw the shoots in to. Of course, the plants may be left outdoors for another month, but better flowers will be had if the lifting is done now, to allow of the plants getting nicely established before they flower. That useful white bouvardia, Humboldtii, which blooms practically all summer and fall, is now quite useful when choice white flowers are scarce. It is the most robust growing of the family and every florist doing a retail trade should have a bed of it.

Bougainvilleas.

Bougainvilleas intended for Christmas flowering should now have their shoots well ripened. Keep slightly drier at the root and keep under glass, so that the pots will escape drenching rains. Those wanted for Easter blooming can be kept growing for some time longer. We prefer to keep them under glass most of the time, but a stay outdoors for the next month will suit them well. What should be avoided are heavy wind and rain storms, which are liable to occur in September. Remember the weather is still warm; therefore be careful not to suddenly withhold water, or you may kill

Cannas are now in full beauty, and what a gap there would be were they taken away from our list of flowering bedding plants! Of course, it is yet much too early to lift any of them, but it is a good time to look over your stock, mark any rogues and see that the really first-class sorts, which sell, are all correctly labeled. If your stock of these is low and you have a good call for them, it will pay you to visit some reliable grower who specializes in them. You can also get good points by looking over the bedding in any of the neighboring parks or public gardens. Cannas as bedding plants are here to stay, and no retail grower can afford to be without them.

Lilium Candidum.

French bulbs of Lilium candidum are due to arrive in a few days. They should be potted or planted immediately on arrival. It will be noticed that leaf growth has already started on many of the bulbs, and if they are not unpacked on arrival they speedily become completely tangled with roots.

In potting, cover the bulbs about two inches, using sand below and above them. Boxes six inches deep, or large sized pots containing several bulbs each, will be found more satisfactory than single bulbs in a pot. Stand outdoors on a bed of ashes when potted and keep them there until quite sharp frost arrives. This beautiful lily will not succeed if treated like L. longiflorum. It makes its circlet of leaves in fall and must therefore be potted early. Any outdoor planting should not be delayed later than the end of September and bulbs should not be covered more than four inches.

Peonies.

Peonies, in common with iris and many other early blooming, hardy perennials, do better if planted early in the fall, and there is no better time for this work than the last week in August and first half of September. Of course planting can be done until the ground freezes, but for the best results it should be done not later than October 1.

Peonies do not require moving as frequently as iris or phlox and can be left undisturbed for quite a number of years. Where the clumps, however, become very large, they are liable to flower sparsely, division of the roots then becoming necessary. Peonies are heavy feeders and plenty of good barnyard manure should be worked into the soil before setting them out. Any well drained land will grow them, sandy or gravelly soils growing fully as good flowers as clay loams, when the necessary feeding is given. Place the plants three feet apart in the rows, and allow four feet between the rows for horse cultivation where the plants are to remain permanently.

Peonies have not yet reached their greatest popularity and the talk of a possible glut of them is farfetched. There probably are too many of some of the old, undesirable colored sorts, but of good, pure whites, clear pinks, bright roses and other attractive shades there is no overstock in sight. No florist can afford to be without a bed of peonies and those without them should prepare to plant them now.

A few inexpensive sorts of sterling merit are: Festiva Maxima, pure white, tipped crimson, still hard to beat;

Couronne d'Or, fine late white; M. Dupont, ivory white; Mme. de Verneville, delicate rosy white; Mme. Jules Elie, flesh pink, shading to rose; Duchesse de Nemours (Guerin), bright pink; Duchesse de Nemours (Calot), sulphur white; Felix Crousse, bright red; Mme. Emile Galle, soft lilac, light center; Pottsi Alba, soft pink; Octave Demay, soft pink, with deeper center; Rosea Superba, rose pink.

The foregoing dozen varieties are all first-class and of colors which are desirable commercially. For any who may wish to purchase a few that are somewhat higher priced, the following are fine: Marguerite Gerard, flesh pink; Mme. Emile Lemoine, pinkish white; Baroness Schroeder, white, cream center; Marie Lemoine, sulphur white; La Tendresse, pure white; Marie Crousse, soft flesh.

Trimble Hothouse Co. is building an additional house, 30x200 feet, which will be used for roses and palms. One of the old houses, 30x200, will be used for carnations and sweet peas, and the other, 30x100, for mixed stock.

TOLEDO, O.—Krueger Bros., of Clark and Nevada streets, are building three additional greenhouses, 30x256, on their property on Woodville street. The houses will be used for growing carnations.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—John E. Tabor and Willis Eaton have purchased a tract of land at North Parish and have built thereon a greenhouse, 30x300, as the beginning of a range in which roses will be largely grown.

DAYTON, O.—Harry Papworth, of New Orleans, spent several days here after the Cincinnati convention and on the evening of August 25 a number of his local friends in the trade tendered him an informal dinner at the Atlas hotel.

ASHTABULA, O.—The plant and other property of the Ashtabula Greenhouse Co., on Bunker Hill, have passed to the control of William Regner, of Chestnut street. Mr. Regner recently completed a deal by which he secured a controlling interest in the concern.

CONCORDVILLE, PA.—Henry Hannam, who for the last fifteen years has been employed at the establishment of J. J. Styer, has ended his connection with that place and is now in West Chester, Pa. It is stated that Mr. Styer will not run his greenhouses the coming winter.

OMAHA, NEB.—Lewis Henderson will take a carload of plants and cut flowers to Lincoln, Neb., to be exhibited at the state fair, which will be held September 6 to 10. On Tuesday, the second day of the fair, there will be a fine display of flowers and many prizes will be offered.

BAY CITY, MICH.—The Roethke Florist Co., which had been occupying temporary quarters at 514 Washington avenue, has now moved to its own building at 818 Jefferson avenue. The new home of this concern is complete and up-to-date in every respect, including fine glass cooling rooms.

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. VA.—Charles Rockwell, who has for several years conducted a greenhouse and truck farm at the northern end of the city, has decided to discontinue business here and will locate at Enterprise, W. Va., fourteen miles from Clarksburg, where he has purchased a farm.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—C. W. Johnson, superintendent of the H. W. Buckbee greenhouses, has tendered his resignation; it took effect September 1. The local trade will regret his departure, as he was well liked and looked upon as an authority on carnations and mums. He is secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

First Greenhouse Erected for Study of Floriculture, University of Illinois.

A COURSE IN FLORICULTURE.

H. B. Dorner, secretary-elect of the S. A. F., calls attention to the fact that the University of Illinois, with which he is connected, is now offering a regular course in floriculture, leading to the degree of bachelor of science in floriculture.

The equipment for carrying on the work of the course, Mr. Dorner states, will consist of a service building, four greenhouses and the gardens.

The service building, as shown in the accompanying illustration, is a one-story plaster structure containing a large and well lighted work-room, offices, cut flower cool-room, storage-rooms and a boiler-room. Connected with the service building, by a corridor or connecting house, are four greenhouses, each 28x105 feet. While primarily intended for experimental purposes, the greenhouses furnish much material for class work. The facilities for instruction will be greatly increased by devoting one of these entirely to the general work of the course. The experimental work being carried on in the houses is all on a commercial scale, and is open to study by all students in floricultural work.

These buildings are all of the best type of modern construction and make a model commercial plant. The buildings are heated from an independent heating plant, thus giving an excellent chance for the study of greenhouse heating. The remainder of the greenhouse equipment is that of a commercial place.

Fronting the service building is a sunken garden, about 200x250 feet, filled with various kinds of tender bedding plants. This garden, as well as the herbaceous garden, is open to the use of the students.

Instruction work will be carried on by means of lectures, quizzes and laboratory work. The laboratory work will consist of actual practice in the greenhouses, so that the student may become familiar with both the methods and the plants. It is intended to develop a student who, upon graduation, will be fitted to enter a commercial position.

In addition to the regular or required course of study, the student is also allowed to select such other subjects as he desires, in order to fill out the number of hours necessary for graduation. The subjects required of all students in floriculture are as follows:

Plant houses—A study of construction, heating, ventilation, cost and maintenance.

Plant propagation—Study of graftage, layerage, seedage, etc.

Spraying—The theory and practice of spraying for insects and fungi.

Landscape gardening—A general course.

Evolution of horticultural plants—A study of modifications of plants under culture.

Principles of plant growing—Preparation of soils, potting, watering, etc.

Commercial crops—Growing of plants and cut flowers for market.

Decorative and bedding plants—A study of tender plants for greenhouse and outdoor decoration.

Garden flowers—Growing of annuals, herbaceous perennials and shrubs.

Floral decoration—Use of plants and cut flowers in designs, baskets, decorations, etc.

In addition to the above purely floricultural subjects, the following general subjects are also required:

Principles of fruit growing.

Seeds.

Soil physics and management.

Soil fertility, fertilizers and rotations.

Plant histology and physiology.

Plant morphology and plant pathology.

Entomology, chemistry and zoology.

Wood shop practice.

Economics.

English literature and rhetoric.

Thermatology.

Military science and physical training.

Mr. Dorner emphasizes the fact that the work required in this course will include, not only the ordinary subjects of which every florist is supposed to have a practical knowledge, but such subjects as are necessary to fit the student for a successful career, commercially and otherwise. Entrance to the school, he says, may be secured in three ways: By diploma of graduation from an accredited high school, by examination, or by earning entrance credits in the university academy or by private instruction.

PLANTS FOR A WARDIAN CASE.

Will you kindly tell me how to take care of a Wardian case, and what kind of plants I may put in it?

A. L. S.

Ferns and lycopodiums or selaginellas are the most suitable plants for growing in a Wardian case. Among the former, some of the best are: Adiantum cuneatum, A. Croweanum, Pteris Cretica, P. serrulata cristata, P. argyrea, P. adiantoides, Polystichum angulare proliferum, Cyrtomium falcatum, Lastrea aristata variegata, Aspidium Tsussimense, Davallia stricta, Pteris Victoriae, Onychium Japonicum and Polypodium aureum.

The sword ferns are rather rank growing. If you use any, try such dwarf varieties as Nephrolepis Scottii or N. cordata compacta.

Any of the selaginellas are suitable. The common S. denticulata is hard to beat. Other good sorts for your use are: S. Kraussiana, S. Kraussiana aurea, S. Emmeliana and S. caesia.

A few other plants which will thrive well in your case are: Begonia Rex, Isolepis gracilis, Ophiopogon Jaburan variegatus, Cyperus alternifolius and Asparagus Sprengeri.

A suitable soil for any or all of these plants consists of equal parts of leaf-mold and turfy loam, with plenty of sharp sand added. Some broken charcoal will also help to keep it sweet.

There are many other plants which could be grown in a Wardian case, but you will find ferns and mosses the most satisfactory. Do not keep it closed too tightly. Admit air quite freely and leave a little on all night, especially during the warm months. Among the pests which may trouble you are snails. These can be caught by hand or trapped with pieces of lettuce leaf. Sow bugs can be similarly caught. Mealy bug and scale, if they appear, can be sprayed off.

OBITUARY.

F. E. Rawlings.

F. E. Rawlings, of the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., was accidentally drowned Saturday, August 21, while bathing in the Meramec river at Blue Springs Lodge, near Bourbon, Mo. The funeral took place the following Wednesday from the home, 1209 Walton avenue, St. Louis. Mr. Rawlings was a native of Illinois. He removed to St. Louis about fifteen years ago, and for the last twelve years was secretary of the Plant Seed Co. He was 36 years old and is survived by his widow and a 6-year-old son, Paul.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

GIVE credit where credit is due, but be a good collector.

It is reported quite generally in the trade that the business for July and August was notably better than in any previous summer.

THE sweet peas will be one of the leading market flowers this winter and early spring, if the quantity of seed sold of the early-flowering sorts is any indication.

MANY subscribers save the bother of renewal, and at the same time insure not missing a copy, by sending $2, $3 or occasionally $5 instead of the $1 that pays for a single year's subscription.

A. L. GLAZER, Dubuque, Iowa, says July showed a larger total of sales than any month in the many years he has been in the business. Not so many years ago retail florists used to say that it would be cheaper for them if they could shut up shop in summer.

THE Colorado conventionites presented to President Valentine, on arrival at Cincinnati, a handsome cut glass vase, in testimony of their personal appreciation of President Valentine and the many ways in which he had added pleasure to their journey of 1,500 miles.

JUST A FEW REASONS.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Please stop our adv. for carnation plants, as it has done its work all right.—Johnson Floral Co., Kendallville, Ind., August 31, 1909.

Cut out the Boston Market from my classified adv.; could have sold four times as many if I had had them. The Review certainly sells stock, and quicker than I ever expected.—R. P. Atwell, Fort Dodge, Ia., August 30, 1909.

Please stop our fern adv.; the orders follow me into the mountains.—C. W. Eichling, of Avenue Floral Co., of New Orleans, Waynesville, N. C., August 30, 1909.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Greeting from Edwin Lonsdale.

Below is a telegram from Edwin Lonsdale, president of the society in 1895, which should have been read at the opening session at Cincinnati, but failed to come to the secretary's hands until after the convention was over:

Greeting: Sincerely regretting enforced absence from quarter-century anniversary. Heartfelt desire is herewith extended for an instructive and profitable meeting of the greatest organization ever instituted in America, and may the great work started in Cincinnati still continue and increase more than a hundredfold within the next quarter of a century, is the earnest desire of EDWIN LONSDALE.

Registration of Ferns.

Public notice is hereby given that J. D. Pruessner, of 1705 Avenue K, Galveston, Tex., offers for registration the plants described below. Any person objecting to the registration of these plants, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name—Nephrolepis Pruessneri. Description—This fern originated with us four years ago and is a sport from Nephrolepis elegantissima. It is entirely distinct from its parent variety. The fronds are only about half as long, but very double and tripinnate in form. The true character is developed by age only, but extra fine specimens are grown in 4-inch pots. They will show their true character in 3-inch pots, too. The fern inclines to form specimens and each frond presents itself as such. It belongs to the table class of ferns and loves shade.

Name—Nephrolepis Galvestoni. Description—This fern originated with us last January among a lot of Nephrolepis Pruessneri and must be a sport of that variety. The fronds are very fluffy, double and tripinnate in make-up, much shorter than in N. Pruessneri and much finer grained and fuller, resembling a very curly ostrich feather. The groove running through each frond is very distinct. It forms useful specimens in 3-inch pots. The center fronds stand up, others form a curve to hang, and the entire pot is covered with them, making it a very distinct character. No pot cover is needed, as it hides the entire pot. It is of easy culture and loves shade.

Registration of Geranium.

Public notice is hereby given that F. H. De Witt & Co., of Wooster, Wayne county, Ohio, offer for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration of this plant, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name—Red-Wing. Description—Red-Wing is a geranium plant of strong growth, stocky, symmetrical. Its leaf is medium size, with deep green color; smooth surface and slight zone. Makes an ideal pot plant or bedder, as it stands the sun well. Its flower is a deep cardinal red, with a velvety sheen; the floret averages one and seven-eighths inches, of good substance. Trusses are large and very floriferous.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business was quite fair last week, with ample supplies in practically all lines of stock, but August 29 was an unseasonably cool day, followed by others that were not hot, and the present week opened with a flurry such as is common during the active season, but seldom seen in summer. The effect of the cool weather was most apparent on the roses and all varieties shortened up to such an extent that a good many houses had to ship orders short August 30.

Shipping business is excellent for the season and city trade has begun to show slight signs of revival. It is to be expected that, with periodical relapses, business will show improvement from this time forward.

Save for the setback occasioned by the few cool days, Beauties are on the increase. Quite a number of growers who

NEW FALL SEASON HERE Beauties

Of Excellent Quality, Ready in Quantity

Our cut now has increased so that we are able to maintain a supply of perfectly satisfactory Beauties at all times in this market—but why not order direct from us and make sure of getting our stock? We aim never to be without Beauties ready for your wire.

Killarney

Next to the Beauty, the Killarney is our leader. Our supply is large and our growers are among those whose success has made the reputation of this rose. We want your orders for Killarney, now and all through the season, for—we've got the goods.

Kaiserin—Maryland

There are no better white roses in market than our Kaiserin, and for pink our My Maryland are coming stronger every day. Our supply of Summer Roses is better than ever before—sure to please—and we want to hear from all the buyers who want the best stock and best service.

Asters

This week we are shipping the finest Asters of the year—the late varieties are in strong; the stock is much better than it was early in the season.

Besides the finest outdoor stock we have Asters grown under glass that are special fancy and meet the needs of the most critical trade.

Mums

Just a little corner to announce the opening of the Chrysanthemum season. Golden Glow of fancy quality now ready. Order Mums of us if you wish the best stock.

have cut little during the summer are now sending nice stock to market. There continues to be a good demand for Beauties, especially the medium lengths, and in the first days of the week it was not always possible for buyers to find just what they wanted. A few bright, warm days and the supply will be large. Next to Beauty, Killarney is the leading rose, and in the aggregate probably Killarney is the most important item on the rose list. Crops are coming on nicely and there is some splendid stock in the market, better than ever before was offered in the opening days of September. My Maryland has not come forward as fast as some of the growers expected, but there is some good stock to be had and an increasing supply of the short lengths. White Killarney now is seen in most of the wholesale houses, though not in large quantity and few have anything but short stems. The rose thus far is not white enough to compete with Kaiserin, but an early improvement in color is expected now that cooler weather is at hand. Some excellent Richmond are available and the demand for these has improved with the change in temperature.

There no longer is reason to complain of the quality of asters. Of course the larger proportion of the receipts are poor, as always is the case, but the growers who give their asters the same attention they do other money crops are now sending in first-class stock. The rains and the coming in season of the later varieties has made the change. A few indoor asters are seen that command from 60 cents to 75 cents per dozen on the wholesaler's counter.

The receipts of carnations have again increased, both from outdoor plants and the young stock under glass. Of course most of the stems are short and the flowers are small, but there is nice, clean stock and it is selling fairly well.

The chrysanthemum has become a daily item of supply with most of the wholesale houses. Golden Glow is the only yellow variety; the quality varies considerably and prices range from $2 to $4 per dozen, with the bulk of the stock going at $2 to $2.50. October Frost is the only white thus far received and is worth about $2.50 per dozen.

The supply of Easter lilies has shortened up; it is usually either a feast or a famine on these, for all growers seem to be on and off crop at the same time. Auratum is not so abundant and for lancifolium there is little sale. Gladioli have ceased to be the important item they were a few weeks ago. Not many America of good quality now are received, but there are large supplies of Augusta. The common sorts are not now received in such large quantities as was the case early in August.

Greens are quiet, but there is a tendency to stiffen up on common ferns.

Next Monday, September 6, is Labor day and a legal holiday, but the wholesale houses will be open as usual, because Monday is an important shipping day. E. C. Amling calls attention to the fact that the postoffice will make no delivery of mail after 9 a. m., so that orders reaching Chicago at a later hour should be telegraphed.

Beginning September 1, all the wholesale houses keep open to 6 p. m. daily, except Sunday.

August Business.

With most of the wholesale houses August made a better record than a year ago. The month made a start which was far from good and it was not until the third week that it could be said there was any improvement, as compared with last year. But the finish has been strong, especially with the houses that have had the largest supplies of good asters and first-class roses. Taken altogether, the wholesalers find the month entirely satisfactory and the summer season the best yet. The summer months are showing steady improvement in the volume of business. O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says that business will proceed steadily all summer as soon as the general public finds that good flowers now are to be had every day in the year.

Red Violets.

Once more that perennial theme, "red violet" work by the wholesalers, is up for discussion. Periodically the retailers expend a great deal of energy on this subject, with the effect of causing those houses that do little retail trade to cut it down still farther, while those man's birthday anniversary and in honor of the occasion he has invited several retailers and wholesalers to luncheon at the Hofbrau, intending incidentally to talk over trade interests. It is reported the retailers will have a number of suggestions as to how the wholesale business should be conducted, but that the wholesalers' thought, aside from the repast, will be of some plan of making more prompt collections.

Various Notes.

The Foley Mfg. Co. has just closed the purchase of a piece of ground, 194x100 feet, at the southwest corner of Twenty-fifth street and Artesian avenue, and nine other lots in the same block. This property adjoins the present plant of the Foley company at Twenty-sixth street and Western avenue and its acquisition will give the company the entire block between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets and Western and Artesian avenues. It is understood the property will be used for an enlargement of the company's plant.

It is reported that the firm of F. Calvert & Son, which the REVIEW recently stated had sold out to Otto Triebwasser, of Kansas City, was started at Lake Forest October 1, 1884, so that the business has been established almost twenty-five years. The sale was due to the death of Frank Calvert and the failing health of E. S. Calvert. Mr. Triebwasser will continue the business, using the name Calvert Floral Co.

The preliminary premium list for the flower show to be given at the Coliseum in November by the Horticultural Society of Chicago has been issued. It follows closely the lists of the years preceding the national flower show and carries the usual liberal premiums, the offerings in the 142 classes amounting to $2,981.50. Anyone interested in show matters can address J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1620 West One Hundred and Fourth place, Chicago.

Albert T. Hey, formerly of Springfield and later manager of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., September 1 took possession of the F. R. Hills establishment at Maywood, which he will hereafter conduct. It is Mr. Hey's intention to gradually turn the place into growing fancy pot plants.

The Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening, September 2, at the Union restaurant.

Captain Schuttler's place at Wilmette has largely been planted to roses instead of to carnations this season.

The Summer Show.

The annual late summer show of the North Shore Horticultural Society, held in a marquee on the grounds of the Country Club, August 25 and 26, was a great success, both in regard to weather, attendance and number of exhibits. Quite a number of silver cups, medals and other special prizes were offered and these brought out excellent competition.

Eric Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, took the Lord & Burnham gold medal for the best 100-foot group of flowering and foliage plants, with a well grown and prettily arranged assortment. For twelve vases hardy perennials the gold medal went to J. Scott, gardener to Mrs. H. L. Higginson; the silver medal to Miss A. G. Thayer.

Mrs. James McMillan, F. F. Brasch gardener, won the G. R. White silver cup for the best collection of annuals. The A. H. Hews Co. specials for collections of dahlias were captured by Mrs. G. M. Lane, Hubert Shaw gardener, and Mrs. J. McMillan. William Swan took the Manning medal for best collection of hardy perennials, also first for six pots of neph-

The Breck special for twelve varieties of annuals went to Mrs. Gordon Abbott. William Swan led for pair of hydrangeas and single specimen, also for specimen dracæna. Mrs. Leland had finest specimen palm, William Swan second. Mrs. S. P. Brewer was in the lead for six ferns distinct, Wm. Swan second, the latter being both first and second for single specimen.

Among cut flowers, the dahlias, roses, sweet peas, gladioli, antirrhinums, penstemons and other varieties were unusually good. Vegetables were never better, those from Mrs. Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener; Mrs. E. S. Green, A. E. Parsons gardener; W. B. Walker, W. Jaffray gardener, and Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Wm. Irwin gardener, being noteworthy.

Among miscellaneous exhibits were a grand display of gladioli from B. H. Tracy, awarded a silver medal; a beautiful group of summer flowering chrysanthemums arranged with adiantums, from Mrs. E. S. Green; herbaceous perennials from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and extra fine asters from Mrs. E. A. Whipple, the latter being awarded a certificate of merit. William Swan took the W. W. ASTERS

We continue to have a good supply of them, and the largest portion of our consignments are very choice flowers. We do not think that you will find a better supply of asters in this market than we can offer you. We can furnish you a fair grade of stock as low as $1.00 per hundred, and the better grades at $1.50 and $2.00. A few very choice flowers are bringing a trifle more.

My Maryland

The best of these are now coming in with stems 15" to 20" long; exceptionally good roses for this time of the year. The best of them are worth $6.00 to $8.00 per hundred. Extra good value we can give you in the shorter grades, selling at $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 per hundred.

Cattleyas

Our growers report that they will have a limited supply of them, with the cut increasing from now on. Our Cattleyas will be of a very choice quality, and we will bill them to you at the lowest market price.

Carnations

Some of our growers are commencing to cut from their new plants. The flowers are fair, stems as yet a trifle short, but a carnation as good as they can be had at this time of the year.

Field-grown

Carnation Plants

We are still offering plants of many of the best varieties of carnations, and would be glad to send you our list and prices.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Summer is over. There are signs in the air and on the street of awakening interest in the cut flower market. There is no marked change—just a little more life indicative of better times ahead. Asters continue fine as a rule. Gladioli are not. Harrisii and giganteum lilies have been reinforced by album and rubrum. All go a-begging. Dahlias and cosmos are more plentiful. Sweet peas of quality are still factors. Chrysanthemum Golden Glow is to be had. There is no change in roses or carnations. Hardy ferns are the most popular greens of the day.

The Palm Situation.

It will be of interest to florists throughout the country to know that several changes in conditions governing the palm growing industry are likely to be felt here. The medium and large sizes of Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana, in other words, 6-inch pots up, are reported scarce in Europe. Another point of interest is the failure of the last sowing of Areca lutescens seed. It is believed that nearly all the seed of this graceful palm comes from the vicinity of Rio Janeiro, Brazil. Exactly what was the matter with this seed is not known. It appeared, when received by the various importers handling it in this country, to be in splendid condition, but for some unknown reason it failed to germinate. Its failure will undoubtedly have an effect on the production of arecas that will be felt in the market a few years hence.

The Railroad Gardeners.

Last week the railroad gardeners, as previously announced in this column, held their third annual convention in this city. A body of some twenty-five representatives of the various railroads throughout the country gathered in Horticultural hall to discuss questions of interest. They were taken on trips from the Reading and Pennsylvania stations to see the work that is being done under the supervision of Paul Huebner and E. A. Sterling. Wednesday, August 25, they visited Riverton as the guests of Henry A. Dreer. The railroad party went up the Delaware river by steamer. They were met at Riverton by George D. Clark, James C. Clark and George A. Stroblein, who escorted them over the greenhouses and trial grounds of the Dreer nurseries. After seeing as many of the features of interest as time would permit, the visitors were entertained at luncheon, returning on the 5:12 train for the city. Those present were:

Forty-ninth and Market Streets.

Robert A. Craig had suggested a stroll through the houses, a suggestion that warranted a special effort to finish the day's work early. For you see it is a treat to have Robert A. Craig talk about his work: he is a good grower, he is enthusiastic and he has cultural ideas that have proved successful.

The ferns are a feature of the place today, the nephrolepis family almost to a fern. N. Scottii and N. Todeaoides are in the lead; N. Amerpohlii comes next; then N. Whitmani. N. Craigii, now in its third year, will in time displace No. 3 on the list. All is well grown stock, timed to meet the demand at its height. Cheap Johns and bargain sales are scarce thorns in the side of Quality.

Crotons are immense. New cultural methods, new varieties, 5,000 propagated monthly, make and keep three large houses ahead of the times. "Don't sell Below we offer the NEW KIND of bucket or flower jar, made of the best galvanized iron, which is only one of the many novelties we have in store for our customers the coming season.

After a practical and thorough test of two years this bucket has been found far more durable, easier handled; in fact, superior in every way to any flower receptacle on the market today.

It does not break, does not wear out, does not rot, does not chip; in fact, with any kind of care will last a life time.

them too cheap," a critical buyer said. Could praise sing more sweetly?

Begonias show the effect of intelligent care; Lorraine, the Lonsdale pale pink type, and Agatha, all three clean and sturdy in flowering sizes, giving promise of abundant leaves and bloom. Cyclamens from special seed, own and imported, in airy, slat-covered houses, are of that deep and rich green that testifies silently to care and cleanliness.

This is the home of Ficus pandurata from whence comes over ninety per cent of this city's famous specimens, single and branching, a fact so keenly appreciated that the shapely stock in the houses today is spoken for six weeks ahead, despite the best efforts of skilled producers.

Chrysanthemums form an army to themselves, from Golden Glow in bloom since August 20 to Golden Age that will close the season at Thanksgiving. Some thirty of the best varieties will furnish a thousand or so blooms daily after the early sorts are over. They are grown to single stems, two plants together in raised benches.

There is much more to tell; more of much interest, but it is well to know when one has said enough, and to act on that knowledge.

The Market.

Trade was quiet last week, but the total of sales for August were quite a little ahead of those a year ago. Some good American Beauties are coming in. These sell quite well. My Maryland continues to hold its own well. Some good White Killarney are seen, while Killarney is coming a little better. Kaiserin is good. Other roses are of little account.

Carnations of the old crop are practically done and new crop flowers are short-stemmed. Asters continue at their flood tide; the quality is splendid, but they are so numerous that they are hard to move. Flowers with stems two feet long are quite common.

Gladioli are a glut and are only cleared at low prices. Tuberoses are more plentiful than is usual in this market, but do not sell well. There is an abundance of lilies; callas are still in evidence. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are good, but August is too early for them, when there are so many fine asters. Sweet peas are still abundant, selling all the way from 50 cents to $2.50 per thousand. Pink varieties are the favorites.

Cattleyas are scarce and such gardenias as arrive bring good prices. Cosmos is plentiful. Valley has a fairly steady sale. No change in adiantum or asparagus.

Annual Market Stall Auctions.

The annual auction sale of stalls in the Park Street flower market was held August 28 and proved to be the most successful one the Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association has yet held. Bidding was brisk throughout and 120 stalls were disposed of for between $5,000 and $6,000, an increase of some $600 on last year in gross premiums. This is in addition to the regular rental of $25 per stall. William Sim secured first choice at $97; Mann Bros., Peirce Bros., S. J. Goddard and F. J. Dolansky paid $90 each; W. C. Ward, $87.50; Budlong Co., $82.50; William Nicholson, two at $80; Thomas Roland, $80; Waban Conservatories, Paine Bros. and Messrs. Boyle, Kidder and A. Christensen gave from $77.50 to $80 each.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market held its annual auction of stalls in Music Hall market August 29. There was a large attendance of growers. W. W. Tailby made an efficient auctioneer. First choice went for $90, second for $80 and third for $76. The total sales were much better than in 1908, lowest price being $20 against $15 a year ago. One hundred and twenty-one stalls were disposed of. After sale, the price of the remaining stalls will be $25. The serving of coffee, sandwiches and salads to all present was a pleasant feature.

Various Notes.

The sale of stock for the new whole sale flower market makes steady progress and there is now little doubt of the success of the proposed amalgamated market, although it may be a year before it becomes a reality. Some growers believe that five shares of stock should be the limit to any one individual, that no proxy voting should be allowed and that "One man, one vote" should be the motto.

In a circular just issued by the Park Street growers' market some interesting statistics are given. The present market has but forty-three stockholders. It was organized seventeen years ago, with sixty shares at $25 each. This amount has been paid back in dividends over eight

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather has been ideal of late and refreshing rains and cool temperatures have already caused a slight improvement to be noticeable in the retail business. In another week all the city places of amusement will be in full blast and this means much to the store men.

The wholesale market shows little, if any, improvement, because of the immense quantities of gladioli, asters and hydrangeas still flooding the street. There is little possibility of change for the better, in the opinion of the veterans, before Labor day.

The middle of September will see the local Beauty crop in evidence again. The supply of first-class stock now is limited and good prices are obtainable for perfect long-stemmed flowers. Of other roses the shipments are unlimited, and good figures are out of the question. Most of the arrivals are sold in the boxes and at the buyer's offer. The Brooklyn jobbers buy them by the wagon-load.

The orchid supply is still limited. A few cattleyas arrive daily. The middle of the month will relieve the stringency, but there are not likely to be any too many to go around during the busy season.

An abundance of lilies of all varieties arrives daily, but prices are advancing slightly.

So great is the aster supply that the best last week sold as low as $2 per hundred. These easily commanded $4 to $5 a year ago. There is no end to the gladioli and only the named varieties bring a paying quotation. Ninety per cent of all arrivals go for 50 cents and less per hundred. With hydrangeas, tritomas, golden rod and the new ferns, there seems no excuse for neglect and much reason for profuse and artistic window decoration.

Various Notes.

Next week, Thursday, September 9, the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will hold its second annual outing and clam bake at Whitestone Landing. The special train leaves the Long Island depot at Thirty-fourth street at 10:34 a. m. Tickets include transportation, a noon breakfast and the clam bake at 6 p. m., and are $4 for gentlemen and $3.50 for ladies. There will be bowling and other amusements and many prizes. Judging by last year's success, a good time for all who may attend is assured. Invitations

One of the wholesale florists says he has solved the problem of the summer dullness and the most barren season ever known in New York. He attributes it entirely to the automobile craze. Club Election.

The last Florists' Club meeting, August 24, at Krueger's office, was election night. Will Krueger and John Gratopp, president and vice-president, retired. In their places E. A. Kuhnke and Mr. Nussbaum were elected for the coming season. J. L. Schiller was reelected secretary and treasurer. The Florists' Club intends to have a little chrysanthemum show among the members, where a few prizes will be given, the details of which will be worked out later.

Various Notes.

J. L. Schiller is putting the finishing touches on his new houses on South street.

Searles Bros. are building a large new range of 750-foot houses for lettuce, in addition to their already large plant.

Jos. Gartner has a position with E. A. Kuhnke. Jacob Naumann, of Kuhnke's, is in Louisville, Ky., with the Helvetia Men's Singing Society.

Miss H. Patten has returned from her vacation to Mackinaw, where she enjoyed a pleasant two weeks. She reports fishing as being fine.

Visitors from this point to the S. A. F. convention were G. Bayer, J. Barrow and son, Miss H. Patten and the Peck family.

Krueger Bros. Co. report the new houses on the farm as nearly finished. Business is good.

Frank Schoen, recent manager of the Schoen Floral Co., is working for the Gasser Co., of Cleveland. The largest stockholders of the concern are keeping the business going.

King Wamba carnival last week drew a lot of people to the city, but I doubt if the florists' trade was benefited much. The automobile parade seemed to be all paper and cloth flowers. One float of the Transportation Club carried a large engine and tender made up by Mrs. E. Suder, which drew favorable comment from the daily papers. E. A. K.

CUTWORMS.

Cutworms, of which there are many kinds, one of them being a serious pest in carnation fields in the east the last few years, are the young of heavy-bodied, usually more or less dusky-colored moths or millers that hover about the lights during hot, muggy nights in June and July, especially when a storm is threatening. Indeed, this habit has won for them in some parts of the country the common name of "candle flies." The habits of these cutworms are much alike, and for practical purposes they may be considered as one. The eggs are deposited in summer by the moths or millers, and, as they are primarily grass feeders, these eggs are generally placed in grass lands. In fact, this is the only way that the mother insect can protect her offspring—by placing her egg where the young hatching from them will be the most likely to secure the proper food supply—for before the eggs hatch she will have died.

The young hatching from these eggs begin to feed and increase in size, becoming partly grown by late fall, usually descending below ground and remaining there in a dormant condition. With the advent of spring and warm weather they become active again, ascending to the surface of the ground and feeding as they did the previous fall, only more ravenously. Hence, there are, as will be observed, as many of these cutworms in the fields in the fall as there are in spring, or even more. Thus it is that grass lands of long standing are the worst infested by these pests in spring, and the most serious loss to the grower by reason of cutworms takes place when he attempts to change from grass to some other crop. A crop suffers worse from these ravages that is grown sparingly on the ground, so that the individual plant becomes more important.

During a few weeks these cutworms continue to feed, after which they burrow into the ground for an inch or so and there construct earthen cells, in which they transform to adults and make their escape.

The Department of Agriculture says the effort should be to render the conditions as unnatural as possible. Break up the grass lands in summer to destroy the food supply of these young cutworms in the fall; or break up the ground very late, after the underground cells have been formed, thus exposing them to the inclement weather of winter; or cultivate the land early in spring to complete the destruction of the food supply of the worms, or destroy them by delaying planting until they have perished of starvation. If allowed to live out their natural life the worms do their destruction and reach full growth by middle to late May, when they descend just below the surface of the ground, again construct cells in the earth, and pass into a stage requiring no food, and no amount of treatment is likely to affect them. In a few weeks the moths emerge from the ground and wander about, selecting suitable places in which to lay their eggs.

DAVIS, CAL.—Thomas Wilson, formerly a successful gardener at Grass Valley, Cal., recently accepted a position in connection with the State Agricultural School here, and is at present superintending the laying out of the grounds. A conservatory is being erected and will be stocked with a fine collection of plants, which will be under Mr. Wilson's care.

Trade Conditions.

The market situation is about normal, and everybody is busy preparing for the opening of the fall trade. The downtown dealers have renovated their stores, repainted and otherwise brightened up their places of business and are ready for the return of the theatrical and social season. Last week was busier than usual, on account of a number of funerals, that of Secretary of State Charles P. Bennett adding considerably to the activity.

Florists on Outing.

The members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island may know all about flowers, but they have got a lot to learn about fishing, if the results of the trip down Narragansett bay, August 25, are any criterion. It was a merry crowd that gathered at the City Hall steps about 11 a. m., for the purpose of going on the annual outing, their song being: "We Don't Know Where We're Going, but We're on Our Way." The committee in charge had kept the details of the outing a secret, and no one knew where he was going when he boarded a suburban car bound south toward Pawtuxet.

The destination turned out to be Pawtuxet Neck, where a launch was in waiting to carry the members for a sail and fishing trip down the bay. A number of the florists prayed to be put ashore at Prudence Island and their prayers were answered. Once on the island they amused themselves with quoits and other games, and also enjoyed a dip in the surf. Those who stayed on board the launch continued down the bay to a spot where the fishing was reported to be extra fine. The florist fishermen had enough bait in the launch to stock a Gloucesterman, but they couldn't inveigle the fish into taking any of it. The only thing that was pulled up in the two hours' waiting for a bite was the anchor.

When the fishermen returned to Prudence the sportsmen were picked up and the launch headed for Field's Point. There a special bake was served at 5:30. The florists were met there by William J. Stewart, of Boston, who made the remainder of the round of fun with the crowd. After the bake had disappeared everybody again boarded the launch, which then started on a moonlight sail about the bay.

Those composing the party were William Appleton, Eugene Appleton, William E. Chappell, Michael Sweeney, William Hill, Michael Lynch, H. R. Bellows, William Hazard, Charles Macnair, Alexander Macrea, Eugene McCarron, O. H. Williams, Joseph Kopelman, James Dillon, James Hockey, Cornelius G. Hartstra.

Damage By Hail.

The northern section of this state was pelted with hailstones of large dimensions on the night of August 20, the storm being the worst experienced within the memory of the present generation. Much damage was done, the stones being of such size that windows were broken in many places. Flower beds were ruined and truck farms badly damaged.

At Franklin, Mass., just over the state line, the glass in the former Slade greenhouses on Central street, recently kept by William Stuart, was wrecked. The vineyard of Raphael Florani, on Cottage street, and the vineyard of A. J. Cataldo, on Worsted street, were completely destroyed. The entire cranberry crop of about 800 barrels on the meadows off Pleasant street was destroyed, entailing a loss of $3,000 or more.

At Hecla village about fifty lights of glass were broken in the greenhouses of B. L. Dresser, on High street, and other damage was done. The monetary loss caused by the storm in the northern section of the state is estimated from $75,000 to $100,000.

Various Notes.

J. Lisle furnished the decorations for the Prouty-Hersey wedding August 26.

Macnair furnished the decorations for the ladies' night ball of the Saskatchewan Canoe Club on the Pawtuxet river, August 26.

The cup presented to the Newport Horticultural Society by Louis L. Lorillard as a prize in a plant competition has been won by Stewart Ritchie.

State of Trade.

The cut flower market of last week showed a slight improvement over that of the week previous and there was a good supply of stock to compete with the demand. Carnations from the new crop are becoming more plentiful every day, and the quality seems to be entirely satisfactory to the trade. Roses are now in full crop, but quite small. Last week they were hard to keep, on account of the weather being so hot. Funeral work seemed to be the direct cause for the improvement in last week's business. There was a good supply of Lilium Melpomene and speciosum album on the market, which sold remarkably well, filling in the vacancy caused by a scant supply of longiflorum. There are not many home-grown asters in the market at present, and but few gladioli.

Trade throughout the month of August was no worse than all florists expect during that hot summer month.
Consequently, not having expected wonders, we do not feel at all discouraged when we view the records of our August business for 1909. Stock throughout the month was quite plentiful. While it is true that we could not always get the varieties of flowers we wanted, still, by taking what we could get, we could manage to "get there" in some way.
The weather, on the whole, was exceedingly hot, with a few good, hard rains thrown in, just enough to keep outdoor vegetation from drying up.

ELKHORN, WIS.—Mr. Bergstrom has broken ground for his greenhouse and work will be rapidly pushed forward.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.—Phil Lunden is reported to be raising a rattlesnake as a pet. He caught the viper, which is a young one, on West mountain.

SAYRE, PA.—Edward Snow spent seventeen days of July in the woods of the Adirondacks, and returned in an automobile, by way of South Lake, N. Y., Utica and Binghamton. He says that for two weeks he saw no dust and heard no toot of whistle, but heard instead the nightly cry of the owl, asking, "Who—who are you?" He also heard, saw and felt a variety of creeping and flying bugs and insects, which were easily subdued, however, by the smoke from burning fungus or dead wood. As a result of pure air, pure water, and appetite hard to appease, he returned in good trim for the renewed tussle with his work.

W. A. RATHBUN, referee in bankruptcy, at Springfield, Mo., August 25, adjudged the Planters Seed Co. bankrupt and appointed John S. Farrington receiver, upon the petition of both the company and the creditors. Mr. Farrington closed the establishment and later will sell the stock at public auction to the highest bidder. The liabilities approximate $12,000. The assets are not known.

DURING the severe storm that passed over Chicago August 27 lightning struck an onion set shed on the L. A. Budlong Co. farm and instantly killed three men who had sought shelter beneath it. It is the custom of the Budlong Co. to hire a large number of men and women during the season of harvest for its onion set crop, giving a check for each basket gathered and redeeming the checks in cash each night. Under this system the identity of the workers seldom is known.

HONOR TO EDWARD L. COY.

At the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Niagara Falls, Ont., in June, special recognition was made of the work of Edward L. Coy, the veteran seed grower, now of Melrose, Mass., but for most of his active life a resident of New York state, in electing him an honorary member for life. The distinction is the more notable in that it has been conferred but once before, in 1907, in the case of Wm. Meggat, of Wethersfield, Conn., a former president of the association. An honorary member can only be elected on recommendation of the president, backed up by the unanimous vote of the members present, this amendment to the by-laws having been adopted in 1907 to permit the election of Mr. Meggat. Ex-President S. F. Willard, of Wethersfield, Conn., spoke of Mr. Coy's long and honorable record in the seed growing business and the fact that he has now retired from active work, and President Woodruff at once recommended his election to honorary membership.

This well deserved recognition for one who has served so long and successfully as a seed grower makes it particularly appropriate that some of the facts in his active career should be recalled at this time.

Edward L. Coy was born April 4, 1831, at Bernardston, Mass. His ancestors were among those who came from England in the early Colonial days, and his grandfather on both sides, each with two brothers, fought through the Revolutionary war. When 16 years old he moved to Washington county, N. Y., and about a year later began growing seeds for R. N. Rice, of Cambridge, N. Y. At first in a small way, then on an increasingly larger scale, for some of the biggest seed houses of New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere, he diligently kept at the business of seed growing through all these years, until now at 78 he has rounded out sixty years in the business.

In his early manhood Mr. Coy wrote a great deal for the agricultural press, and during that period delivered many addresses before county and state agricultural societies. It was at this time that Horace Greeley, who had become interested in his contributions to the press, using many of them in the New York Tribune, urged him to take the editorship of the agricultural department of his paper. Mr. Coy has sometimes thought that possibly his declination was the great mistake of his life.

In 1875 he was elected president of the Washington County Agricultural Society and in 1881 and 1882 was reelected. For eighteen years he was on the board of directors of this organization and was four times president of the Hebron Agricultural Society. In 1903 he was selected by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to make a full and complete test of nearly 250 varieties of cucumbers, with the idea of establishing a type of each; also to learn how many of the named varieties were synonyms. No one better qualified for the task could have been selected, for he was for many years possibly the largest grower of cucumber seed in the world. He has stated that his largest crop, harvested in 1902, was over thirty-five tons. But it will be as a breeder, or originator, of potatoes that he will be most generally remembered in years to come by the horticultural world. The number of varieties he originated counts up to nearly a score, each of which, in its day in some section of the country, has been a standard market variety. The following are a few of his well known varieties: Beauty of Hebron, White Elephant, Late Rose, Burpee's Empire State, Henderson's Early Puritan, The Thorburn, White Late Rose.

September 21, 1858, Mr. Coy married Miss Clara B. Cary, of Hebron, N. Y. There are three children living, C. Herbert Coy, of Valley, Neb., who is also well known in the seed growing business; Dr. S. Willard Coy, of Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Ida B. Sievwright, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

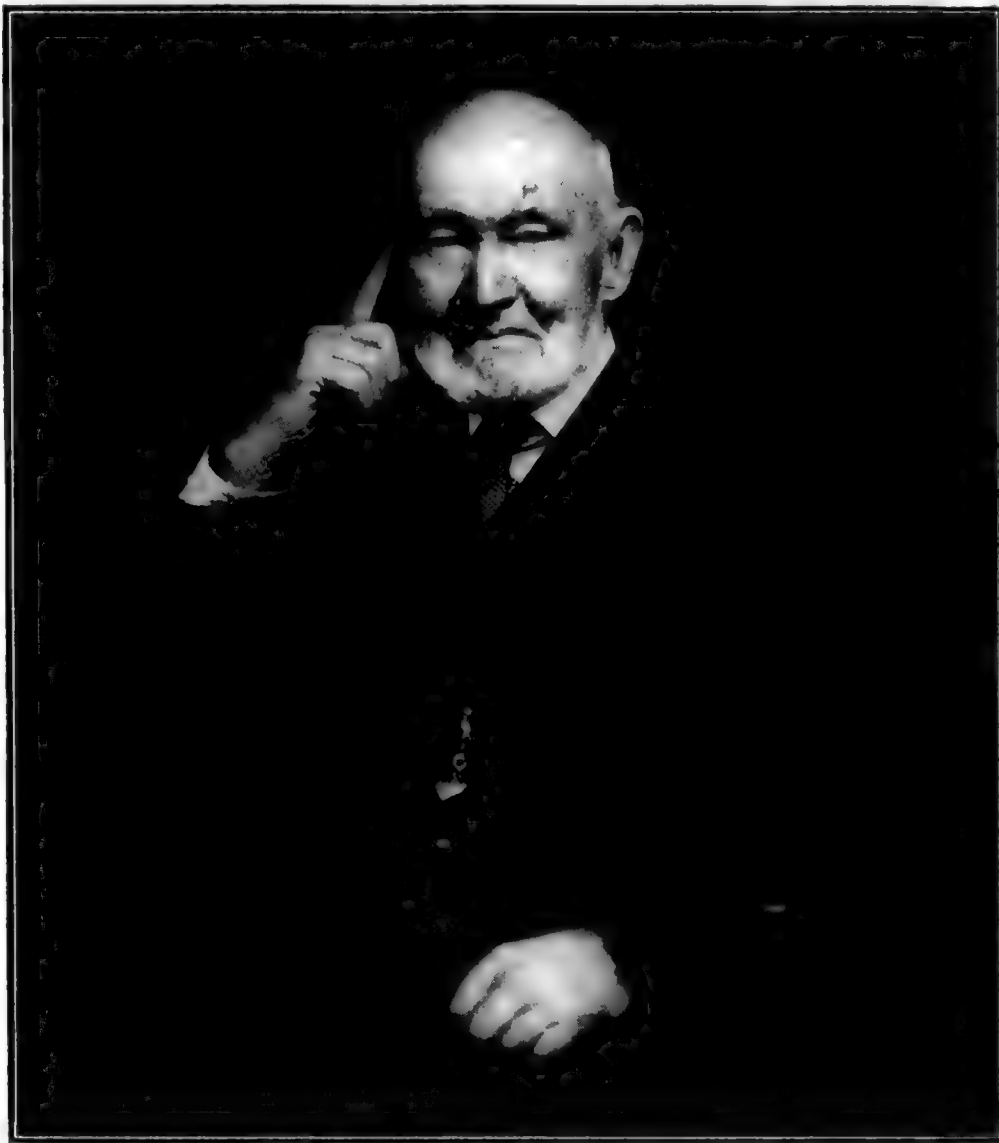

GLADIOLI.

[A paper by Henry Field, of Shenandoah, Ia., read before the Iowa Florists' Society at Des Moines, September 1, 1909.]

I have often thought that if I were confined to one single variety of flowers I would choose the gladiolus. There is no flower with so wide a range of color, none more easy to grow, and none that will keep so well as a cut flower under ordinary house conditions.

Roses are all right, and I love them, but for the ordinary gardener they are so hard to grow that they are a disappointment. The same is true of lilies. But the gladiolus will grow and bloom for anyone. It will grow in any soil and in any climate.

Speaking as a dealer, it is more of a pleasure to me to sell gladiolus bulbs than any other bulb or plant. The cus-

Improvements to be Desired.

Speaking from the fanciers' standpoint, we still have some improvements to desire and look forward to in color, size and form. For instance, we have no large, widely opened white, blue or yellow. In pink we have America, which is well nigh perfect, and in red we have Mrs. King, Princeps, and several others of large size, perfect color and beautiful, wide-open shape. But in white the best we can offer as yet are Augusta and Snowbank, both of which are comparatively small. In yellow, the situation is still worse, as we have only Isaac Buchanan and Canary Bird in bright, clear yellow, and both are small.

It seems to me that the great need now is for whites and yellows equal in size, shape and vigor to America and Mrs. King. I suppose they will come in time, but we all ought to hurry that time if we possibly can.

How to Get Needed Colors.

It is my impression that it can best be done by intelligent, painstaking and scientific hand hybridizing, using our best and most vigorous pinks for the mother plant and crossing with our best yellows and whites. I understand there is already one man in this state who has been working along that line for several years, C. L. Goodrich, of Luther, Iowa, and some of the flowers resulting from these crosses, especially from the second and third crosses of line breeding, are really wonderful. He is an amateur grower and his work is little known, but it seems to me that he is on the right track and that he is getting nearer to what is needed than any of us professionals.

There is also a distinct need of a striped type of large size and showing delicate shadings and combinations of pink and white. So far as I know, there is no commercial sort of this description, but such a one would be very useful. Eugene Scribe has very nearly the color I mean and is of good form, but is entirely too small. If we could get that color and form combined with the size of Princeps or Mrs. King, we would have a flower of great value.

Admonition to Growers.

In conclusion I wish to urge all who grow and sell gladiolus bulbs to stringently weed out and throw away the poor sorts. I know it takes nerve to pull up and throw away a third or a half of a fairly good mixture, but it is almost a crime to allow these trashy sorts of doubtful color and small size to creep in. Often they increase much faster than the better ones and cause disappointment to the buyer.

twenty-seven years will be steady and not too strenuous.

FREE SEEDS.

The government expenditures for the last three years on account of the congressional free seed distribution were as follows:

1908	288,000
1909	258,000

So now the government must tax the incorporated seedsmen one per cent of their net earnings.

DUTCH BULBS.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $18,500.

HONOR TO EDWARD L. COY.

At the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Niagara Falls, Ont., in June, special recognition was made of the work of Edward L. Coy, the veteran seed grower, now of Melrose, Mass., but for most of his active life a resident of New York state, in electing him an honorary member for life. The distinction is the more notable in that it has been conferred but once before, in 1907, in the case of Wm. Meggat, of Wethersfield, Conn., a former president of the association. An honorary member can only be elected on recommendation of the president, backed up by the unanimous vote of the members present, this amendment to the by-laws having been adopted in 1907 to permit the election of Mr. Meggat. Ex-President S. F. Willard, of Wethersfield, Conn., spoke of Mr. Coy's long and honorable record in the seed growing business and the fact that he has now retired from active work, and President Woodruff at once recommended his election to honorary membership.

This well deserved recognition for one who has served so long and successfully as a seed grower makes it particularly appropriate that some of the facts in his active career should be recalled at this time.

Edward L. Coy was born April 4, 1831, at Bernardston, Mass. His ancestors were among those who came from England in the early Colonial days, and his grandfather on both sides, each with two brothers, fought through the Revolutionary war. When 16 years old he moved to Washington county, N. Y., and about a year later began growing seeds for R. N. Rice, of Cambridge, N. Y. At first in a small way, then on an increasingly larger scale, for some of the biggest seed houses of New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere, he diligently kept at the business of seed growing through all these years, until now at 78 he has rounded out sixty years in the business.

In his early manhood Mr. Coy wrote a great deal for the agricultural press, and during that period delivered many addresses before county and state agricultural societies. It was at this time that Horace Greeley, who had become interested in his contributions to the press, using many of them in the New York Tribune, urged him to take the editorship of the agricultural department of his paper. Mr. Coy has sometimes thought that possibly his declination was the great mistake of his life.

In 1875 he was elected president of the Washington County Agricultural Society and in 1881 and 1882 was reelected. For eighteen years he was on the board of directors of this organization and was four times president of the Hebron Agricultural Society. In 1903 he was selected by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to make a full and complete test of nearly 250 varieties of cucumbers, with the idea of establishing a type of each; also to learn how many of the named varieties were synonyms. No one better qualified for the task could have been selected, for he was for many years possibly the largest grower of cucumber seed in the world. He has stated that his largest crop, harvested in 1902, was over thirty-five tons. But it will be as a breeder, or originator, of potatoes that he will be most generally remembered in years to come by the horticultural world. The number of varieties he originated counts up to nearly a score, each of which, in its day in some section of the country, has been a standard market variety. The following are a few of his well known varieties: Beauty of Hebron, White Elephant, Late Rose, Burpee's Empire State, Henderson's Early Puritan, The Thorburn, White Late Rose.

September 21, 1858, Mr. Coy married Miss Clara B. Cary, of Hebron, N. Y. There are three children living, C. Herbert Coy, of Valley, Neb., who is also well known in the seed growing business; Dr. S. Willard Coy, of Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Ida B. Sievwright, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

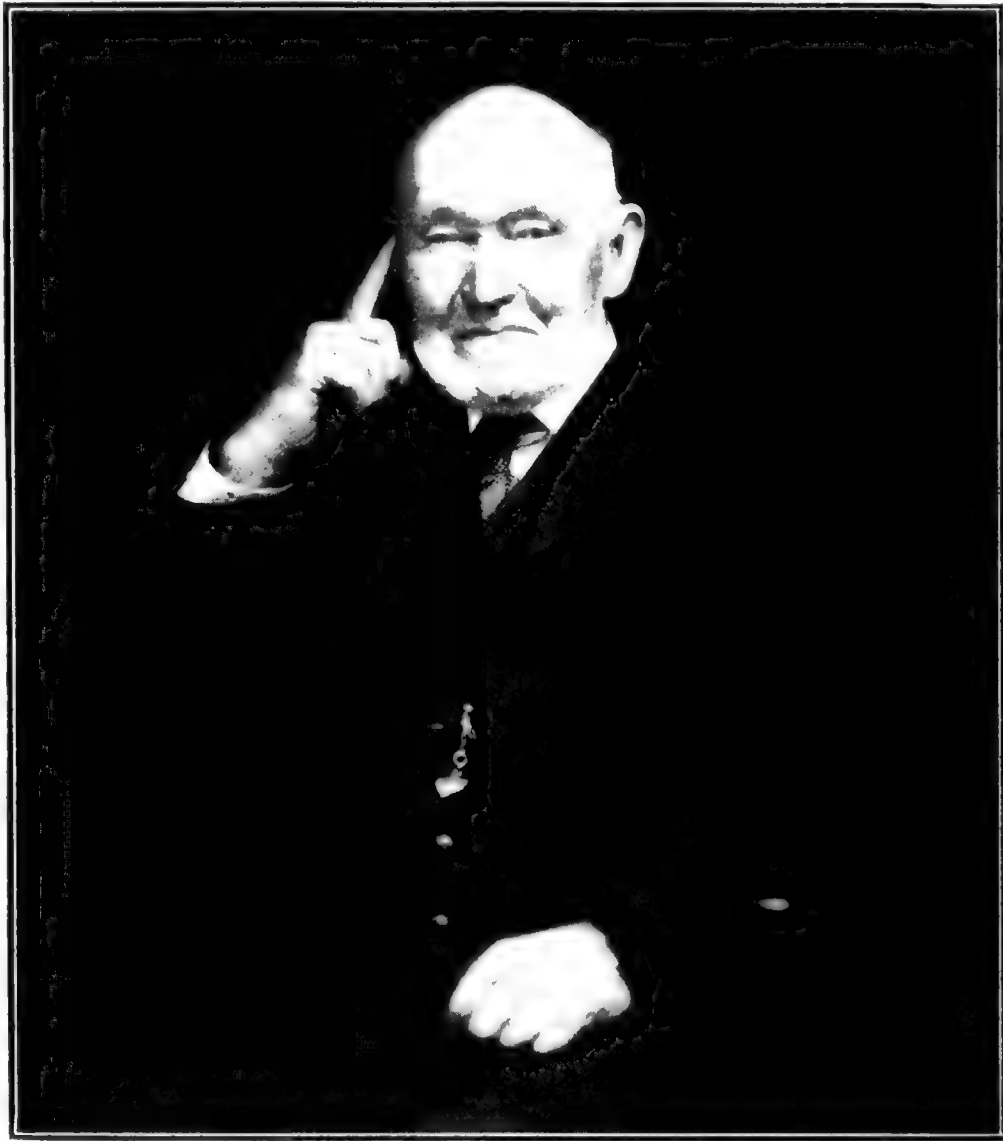

GLADIOLI.

[A paper by Henry Field, of Shenandoah, Ia., read before the Iowa Florists' Society at Des Moines, September 1, 1909.]

I have often thought that if I were confined to one single variety of flowers I would choose the gladiolus. There is no flower with so wide a range of color, none more easy to grow, and none that will keep so well as a cut flower under ordinary house conditions.

Roses are all right, and I love them, but for the ordinary gardener they are so hard to grow that they are a disappointment. The same is true of lilies. But the gladiolus will grow and bloom for anyone. It will grow in any soil and in any climate.

Speaking as a dealer, it is more of a pleasure to me to sell gladiolus bulbs than any other bulb or plant. The cus-

WEATHER AND CROPS.

According to a Bradstreet report issued August 30, the continuance of dry, hot weather in the southwest has led to a revision of earlier estimates of a bumper corn crop, and it is now conceded by many that the increased area planted has been offset by drought. Fall plowing is also retarded by the dry weather. Reports of damage to corn come from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri. In fact, the states west of the Mississippi promise little more than a year ago, and the best reports come from the states of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Losses from early promise of ten to fifty per cent west of the Mississippi are indicated, but the increased area planted will probably result in a total yield larger than last year, though a bumper yield is out of the question. Oklahoma estimates are for a yield of only 90,000,000 bushels, as against 130,000,000 bushels last year, whereas a yield of 200,000,000 bushels had been looked for. The South Platte section of Nebraska reports damage of twenty-five per cent, and Texas reports a fifty per cent crop likely. Corn in the northwest promises well, but the crop in the east, while better than earlier, is not equal to last year. The sweet corn pack in Indiana and in Maryland and Delaware is a short one. The potato crop in Aroostook county, Me., is promising. The tomato pack in eastern Maryland and Delaware is short of last year. A large western tobacco crop of good quality is predicted. Fruit yields in the Pacific northwest are smaller than last year.

Spring wheat harvesting has ended in the northwest. The yield for the three states is placed at 220,000,000 bushels, against 175,000,000 bushels a year ago. Oats harvesting is well along in the west and promises a close to record yield.

Lower temperatures and local rains have helped cotton in Texas, but the feeling is that the crop in that state has been badly hurt. Little improvement is shown in the lower Mississippi valley. Reports from the eastern half of the belt are quite favorable.

STREAK IN SWEET PEAS.

Referring to the so-called streak disease in sweet peas, that is giving so much trouble in Great Britain this year, H. G. Collyer, a well known English gardener, says: "My first acquaintance with streak was in 1905, when it appeared in the variety Black Knight, and spread through the whole row of some ten varieties in about a fortnight. The other rows in the same garden did not show the disease; the soil there was a light loam, with two others to what seemed healthy growth, but it has gone right through this variety, which is entirely spoilt, and several others are almost as bad. The soil here is a fairly stiff loam, on pure yellow clay some eighteen inches down. In this year's 'Sweet Pea Annual,' G. Massee gives it as his opinion that the disease is of a physiological nature, a common feature of the disease being the absence of nodules on the roots. This he considers is due to the nitrogen-fixing bacteria being rendered inert, or doing work detrimental to the pea plant, owing to the excess of nitrogenous manure used. I have noticed the absence of nodules on the roots of the diseased plants myself, but this year I planted two varieties, St. George and Henry Eckford, by themselves, where they are partially shaded by some large oak trees; as far as I can remember neither sweet peas nor the culinary sorts have been grown on this piece of ground for the past sixteen years, and the ground is poor and hungry owing to the roots of the oak trees, and yet the disease has appeared here, as well as in the better-cultivated parts of the garden. "I hope the National Sweet Pea Society, which, I know, fully recognizes the danger of the disease, will deal with the matter immediately, while the disease is still in its infancy, otherwise I feel sure it will soon become a serious scourge, as it spreads so rapidly."

The Market.

The wholesale market did not improve last week, for the extremely hot weather made things dull for the retail merchants. But August 30, the beginning of the current week, brought cooler conditions, which we all hope will remain, as cooler weather will put more life in us all and the market is bound to improve in both wholesale and retail trade. Next week the opening of the schools should help greatly, for most of the summer vacationists must return home.

Stock at the wholesale houses is comparatively scarce in the best grades. Roses are coming in somewhat better, but there still is little fancy stock. As to carnations, the same may be said. Asters were more plentiful last week, but it was not local stock. There is plenty of good valley, tuberosa stalks and a few glads. Last week the market was long on greens.

Various Notes.

The new residence of C. C. Sanders, on the Henly road, which was erected on the site of the one burned a few months ago, is completed and is occupied by the family.

Frank Fillmore is busy putting the finishing touches on a new house. This, with a number of alterations, will put him in good shape for the coming season.

The Missouri State Fair will open at Sedalia October 2. The prizes for horticulture and floriculture amount to $865 in cash.

Ludwig Zimmer arrived home from his trip to Germany August 29. Mr. Zimmer is the first of the local florists who are spending their vacations in Europe to come home.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is calling on the local trade this week.

August 25 marked the fiftieth anniversary of the gift of Henry Shaw to the city of what is now known as the Missouri Botanical Garden.

Philip Giebel, who has charge of Compton Hill park, has a great pond of the finest water lilies in bloom, which attracts crowds daily.

The Brix Floral Co. received incorporation papers from the secretary of state last week. The company succeeds A. Brix. The corporation was formed by A. Brix, Augusta Brix, his wife, and Adolphena, his daughter.

The Woodbine Floral Co., of Kirkwood, has built four new houses 25x100. Carnations, violets and sweet peas will be grown. The proprietors are Carney & Roe. Their output will be handled by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

C. Young & Sons Co. is making an attractive plant display in the new large show windows. President Young is again at his desk and everything is in readiness for the opening of the season.

Sunday, September 5, the Missouri Botanical Garden will have the second opening to the public of the year. These Sunday openings always attract a large number of visitors and a record breaking attendance is looked for should the day be fine.

Robert Thompson is building a show house at the new store of the Mullanphy Floral Co., on Grand avenue. He recently finished the show house for the Bentzen Floral Co. Mr. Thompson is also making a plan for a show house and store for Max Herzog, who will open an establishment on South Jefferson avenue after the first of the year.

F. E. Rawlings, secretary of the Plant Seed Co., met a sudden death by drowning last week.

Park Commissioner Scanlan has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in the loss of his wife, a bride of only a year, who died August 25. Mrs. Scanlan's death followed the birth of a daughter August 23. The child died shortly after birth. The funeral took place August 28. Many floral offerings were sent and many of our local trade were in attendance.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will take place September 9, on the grounds of the H. J. Weber Nursery Co., at Nursery, St. Louis county. The members will be entertained by Frank Weber. A large attendance is looked for by both President Young and President-elect Windler.

J. J. B.

The business of A. Brix has been incorporated, under the name of the A. Brix Floral Co. The capital stock is $15,000, fully paid, and divided as follows: Adolph Brix and Augusta Brix, 745 shares each; Adolphena Biery, 10 shares.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Max Herzog has bought a lot 60x125 at the southeast corner of Sidney and California avenue. He will at once build a seven-room residence and greenhouse.

HILLSBORO, ORE.—W. H. Morton, proprietor of the Hillsboro Plant & Flower Gardens, has had an excellent year and has ordered the material for another house 30x100, to be put up in the best manner possible.

GRAPES WITH CUCUMBERS.

I have a Black Hamburg grape vine in a 35-foot house where I grow cucumbers and tomatoes. It has been growing steadily for two years. It is near the end of the house and four vines grow to the other end. What method should I follow to have it produce grapes? When should it be pruned?

P.

You cannot expect grapes to fruit if constantly kept growing in a cucumber house temperature. If you want grapes you must cut out growing cucumbers, or vice versa. Black Hamburg and all other greenhouse grapes must have a season of rest, when a low temperature can be afforded them. This resting period should last for three months, during which time the plants will lose their foliage. Pruning can be done from November to February, when the vines are perfectly dormant.

Grapes enjoy a high temperature from the time the branches are in bloom until the coloring of the berries starts, when it can be gradually reduced. A gradual increase of temperature should be given from the starting of the dormant canes to the flowering stage. You will readily see that these conditions will not suit cucumbers, which require a high temperature and constantly humid atmosphere.

SCARLET GLOBE RADISH.

The favorite radish for the eastern states at least is the Scarlet Globe—the little cherry-like red kind, grown by the millions everywhere—tender, sweet and crisp at the proper stage, but a puff of insipid pith if allowed to stand a few days too long. They may be grown, inside or out, under proper conditions, to edible size in four or five weeks' time. Expert growers turn out these little radishes every week in the year, using a compact growing strain, known as Scarlet Globe Short-top Forcing, for winter culture under glass. Three crops may usually be grown in the same soil in the greenhouse during the cold season, but lettuce is often worked in at the last rotation to avoid the radish diseases that are encouraged by repeated cropping without change of soil. Outside, successive sowings are made every week or two, as the edible life of these dainty radishes is short in hot summer weather. Light, rich soil and frequent stirring are the requisites of commercial radish culture. The best seeds come from abroad, says W. Van Fleet in the Rural New Yorker, as American growers do not appear to have patience to transplant the tubers, making rigid selection of those true to type and discarding the inferior ones. Radish seed, where culling is not rigidly carried out, is practically worthless for commercial purposes. The cultivated radishes are all supposed to have descended from an Asiatic mustard-like plant, similar to charlock, which can be induced to produce an edible root in a few generations of selection.

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing Cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. 1/2 oz., 35c; oz., 6c; 4 oz., $1.75; lb., $6.00.

CURE FOR WHITE ANTS.

In the REVIEW of August 19, page 110, under the head of "Cure for White Ants," I gave instructions for the use of carbon oil as a remedy. One of the directions, however, was incomplete and misleading. The sentence which begins thus, "Soak the soil," should read, "Soak the soil under the bench." To this may be added that boiling water should suffice to penetrate the runs, while the carbon oil used to impregnate the top layer of fibrous soil will deter or repel any further invasions into that layer of soil.

THEO. F. BECKERT.

NAME OF PLANT.

Please give us the botanical name of the enclosed flower and also state how to propagate it. We think it belongs to the trumpet vine family.

C. W. K.

The plant is Bignonia radicans, an excellent hardy climber. Propagation may be effected by layering the shoots. The roots, if cut in pieces and kept moist and warm, will also give new stock. Cuttings taken with three eyes, kept in a warm propagating house and carefully watered, will also root. Probably your easiest method of propagation will be by root cuttings.

In reply to your inquiry regarding a firm which handles blue edging tiles, I can refer you to Messrs. Wood & Sons, Ltd., Wood Green, London, N., England, who supply everything required by florists.

As superintendent of a large London cemetery—the Hammersmith cemetery—I use many thousands of these tiles during the course of a year, for the purpose of edging all or nearly all common graves, and I believe we are about the only cemetery authorities who use them. A TEXAS QUERY.

I want to know about Grape Jeesum. It is a most beautiful plant, I think a native of California. I don't know how to get it; also fish tail fern, enclosing specimen. B. F.

Do you not mean the cape jasmine, Gardenia florida? This grows luxuriantly in some parts of your state, Alvin being a notable center for its culture on a commercial scale. This plant should thrive outdoors with you and you should be able to procure abundant stock from growers around Alvin.

The sample frond of fern is from Nephrolepis davallioides furcans, which makes a good house plant treated in precisely the same way as the Boston, Pier-soni, Whitmani and other varieties. C. W.

TACOMA, WASH.—J. Benthien has taken out a permit for the erection of a greenhouse, 16x50 feet, at the Tacoma cemetery, at a cost of about $1,000.

BEVERLY, N. J.—Wm. H. Hill says that trade here in the early part of the season was good, but the long drought has nearly destroyed all the summer crops.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y., Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

The Wadley Nurseries have been incorporated at Bound Brook, N. J., with a capital of $20,000. The incorporators are William J. Reid, E. Elinger and others.

C. S. HARRISON, of York, Neb., already known as the author of treatises on the phlox, the peony, etc., has now prepared "The Iris Manual." The publishers are C. S. Harrison & S. H. King.

ROTTING OF PLUMS.

We have a plum tree on which the fruit all dry-rots just before it is ripe. The tree is loaded with blossoms in the spring and the fruit hangs on until almost ripe. Then it dry-rots and drops off. There is a spot on the fruit as if it were stung by an insect, but there are never any insects seen on the tree. It is an old-time blue plum, but no one seems to know the name of it. Can you give us a remedy for the trouble?

H. O. B.

The rotting spoken of is due to a fungus and is quite common. Some varieties are more susceptible to its attacks than others. Old varieties, like Lombard, Moore's Arctic and Bradshaw, seem to be affected the most.

The best remedy is spraying the trees with Bordeaux mixture just before the flowers open, again after they have fallen, and later when the fruit is about one-fourth grown. The Bordeaux mixture should be somewhat weaker than if used for pears or apples. It pays to thin out the fruit where trees crop heavily, as the rot spreads rapidly where the fruit is crowded.

The stinging referred to is no doubt caused by the plum curculio. A remedy for this is jarring the trees and laying sheets below to catch the pests. If you keep poultry, let them run about your trees and you will keep the last named pest in check.

W. N. C.

THE CHAMPION PEACH.

W. A. Taylor says that among the hardy peaches introduced during the last twenty years, perhaps none has more steadily advanced in the estimation of growers in the peach districts of the middle western states than the Champion. This variety was originated from seed of Oldmixon Free (supposedly crossed with Early York), by I. G. Hubbard, Nokomis, Ill., now of San Marcos, Tex., in 1880. It was first budded for his own planting about 1882, and was introduced by him and the Dayton Star Nurseries in 1890. While rather subject to fungous injury of the fruit in wet seasons, its blossom buds, under ordinary conditions, endure such low temperatures without injury that it has become recognized as possessing special merit for portions of Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, and other sections where somewhat similar winter conditions prevail. On the grounds of the originator in Illinois it has borne a fair crop of fruit after experiencing a winter temperature of 18 degrees below zero.

Important to Catalogue Men

By reason of the recent purchase of the catalogue business and entire plant stock of Heller Bros., New Castle, Indiana, and owing to our increased operations at West Grove, Pennsylvania, and Charlotte, North Carolina, we have come into possession of a number of magnificent new Roses and other new plants of sterling merit, which we will offer to our own trade in 1910, and which would make splendid features for any one issuing a catalogue. We will furnish full particulars and favorable contract terms on application to any one interested.

In the early years of its dissemination it was somewhat confused with an early, semicling, serrate-glanded variety originated by Eugene Gibson, of New Richmond, Mich., which was locally introduced by him in western Michigan and northern Ohio under the name Champion, about 1887 or 1888. That variety was subject to mildew of the foliage and its fruit was of little value, but, having been rather largely propagated and disseminated, it caused much disappointment among growers who fruited it, thus oper-

PEONIES

Not a long list but a good one—and the best of it is, the stock is pure and unmixed; we bloomed these Peonies, "rogued" them and then checked them plant by plant.

(And to you, Sirs, "Many thanks!" Good stuff says.)

An Appreciated Letter

"New York, October 7, 1908—The box of Peonies and Phloxes came promptly and reached me in good condition. Your Peony divisions were generous in size and really refreshing to one after receiving the small, meager specimens that we have lately had from some of the 'Peony Specialists.' Many thanks."

PACIFIC COAST.

HARDY SUMMER FLOWERS.

Will you kindly publish a list of hardy stock that will fill the places of dahlias, cannas and other similar soft stock? We had a light frost last week and lost all of the tender stock. We always have a July or August frost in this part of Washington state, and want a list of plants for general lawn work and also for cut flowers, that will live through the light frosts. R. G.

It is a deplorable condition when frosts interfere with general garden work in the month of July. If dahlias and cannas are nipped, heliotropes, geraniums, salvias, achyranthes, coleus, alternantheras and all such stock will be spoiled at the same time. This curtails the available, suitable material somewhat, especially such stock as is distinctively used for cut flowers.

Asters should receive considerable attention, with chrysanthemums to follow. Both of these are distinctively late summer and fall bloomers and will stand quite a degree of cold. Use hydrangeas for suitable areas, Golden Glow and perennial phlox when plenty of color is wanted. Stocks and candytuft are both showy and valuable for cut flowers and can be kept in bloom well into the winter. Carnations and roses are too well known to require much description, but there are many varieties of these that are extra good for late blooming. I have not spoken of bulbs, as these are so well understood that no mistakes can be made with them. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business showed a slight advancement last week, which was a move in the right direction. Most of the townspeople have returned from the country and the schools have resumed active operation. Many of the carnation growers are in the midst of changing their houses and this fact has had the effect of lowering the supply quite a little. The prices have stiffened, and were it not for the oversupply of asters at the present time, there would be higher quotations all around.

Roses, owing to the warm weather, are not up to color or stem and there is a good demand for Beauties, with but few offered. Amaryllis are plentiful and cheap, and the same can be said of Japanese lilies. Gladioli and dahlias are moving better than at any time this sea-

The Market.

From general appearances and reports, the summer's business has been above the average. Choice stock has not been in oversupply and has always brought top prices; poor stock has been more or less sacrificed.

Roses are now of good quality and move well. My Maryland and Princess Marie Metschersky bid fair to be the leading pink roses. Killarney so far has been a failure on the Pacific coast, being more subject to mildew. Carnations are scarce. The new stock is coming in slowly, but the flowers are rather short-stemmed for commercial use. Asters are a drug and only the choicest varieties can be moved. Gladioli are plentiful and are effective for sprays. Golden Glow mums are to be had in small quantities and realize top prices. Rubrums

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

We had last week some extraordinarily warm weather, a real hot wave passing over New Orleans. It came just after a long spell of rain and it did not affect the chrysanthemums, which are generally as good as can be expected, for the season. Everyone is busy taking the best bud he can find on his Robinson mums.

There was no meeting of the florists during August, the society being quite disbanded by a general attendance at the S. A. F. convention. New Orleans was fairly well represented at Cincinnati, even in the exhibition. Charles Eble showed Phoenix Roebelenii grown from seeds.

J. A. Shalk, who with good reason calls himself "The Seed Expert," has added to his feed business a line of all kinds of vegetable and garden seeds, at 520 South Philip street. He has had many years of experience in the seed business and is certainly well qualified to succeed.

M. M. L.

IN MICHIGAN.

Conklin & Hudson, of Allegan, are erecting a boiler house and four greenhouses on Ely street, making six houses in all. Much of the material came from the old houses of Mr. Conklin, at Grandville. They have removed their floral store to 224 Trowbridge street.

E. M. Latta, of Battle Creek, has bought half an acre of ground at Plainwell and is erecting two greenhouses, 30x40 feet and 28x40 feet respectively. He will also open a retail store uptown.

C. W. Asman, florist of Port Huron, has bought land south of Lakeside park in that city, which is being graded preparatory to the erection of a fine greenhouse.

Harrison L. Carpenter, of Charlotte, is building a double greenhouse on the site of the Fuller greenhouse in that city, which was moved by Mr. Fuller to Battle Creek.

Louis Wasserman, of Muskegon, has bought the greenhouses owned by L. D. Squires at Whitehall, which will be removed to Muskegon for use by Mr. Wasserman in his business there.

George Bridson, of Fenton, is improving his greenhouse plant by the erection of a new boiler house and 50-foot stack, also sheds for coal storage.

The Roethke Floral Co., Bay City, now occupies its own building at 818 Jefferson avenue. The interior has been remodeled to suit the needs of a modern flower store and the establishment is now complete, including glass cooling rooms, where cut flowers are on display.

The interior of the A. M. York store, at Osceola and Third streets, Laurium, has been nicely decorated and is very attractive. Japanese decorations are used, also tall palms and ferns. Mrs. L. M. Nordquist is in charge of the Laurium branch, for the A. M. York estate.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The closing of August finds the trade generally in a hopeful condition, for, while there is not much more than the usual summer trade, the general business conditions are such as to make all feel that the coming season will be one of the best in years.

The wholesalers are getting in fine stocks of Beauties, roses, chrysanthemums, asters and gladioli. The asters are particularly good, and are cleaned up pretty well each day.

The retailers are just taking things easy. All are in excellent spirits, having returned from their vacations, and are just anxious to have things open up.

Various Notes.

Fred Kocher and family, of the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co., are at Niagara Falls.

Samuel McClements has been at the Thousand Islands and will return by way of New York and Philadelphia.

A. W. Smith, Jr., has just returned from Mountain Lake, where he has been spending a couple of months with his family. Hoo-Hoo.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

With the return of cooler weather, trade has improved somewhat. Good stock continues scarce. Asters are a partial failure, most of the stock coming in being of inferior quality and only fit for funeral work.

The first Golden Glow mums appeared last week on this market.

Weddings and funerals call for a good many flowers.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the State Florists' Association will be held Friday evening, September 3.

Holm & Olson are receiving some carnations, which sell readily.

May & Co. are cutting some good My Maryland roses.

PHOENIX ROXBOROUGHII

4 1/2-inch pots $7.50 per doz.

This is a most satisfactory plant.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

We have the largest and finest stock of this grand Christmas plant in America.

2 1/2-inch pots $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000
4-inch pots 30.00 per 100; 250.00 per 1000
5-inch pots $50.00 per 100
6-inch pots $7.50 and $9.00 per doz.

We also have a large stock of the Light Lonsdale Sport at same prices. This variety we consider far superior to the original type, it making a finer shaped plant as well as holding the flowers much better, while the color is a little lighter than that of the original Lorraine.

OTAHEITE ORANGES

Our stock is unusually fine this year. We can supply plants with from 4 to 25 fruit. When shipped prior to Oct. 1st, 15 cents per fruit in green state; when fully ripened 25 cents per fruit—for Christmas.

CYCLAMEN

Our stock at this time is better than we have ever had it and sure to be a money maker for anyone buying now. The prices at Christmas will be just double those quoted below.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business has been quiet for the last fortnight. Good flowers are extremely scarce just at present. Some good asters are to be seen, but the supply is limited. Roses are fairly good and are equal to the demand. Several of the growers are still cutting a few carnations; they are rather small, but are used up as fast as they are cut.

Various Notes.

The crowd that have returned from Cincinnati declare that they had a good time and they are full of praise for the Cincinnati boys.

Young carnation plants are looking fine and, judging from the looks of stock now, good blooms will be cut this winter and lots of them.

Jacob Schulz has a nice house of carnations and some good mums. He is also cutting some good asters.

William Walker is cutting quite a few roses and a few carnations from young stock.

Frank Gottwald has finished planting carnations and the plants look thrifty.

Adam Heitz has some good mums in 6-inch pots, and some nice carnations are to be seen here also.

Miss Mary Sheedy, with Jacob Schulz, has returned, after spending three weeks in Knoxville, Tenn.

Geo. E. Schulz has left for Knoxville and will be absent two or three weeks.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at Senning's park, September 7.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business during the month of August was satisfactory for that time of the year. There was a steady demand for funeral flowers, and there were few of the days that were so numerous in July, when there was absolutely "nothing doing."

Good flowers are scarce. A few fine asters have come in, but not half enough to go around. Roses, gladioli and carnations are slow in coming in. Quantities of dahlias are to be seen, some of the light colors making a substitute for asters. Some good Golden Glow mums are arriving, but there is no heavy demand for mums yet.

Various Notes.

A severe hail storm passed over the south part of the city last week, causing considerable loss to the florists and market gardeners in that vicinity. August Rieman probably suffered the most, the hail completely ruining all of his outdoor stuff and a greater part of his glass. John Heidenreich lost about 600 panes of glass. This is the second time the hail has visited these same florists this year. Last spring a more severe storm passed over this section, doing considerably more damage than this time.

Fred Stolti, of A. Wiegand & Sons, has returned from his vacation.

W. J. Hasselman, of the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., is putting up a fine new residence at Thirty-fourth street and Central avenue. A number of years ago Mr. Hasselman's house was burned to the ground and this one is to take the place of the former, only on a much finer scale.

S. S. Skidelsky paid us a visit last week. Mr. Skidelsky says the outlook is encouraging.

Henry Rothermel, son of Silas Rothermel, the Brightwood florist, was severely burned at the fire of the Tiona Refining Co. last week.

Alfred Pahud, who was injured by falling off a street car on his return from the convention, is getting along nicely and expects to be out in a few days.

H. L. W.

RALEIGH, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co. have completed another new house, and their range is now in the form of a complete block, containing 30,000 square feet of glass. By July 31 they had planted all the houses to roses, carnations and mums, except the section intended for palms, ferns, greens and general potting plants. They find, they say, that early housing of carnations is a decided advantage in the south.

COBURN'S SELECTED PANSY SEED.BEST MARKET STRAIN GROWN.

Our seed is saved from about 12,000 plants, carefully selected, when in bloom, from the 500,000 we grow for our spring sales.

Each plant is carefully selected, color, size, form and substance being taken into consideration, and the proportion of each color is properly balanced.

As a result of over 25 years' work along these lines, we feel justified in claiming to have the best strain of pansies on the market, and we invite trial and comparison.

Growing our stock in this manner, we have only a limited amount of seed to spare, and in order to distribute as widely as possible, we offer it in packets of 1,000 seeds. Price $1.00 per packet (only one to each customer).

I. E. COBURN, 291 Ferry St., Everett, Mass.

It is an absolute certainty and conceded by leading European growers, who have seen our pansies and theirs growing side by side in our gardens, that pansies grown from American seed will produce larger, earlier, finer blooms than foreign-grown seed of the same strain. We supply over 100 cities and towns in the west with blooming plants at a higher average price than any grower on the western continent. We sow and sell from the same bag. 1800 seeds, $1.00. Choice plants, same strain, $4.00 1000; 50c 100. Write for "Points on Pansies."

COAL SOOT AS FERTILIZER.

Will you kindly let me know if the soot from Pocahontas coal is of any value? R. W.

Soot is the volatilized, unconsumed portion of coal. Pocahontas coal, being one of the bituminous varieties, produces soot containing a large per cent of charcoal and salts of ammonia, a smaller per cent of salts of potash and soda, oxide of iron, silica, aluminum and sulphate of lime, and a very small per cent of carbonate of magnesia. As all these elements are essential to the upbuilding of plants, soot is therefore a good fertilizer.

Care, however, is required to apply it in the proportion necessary to the different classes of soil and also to the different kinds of crops, else great damage may occur. It must never be applied to plants in a state of rest. RIBES.

"6000 Lorraine Begonias, 2-inch stock, strong healthy plants, full of shoots, $10.00 per 100."

This is what happened:

FLORISTS' REVIEW, Chicago.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., August 31, 1909.

GENTLEMEN:—We enclose herewith our check for $12.00 in payment for the Lorraine Begonia advertisement. The results were excellent—every plant sold, and between 400 and 500 of our 3-inch and 4-inch stock also. This means that for the coming season we shall raise at least 10,000 more plants. Thanking you, we remain, Very truly yours, E. A. BUTLER & SON.

In the Review of August 5, Frey & Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., had a 6-line classified advertisement, as follows:

These were the little ads. One cost 60c, the other 40c; total cost to sell 20,000 plants, $1.00.

Field-grown carnations, first size, ready now, in any quantity. Enchantress, Rose-pink, Lady Bountiful, Queen Louise, Thos. W. Lawson, Victory, Beacon, Harlowarden, $5.00 per 100; White Enchantress, $7.00 per 100.
Frey & Frey, 1338 O St., Lincoln, Neb.

The response was so prompt, that for the issue of August 12 they changed it as follows:

Field-grown carnations, first size, ready now, in any quantity. Lady Bountiful, Queen Louise, Thos. W. Lawson, Harlowarden, $5.00 per 100.
Frey & Frey, 1338 O St., Lincoln, Neb.

Here is the result:

FLORISTS' REVIEW, Chicago.

LINCOLN, NEB., Aug. 21, 1909.

GENTLEMEN:—Please discontinue our advertisement in the Review; the first two insertions sold 20,000 plants.
Respectfully yours, FREY & FREY.

At $5.00 per 100, the lowest price quoted in the advertisement, Frey & Frey made sales of $1000.00 on advertisements that cost them $1.00.

If you, Mr. Grower, have seasonable stock to offer, a quick sale at small cost is to be found through an advertisement in the Review.

Greenhouse Heating.

If subscribers will state clearly the details of their heating problems, the REVIEW will give in this column the opinion of a man thoroughly familiar with the practical side of greenhouse heating.

HOW ABOUT COAL?

Is your coal bin full?

If it isn't, it ought to be filled without delay. The coal market has been in favor of the buyer all summer and as the trade becomes more and more forehanded each year, the sheds are being filled earlier and earlier, in order to take advantage of the low prices that usually are to be had during the dull season in the coal business. Fuel never is cheaper in autumn than it is in early summer. This year there has been little, if any, advance in prices as the summer has progressed, but there is already a better feeling in the coal trade as a result of some improvement in the demand. Those who haven't bought ought to do so at once, and fill the sheds.

Unfortunately, there still are some cut flower growers who pay too much attention to the fuel bill—who, by their efforts to keep down the consumption of coal, knock themselves out of a dollar for every dime they save on fuel. Rose growers especially suffer as a result of this false economy, losing far more through mildew than it would cost to keep the fires going all summer, so that steam could be turned into the pipes a little while every cool night.

HEAT FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 18x26 feet, four feet high to the plates and nine feet to the ridge. I am going to heat with hot water. I want to heat to 45 degrees now and later use it for a carnation house. How many feet of 2-inch pipe will I need to heat to 45 degrees, and how many for 50 degrees? It gets as cold as 20 degrees below zero here. I want to pipe under the benches, the water going down one side and back on the other.

G. W. B.

I would install eight lines of 2-inch pipe, letting them be divided four on OLD BOILER TUBES.

On page 69 of the issue dated August 26, 1909, under the head "Old Boiler Tubes," a party asks for information "as to how many 4-inch pipes we need to heat a house 26x118 in northern Illinois climate. We want to heat to 60 degrees at 10 degrees below zero."

The one answering this inquiry makes a statement which is very misleading when he says: "Heating experts do not recommend the use of 4-inch pipe in houses over 100 feet in length unless the boiler shed is at the middle of the house, so the runs of the pipe will be less than 100 feet long." In this connection I would say that the Lord & Burnham Co. often pipes greenhouses 200 feet long with 4-inch external diameter cast-iron pipe, and 2-inch wrought-iron pipe where the boiler is placed at the end of the house, and we find same to be satisfactory in every way.

It also is stated that "eight 4-inch pipes the length of the house should supply the desired temperature with a boiler temperature of 180 degrees and normal circulation." We find, on figuring this out, that it will require 1,490 lineal feet of 4-inch tubes to give the desired temperature, viz., 60 degrees at 10 degrees below zero. Since the house is running north and south, we would advise placing four lines under each of the two outside benches, two flows and two returns, and two lines under each center bench, together with about seventy feet at the south gable. If this amount of radiation is properly placed and the heating apparatus installed with suitable mains, with a boiler of ample capacity, the required temperature would be maintained without any trouble. A SICK SYSTEM.

My heating system has grown as I have added to my glass and is not uniform; I have to confess it does not work as well as I could wish, but it is not possible to change this season. Some of the feed pipes are downhill and some are uphill; they work, all right, but might do better if they were all on the same grade. I have raised the expansion tank considerably; it now is twelve feet above the boiler and connected both with the feed pipe and the return, for I like to keep the tank warm. Would a Kroeschell generator or a Castle circulator help me with my circulation?

J. L.

With so little data as to the conditions it is impossible to offer any more than general suggestions. Indeed, these built-onto systems that have been patched and tinkered year after year often are in such a state that one on the ground would find it difficult to prescribe any effective remedy short of a complete overhauling of the plant. It is quite likely that if the pipes can all be brought to one grade the system as a whole will work better than it does with them running up hill and down dale, like the scenic railway in an amusement park. is enough; cut off the connection with the flow and let it remain on the return if near the boiler.

The Kroeschell generator is an excellent addition to many systems and possibly if you write to them they will recommend it in your case; its effect is to make the water hotter in the pipes by adding pressure greater than that of the atmosphere. The Castle circulator is quite a different affair; it is a pump which, attached in the return near the boiler, will make the water move, but it

WHAT'S WORTH HAVING.

"What's worth having is worth going after," according to an old saying and a modern business house, for Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, wants business and believes that the way to get it is not to sit down and wait; quite on the other hand, they go after it. A steel boiler is not the handiest thing in the world for a traveler to carry as a sample, but each year Kroeschell's sends at least one boiler to the trade exhibition that is so large a part of the S. A. F. convention. This season, at Cincinnati, the company had two boilers, as shown in the accompanying illustration, showing their display—and one of the boilers was of the ponderous size capable of heating 36,000 square feet of glass, a duty that identical one will perform for W. J. Ritterskamp, Princeton, Ind.

SLOW CIRCULATION.

I have two small east and west violet houses, 14x50 and 10x50, connected with a concrete wall on the north side and thirty inches of glass in the south wall. I use a Wilks hot water heater. The heater is located in a pit at the east end of the houses. I have a separate 2-inch flow pipe in each house and thirteen 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch return pipes all told, five on the north wall, five on the south wall and three on posts between the houses.

The flow pipes are run from the boiler up to within a foot of the ridge and under the ridge to the west end of the houses, and there drop to the return pipes. The flow pipe in the 14-foot house supplies the five returns on the north wall and the three between the houses. The flow in the 10-foot house supplies the five returns on the south wall. The expansion tank is on the main return near the boiler and is about four feet above the highest point in the system. The flow pipes are about six inches higher at the west end of the house than they are at the east end, and the returns are about six inches lower at the east, or boiler end. I don't get the heat that I should. It keeps me hustling to keep the heat up on cold nights. Is the system installed correctly? Should the flow pipes still be on an incline after leaving the riser, as I now have them, or lower at the west end of the house? Have I pipes enough and will the boiler carry more? E. W. G.

Your system is installed correctly, but you may have to use a circulator to push the water around, as the friction in 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pipe is pretty great. G. T. E.

BOILER IN A DAMP SPOT.

I expect to erect two houses this season, one for roses and one for carnations, and later plan to double the length of the houses. I shall use a seventy-two horse-power, fire-box tubular boiler and heat with steam at low pressure. The boiler will be located at the east end of the greenhouses, not adjoining, but twenty feet away. There is about four inches fall to the hundred feet from east to west for a little over 400 feet. In digging out the boiler pit I am satisfied we shall come to water about seven feet from the surface and there is no point to drain it to. Is this not a case where I am compelled to pump out the water and insert a pan, the sides of which will come above the water line, and then on the inside of this put in the concrete work? The boiler has no dome; total height to top of brick-work, 105 inches; top of boiler, 93 inches; water line, 73 inches. I shall be glad if you will give me information as to how to properly set the boiler, carry the mains and returns (at what height and grade) in both houses. Should not most of the returns be under the benches in the rose house? At the same time, would it not be well to have two lines of 1 1/4-inch pipe overhead on either side of the main flow in each house, and for the carnation house should any returns be under the benches? I also have in mind using bent pipe on both main flows and returns to allow for expansion and contraction. Is this advisable? If not, tell me of something better. I expect to use King material for these houses and want everything perfect without any frills.

J. W.

In digging out your boiler-room, do not go to the expense of putting in a pan, but dig a well about six or eight feet square and about that deep; run a suction pipe from your power pump and use this water in your greenhouses.

The flow pipes are run from the boiler up to within a foot of the ridge and under the ridge to the west end of the houses, and there drop to the return pipes. The flow pipe in the 14 foot house supplies the five returns on the north wall and the three between the houses. The flow in the 10 foot house supplies the five returns on the south wall. The expansion tank is on the main return near the boiler and is about four feet above the highest point in the system. The flow pipes are about six inches higher at the west end of the house than they are at the east end, and the returns are about six inches lower at the east, or boiler end.
I don't get the heat that I should. It keeps me hustling to keep the heat up on cold nights. Is the system installed correctly? Should the flow pipes still be on an incline after leaving the riser, as I now have them, or lower at the west end of the house? Have I pipes enough and will the boiler carry more? E. W. G.

Your system is installed correctly, but you may have to use a circulator to push the water around, as the friction in 1 1/2 inch pipe is pretty great. G. T. F.

BOILER IN A DAMP SPOT.

I expect to erect two houses this se-son, one for roses and one for carnartions, and later plan to double the length of the houses. I shall use a seventy two horse power, fire box tubular boiler and heat with steam at low pressure. The boiler will be located at the east end of the greenhouses, not adjoining, but twenty feet away. There is about four inches fall to the hundred feet from east to west for a little over 100 feet. In digging out the boiler pit I am satisfied we shall come to water about seven feet from the surface and there is no point to drain it to.
Is this not a case where I am compelled to pump out the water and insert a pipe, the sides of which will come above the water line, and then on the inside of this put in the concrete work? The boiler has no dome; total height to top of brickwork, 105 inches; top of boiler, 93 inches; water line, 73 inches. I shall be glad if you will give me information as to how to properly set the boiler, carry the mains and returns, at what height and grade in both houses. Shouldn't most of the returns be under the benches in the rose house? At the same time, would it not be well to have two lines of 4-inch pipe overhead on either side of the main flow, one for house and main for the irrigation house, so that any returns under the benches? I also have in mind long feet pipe on both main flows and returns to allow for expansion and contraction. Is this possible? If not, let me hear something better. I expect to use King material for the house and main and everything possible for the returns.

digging out your boiler room, do it go to the expense of setting one in, but dig a well, do it six or eight feet square, and place it in the ground, and then pipe from your house to the pipe, so that water in your greenhouses.

Set the boiler about 8 feet below the place where the return enters the boiler.

room; that is, six feet between the return and water line. Give the boiler about a half-inch pitch toward the back. Run the main up to the roof of the boiler-house. Put in a concrete or brick trench across the space between the houses and boiler-room. Run the main in this and branch off with a tee for each house. Put the main on the grade of the house. Run the main across the end of the house, with tees where the pipes come. Put a 1½-inch pipe under the edge of each bench on either side and run four 1½-inch pipes on the outside walls. Put two pipes, one on each side of the gutter posts, to be used to melt the snow. Anchor the main end by driving into the ground pieces of pipe next to the large main. Run the pipes into a common return across the low end of the house. Put the main return pipe on the same pitch toward the boiler as the house pitches away from it. Put the same in a tile pipe to keep out water and earth. This brings the main and return about sixteen or seventeen inches apart in the boiler-room. Put on a tee where the return turns down to the boiler and have a siphon cock out of the top, with the valve down, so a man can reach it. This will let the air out of the system. Always open the valve when starting the boiler. By doing so you will have steam around in about five or ten minutes.

Do not use a bend to take the expansion, but offset the opening in the return pipe about six feet. That is, turn the corner of a bench and connect with the return six feet from the crossing points of the 1½-inch pipe and the return. The spring of the six feet of pipe will take the expansion. G. T. E.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Little can be said of the business conditions now prevailing here. Late asters are making their first appearance and are much improved over the earlier ones, which were small, owing to the continued drought. Gladioli are now on the market in abundance and are used principally for the store decorations. Wild flowers were used by some of the shops to add to the attractiveness of the stores.

Various Notes.

The interior of the Lenox Flower Shop has been completely remodeled and is now finished in white, with handsome woodwork, which makes the place very neat and attractive.

W. J. Palmer has returned from his trip, and seems to have gained a much needed rest.

W. C. Hewson will act as a judge, in connection with Mr. Vick, at the New York State Fair. Mr. Hewson has had the honor of acting in this capacity for a number of years.

Joe Streit, gardener for S. A. Anderson, returned last week from a tour in Germany. His home-coming was celebrated by the employees at the greenhouses.

The Wm. Scott Co. held its annual picnic last week. It was attended by the Corfu and Buffalo employees. The gathering met at the Corfu establishment. They numbered about thirty-five, including friends. Many sports were indulged in, followed by a spread under the maples at the farm.

Golden Glow mums made their first appearance last week. Although fine flowers, they do not seem to sell at this season of the year. They are admired greatly and remarks are passed about their earliness, but in every case asters, nearly as large, seem to oversell them.

August being the last half holiday month, all stores will now open evenings. The idea of early summer closing seemed to meet with approval and the custom will no doubt continue every year.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business the last week in August was more than would be expected. In fact, the whole month was a record breaker.

The supply of roses is not equal to the demand, except in the extremely short-stemmed flowers. There has been a steady demand for Easter lilies. Asters are becoming better in quality and have been just about equal to the demand. Smilax is scarce and none too good.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the club, which was to be held September 6, has been canceled, the date being Labor day.

Thos. Brown has invested some of last year's profits in an Oldsmobile touring car.

Chas. Hufford is back in the city, looking well, having spent the summer on his folks' farm in Ohio. Mr. Hufford will open his flower stand in a few weeks.

A little daughter is the latest arrival in the household of Ed. Beard.

Many fine asters are now coming in several times daily. Good stock is coming from Bloy's, Roegner's, Fry's and Stahelin's.

Robert Klagge is cutting some fine Golden Glow, which are selling nicely here.

Louis Rush recently acquired a chug-chug in the form of a 30-foot launch.

Recent visitors were E. J. Fancourt, George W. Strange and J. J. Karins, of Dreer's.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade is quiet, with the exception of funeral work, which is quite plentiful.

Asters are the flowers that are chiefly depended on just now. The late ones are now in full bloom. Some fine flowers of Vick's and Semple's varieties are to be seen; 35 cents per dozen, retail, is the general price. Roses retail at $1 and $1.50 per dozen. There are plenty of outdoor flowers, with gladioli to help out, besides candytuft and alyssum.

Carnations will be appearing soon. Most of the growers are housing their field plants now.

Various Notes.

The greenhouses owned by J. W. Bates and leased by Napoleon Lemay, on Hillman street, were badly damaged by fire early in the morning of August 26. The fire was discovered in the boiler room, and in less than an hour everything but the greenhouses was in ruins, while the plants in all three greenhouses were a total loss. The owner's loss will figure up around $1,200, covered by insurance of $1,600. Mr. Lemay, who had made several additions to the plant, estimates his loss at $500, with no insurance. The total area of glass is 20,000 square feet, of which about half is spoiled. Mr. Lemay gives it as his opinion that the fire started from the boiler, which was lighted to test it. He will rebuild at once.

E. Y. Peirce has nearly all his field carnations housed. The stock is looking fine.

Many interesting features are announced for the second annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, to be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, September 10 to 12. The New Bedford Horticultural Society will offer a special prize. W. F. Turner, of New Bedford, is president of the society, and Maurice Fuld, of Boston, is secretary. This has been a splendid season for dahlias, and the members anticipate a successful exhibit.

Early closing is still the rule here.

W. L.

UXBRIDGE, MASS.—A hail and wind storm, on the evening of August 20, did much damage to buildings, trees and crops in this vicinity. On the W. A. L. Bazeley estate the loss was especially heavy, according to reports received from Aaron Ellsworth, superintendent of the Bazeley farm, and from Thomas Houlihan, assistant gardener. The greenhouse glass was smashed and nothing was left standing in the garden except the shrubs and trees.

AT LEAST 5 INCHES OF GOOD SOIL

The same number of hands can handle twice the number of plants—Because you don't have to cover Sunlight Sash

The results under the Sunlight are so remarkable compared with single glass sash, that truck gardeners double their beds. The present company is 18 times as large as when it started 2 years ago, solely because the sash makes good. It helps you beat the other man to market.

Sunlight Sash do not have to be covered even in zero weather. Children can prop them open for airing. ¾ of your work is done away with.

Sun light comes through the glass raising the temperature of bed on coldest days to a good growing warmth. Little of the warmth leaves it at night because the dry air between the two layers of glass is the best non-conductor there is, better than mats or boards and cost less.

Sunlight Sash lets in all the light there is. You can get "lettuce heads that will fill a 4 qt. measure and as tender as you could possibly have them" — "young tomatoes when your neighbors' haven't bloomed yet" — plants 2 and 3 inches when in the next bed under the single glass sash, the plants are not through.

One truck gardener near Louisville tested single and double sash side by side. He now has 144 Double Glass Sash and couldn't be induced to go back to the old single glass sash. The Sunlight is too profitable.

Get early plants; get the big prices

Greenhouses for Any Place or Purpose

We like to design greenhouses to meet unusual conditions. You may want a greenhouse, but think your available location is not adapted to one. Let us look it over, and see if we can't give you a greenhouse that you will be proud of—one that will be satisfactory in every way. If your ideas are not practical, we'll frankly say so. We have been too long in the business not to be frank with our customers.

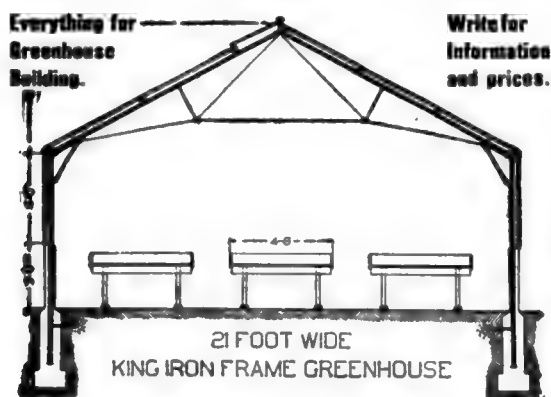

Let us hear from you—it costs nothing to find out.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE ADVERTISING HABIT.

Did you ever notice how quickly advertising becomes a habit with those who try it intelligently?

Retail florists have been slower than most merchants in adopting this most powerful of modern business building methods, but one by one they are being found by the newspaper men—and it is interesting to note how soon the new advertiser becomes the regular, steady user of the newspaper space.

A. Lange was the first retail florist in Chicago to make use of the costly space in the best daily. He began advertising in a small way at the time he moved from a basement on Monroe street to a high-priced store on Madison, and found it necessary to almost build his trade over again. So good were the early results of his publicity that he steadily increased his expenditure. Incidentally the newspaper was so well pleased with the way the account grew that it sent out thousands of letters to business men, drawing attention to what the florist was doing, and inclosing a statement showing how his monthly bills were increasing. This of itself was fine advertising for Lange.

Having acquired the advertising habit in that first season, Mr. Lange has kept it up ever since. His usual space is 100 lines agate, appearing Saturdays, with larger and more frequent advertisements at holidays or on special occasions. He omitted his advertisements in July and August, but began again the first Saturday in September with the advertisement reproduced on this page. Each piece of copy contains a direct offer, as of the dollar boxes, so that direct results are apparent, as well as the results shown only in the general growth of the business, which last spring required removal to a larger store a couple of doors away.

Every retail florist should do some advertising; he should get into the newspapers regularly; not spasmodically, but on a well thought out plan. Don't say: "I can't afford it." Advertising is like the bait you used when you went up north fishing this summer. You did not question the cost of the bait, nor the fact that the fish were there for the catching; all you had to do was to use the right bait, at the right time, and in the right way, and the results were certain. So it is with advertising.

Some advertisers divide up their expenditure so as to carry a small advertisement in every paper that asks for it. Not so A. Lange. He knows from experience that the better method is to lump his sums, pay the money to the leading paper, and get a good, strong advertisement that everybody will see and remember. In this Lange and F. H. Kramer, of Washington, D. C., agree perfectly. Mr. Kramer possibly spends more money for newspaper advertising than does any other retail florist in the United States. In a recent interview he said:

"While there are four 'best' newspapers in Washington, I use only one.

"Some people think it mighty hard to determine which medium is the one for them to use, after several clever solicitors, representing as many propositions, get through with them.

"I go further than the little piece each of these copy rushers speaks—right to the printed sheet itself.

"You can judge the size and character of a newspaper's circulation best by examining its columns.

"I pick the one paper reaching the most of the kind of people I want to do business with.

"No doubt there are some would-be patrons reading the other papers, but not in sufficient number to warrant the cost of advertising.

"Better a big, strong, attractive adv. in the best paper—the one that reaches the most of your kind of people—than a little, weak adv.—that you have to hunt for yourself—in all four 'best' papers.

"Anyway, in every town, and in every line, the one really best paper pretty well covers the field. You don't miss many buyers by concentrating your fire."

SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOWS.

The Rustic or Landscape Window.

The larger the city, the more the rustic or landscape window is appreciated.

get a good sized hollow log and lay it lengthwise in the window. Let it be open at the top like a trough, only let the opening be narrower. Fill it, like a basket, with dishes of the full-blown roses, so that the dishes shall remain unseen and the arrangement of the flowers shall resemble growing plants. The highest tribute that can be paid to floral work is that it resembles closely the growing habits of the plant in its natural state. In addition to filling the log, place a little group of the flowers at one end and slightly behind, so that the vase is out of sight. This will aid in carrying out a natural arrangement.

A Substitute for a Natural Log.

The next day a few good specimen ferns can be substituted for part or all of the roses. An accessory like this log can be used now and again for a short time in various ways, without becoming too old. If a really good, orthodox log cannot be conveniently found, make one of bark nailed on a frame of lath. A background of moss, autumn leaves or grass, according to season, would be an appropriate setting for this design.

Some time when you have tired of using all the baskets you have, get hold of a time-stained, but clean bushel basket, tip it on its side at some convenient angle, so that a dish or vase can be set in it securely, and fill it with roses or other flowers with long, limber stems, so that they can arrange themselves in a disordered, spilled-out way in and about the edge of the basket. A few loose, detached flowers must appear on a side and far out from the basket. If you ever laid claim to carelessness, get in a few touches here.

Stone Walls and Moss-covered Rocks.

Here is a simple and easily constructed design: Build a stone wall the entire length of the window, about one-third of the distance back from the front. Behind and along the wall set vases of Example of Advertisements That Win Business for a Chicago Retailer.

Give the daily passer-by a glimpse of the woods and he will long for your flowers. If at any time you have a surplus of the semi-double class of roses, like Killarney, Chatenay, Richmond, the ramblers or the older teas, long-stemmed flowers, such as roses, carnations or any other flowers that are long enough, with branches of any harmonious outdoor foliage, some in an upright position and others falling forward over the top of the wall. Relieve the harshness of the stones with trailing vines and patches of moss.

A large, lichen-covered rock, half buried in moss to represent soil, with a generous clump of ferns combined with some seasonable, brilliantly colored flower, is easily gotten up. Let the flowers and the ferns appear to group close under the edge of the rock on the upper side, and some fall over it. More lichens, moss and leaves would be the best setting.

Inadequate Window Space.

Not all of even the best plans for window decorations can be adapted to ill shaped and badly proportioned windows. If you have such, or two small windows with an entrance between, instead of one large window with one or more side entrances, and it cannot be remedied, choose designs for window display with the least number of details and use a mirror to enlarge the space where it is most needed. Make each window display distinctive, both in placed well to the front. Too shallow a window is most easily remedied. Place an extra table or shelf at the back, of the same height as the window floor, and you are fixed.

In any case do not try to fill the window merely, but fill the eye with one striking picture. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

THE BENTZEN STORE.

The accompanying illustration is from a kodak photograph of the new store of the Bentzen Floral Co., at 3118 North Grand avenue, St. Louis, which is one of the attractions of that part of the city. The front is thirty feet wide and the room is fifty-four feet deep, with a conservatory in the rear that will be a most important adjunct at holiday time, when large numbers of plants must be handled.

THE FIREMAN'S HELMET.

It is a frequent occurrence for the florist, especially the one whose trade is of the general character, to be called on to make up special designs of a character which appeals only to his commercial sense. When such a piece is asked for, as the result of the money-collecting of a committee of a dead man's friends, it usually is the case that no amount of talk will accomplish more than to lose the order. Consequently, the thing to do is to take the money.

Time after time it is noted that where most of the designs are of the conventional order, the one that is least calculated to meet with artistic approval is the one that makes the biggest hit, if such a term may be used with anything connected with a funeral. This was the case with George E. Valker, at Minot, N. D., when he was called on to make a helmet in flowers for the funeral of a fire fighter; there were many good designs at the service, but nothing short of the helmet would do for this order and its purchasers were justified from their point of view, because the piece created something of a sensation. It was five feet long, made on a special frame, and in it Mr. Valker used over 1,100 carnations. The helmet itself was of one solid tiums, as a means of displaying either the plants or the cut flowers for sale.

A Moonlight Scene.

For an elaborate window, especially devised for a night display or an exhibition scene, this has been found to be attractive and practical: It is a moonlight scene. Fill a good sized crescent solid with yellow or white flowers, outlined with tiny, opaque electric globes. Suspend the crescent at a convenient height in the window. In the same way fill and illuminate several small stars and distribute them about the sky as space permits. Drape a little, fleecy bit of chiffon over one corner of the moon with fine wire, so that it keeps out of the way of the light globes. This is for a cloud, and its adjustment completes the upper window. The lower part may consist of a field of flowers, arranged as naturally as your artistic ability will permit.

An Automobile or Chariot.

Perhaps you have an automobile or chariot basket, the cost of which demands that you get considerable service from it. Fill the body of the basket with short vases and fill the vases with any kind of medium or short-stemmed flowers which it is desired to bring to the front. Hitch some doves to the vehicle with narrow white ribbon, and place one upon the driver's seat, with the reins under one claw. Let the reins terminate there or trail along at one side of the auto or chariot. Have a gravel road for the course and lay out the landscape with low plants along the front of the window, and higher ones, with long-stemmed flowers interspersed, behind the auto and in the back of the window. The auto may be loaded with plants, instead of flowers, if it is desired to exhibit them especially.

flowers and plants used and also in the plan of arrangement. If one is quite elaborate, make the other correspondingly simple and offhand.

If the street front is too short, in the special design class, a design that does not extend to the extreme corners should be used; if in the landscape or water window class, a design that does extend to the very farthest point should be carried out. A window that is too high above the ground is the most trying of all for a variety of displays, and will call for more of the special design class,

WHAT CLIMATE DOES.

Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann is well known in the trade. Formerly located at St. Paul, he had one of the largest collections of orchids in the west, importing large quantities of freshly collected plants and selling both plants and cut blooms in the trade. Since his removal to Pasadena, Cal., where he became vice-president of a realty corporation, he has lost none of his interest in floriculture, but has turned his energies in a somewhat different direction. Dr. Schiffmann sends the two photographs reproduced herewith and the following comment:

"I send a couple of views, taken on my grounds here at Pasadena, that may prove of interest to florists not acquainted with the ready manner in which the bedding plants most largely sold in the east adapt themselves to the congenial conditions in this climate. The larger illustration shows three beds of geraniums. To the right is the single General Grant. In the center, back of the little girl, is the variety Mrs. E. G. Hill, with Sycamore on the left. The plants are two years old and have attained a height of over four and one-half feet.

"The smaller illustration shows the same beds of geraniums in the distance, at the left, and in the right foreground are the cannas, Tarrytown, eight to ten feet high in the center, edged with Florence Vaughan and bordered with gazania and echeveria. The cannas have stood in the same ground two years."

BEST HARDY LILIES.

Will you give me the names of the best hardy lilies to plant for a succession of flowers to be used mostly in funeral work?
J. A. F.

A few of the best hardy lilies to be used for the purposes named are: L. candidum, Madonna lily, color pure white, flowers in late June or early July; L. auratum, golden rayed lily of Japan, color white with central golden band and numerous spots of purple or crimson; L. speciosum album, color pure white, flowers during August and September; L. speciosum Melpomene, white suffused darkest crimson; L. Batmanniae, color apricot, blooms in July and August; L. tenuifolium, coral lily, fiery scarlet, a dwarf, slender variety, but pretty in any design work calling for this color; L. elegans Prince of Orange, color apricot, blooms in June; L. longiflorum, Japanese bulbs only, will flower in July and August.

L. candidum should be planted as soon as possible, as it makes leaf growth in the early fall. Plant this variety four inches deep, L. tenuifolium six inches and all others nine inches deep for best results. Do not let any manure come in direct contact with the bulbs. Lay sand below and over the bulbs. Protect in winter and leave a mulch over them during the summer to keep the roots cool and moist. The lilies named will flower in this order: Elegans, candidum, tenuifolium, Batmanniae, longiflorum, auratum, speciosum. L. tigrinum is a cheap and easily grown lily, but the color is unsuitable for design work.

W. N. C.

LOWELL, MASS.—John McMenimon, a dealer in real estate who has had an office in the Weir building for some time, has purchased the greenhouses of Chas. L. Marshall, on Stevens street, and is getting ready to install a modern heating plant. He intends to cultivate carnations and violets for market.

A few of the best hardy lilies to be used for the purposes named are: L. candidum, Madonna lily, color pure white, flowers in late June or early July; L. auratum, golden rayed lily of Japan, color white with central golden band and numerous spots of purple or crimson; L. speciosum album, color pure white, flowers during August and September; L. speciosum Melpomene, white suffused darkest crimson; L. Batmanniae, color apricot, blooms in July and August; L. tenuifolium, coral lily, fiery scarlet, a dwarf, slender variety, but pretty in any design work calling for this color; L. elegans Prince of Orange, color apricot, blooms in June; L. longiflorum, Japanese bulbs only, will flower in July and August.

L. candidum should be planted as soon as possible, as it makes leaf growth in the early fall. Plant this variety four inches deep. L. tenuifolium six inches and all others nine inches deep for best results. Do not let any manure come in direct contact with the bulbs. Lay sand below and over the bulbs. Protect in winter and leave a mulch over them during the summer to keep the roots cool and moist. The lilies named will flower in this order: Elegans, candidum, tenuifolium, Batmanniae, longiflorum, auratum, speciosum. L. tigrinum is a cheap and easily grown lily, but the color is unsuitable for design work. LOWELL, MASS.—John McMenimon, a dealer in real estate who has had an office in the Weir building for some time, has purchased the greenhouses of Chas. L. Marshall, on Stevens street, and is getting ready to install a modern heating plant. He intends to cultivate carnations and violets for market.

ROSES UNDER RIBBED GLASS.

The greenhouses at Salem, O., in which J. E. Bonsall grows Kaiserin roses, are of more than ordinary interest, because they are glazed with ribbed glass and have no artificial heat. In these houses each summer he cuts a fine and continuous crop, getting strong growth and stems up to twenty-four to thirty inches long.

LIFTING FORCING ROSES.

Could roses that were grown on the ground last season be moved onto benches, or would the severe root pruning they would get kill them? The varieties are Bride and Richmond, grafted. G. T.

Roses lifted from the field at this season rarely pay for the labor and are certainly a big risk. Better purchase strong young stock and plant as soon as possible. With good treatment, these can be made to produce fair crops during winter and spring. RIBES.

BLOOD AND BONE.

Kindly inform us if blood and bone spread over the rose, carnation and chrysanthemum benches at regular periods will benefit the plants as much as liquid manure. Any information you can give us in the use of commercial fertilizers for greenhouse plants will be appreciated. We have a book on this subject by Edward Voorhees, but have had no experience with fertilizer. F. & M.

The use of bone meal as a fertilizer, when properly applied, is decidedly beneficial to roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. The safest way to use it is to mix it in the mulch in the proportion of one 4-inch potful to each bushel of mulch.

Blood, being an exceedingly rich fertilizer, requires great care in its use. The best way to use blood is in the dried state, diluted with twenty times its bulk of good loam. This mixture should be spread on the bench while the soil is moist, and then give the bench a fairly good watering. One bushel will be sufficient for 200 square feet of surface. This dose can be repeated every three weeks.

Liquid food, being easier and more quickly assimilated, can be supplied at the proper time when crops require it, and by studying the effects of each application and keeping note of the strength of each dose, great benefit can be derived from its use. In the use of chemical fertilizers it is safest to go slow and watch the effect of each application on the crops at their different stages and at different seasons. RIBES.

OUR NEEDS IN GLADIOLI.

I notice in the REVIEW of September 2 a paper by Henry Field, read before the Society of Iowa Florists at Des Moines, in which he mentions my hybrid gladioli, more especially the white and yellow sections, and states there is a need of a large striped variety. There are a few in the Childsi section of good size, but not up to the standard in other respects. I have a striped section in my hybrids that are descended from one of my earliest seedlings and seem to be of a different type from any I have ever seen. They are of heavy, rank growth, five to six feet high, flowers five to seven inches in diameter, colors distinct, not mottled and intermingled, as in many; long spike with eight or ten flowers open at once. My hybrids are not on the market and not for sale, but I thought it might encourage Brother Field to know others had seen this need and that possibly it might be filled some day. C. L. GOODRICH.

SWEET PEAS FOR MARKET.

We have a space 12x60 feet in the center of our greenhouse, with no benches, which we wish to plant to sweet peas this fall to ship. Would it be profitable to plant this size space and, if so, when should we sow for Christmas blooming?

What varieties would be best, how far apart should the rows be, how far apart in the rows, how should they be trained up, and how much seed should we get for this size space? Would it be a good idea to sow the seeds two or three in a 2-inch pot and transplant when started?

H. W. W.

Provided you have sufficient headroom there would seem to be no good reason why you cannot grow sweet peas in the center of your house. I would run one row directly down the center and one on each side, four and a half to five feet away. It is not advisable to plant any closer than this. I would rather have the rows six feet than four feet apart. The best sweet peas are now grown in large houses which are thirty to forty feet wide. These allow of ample headroom and the peas do much better planted in the ground than on raised benches.

Sow about September 10 to be sure of having some flowers for Christmas, in a temperature at night of 46 to 50 degrees. Suitable sorts are Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc, Florence Denzer, Watchung and Mrs. Alex Wallace. Seed can be sown, either in small pots, two or three to a pot, or, as some large growers prefer, in flats of sand, transplanting directly from the flats to the beds where they are to flower. Allow the individual plants three to four inches apart in the row and they will give you much finer spikes than if planted more thickly. For three rows 1,000 plants will be ample, and if you have good seed, sowing three ounces each of white and pink and a half ounce of lavender, you should have all you require and in about the correct proportion of colors. C. W.

BEST WINTER SWEET PEAS.

Would you kindly advise me as to the best white, pink and lavender varieties of sweet peas for forcing? What kind of soil is the most suitable? What temperature and how much headroom do they require? J. C. B.

In whites, Mont Blanc and Florence Denzer are both excellent. Christmas

J. E. Bonsall's Kaiserin Houses Glazed With Ribbed Glass.

Pink cannot be beaten in its color. Mrs. Alex. Wallace is a good lavender, coming into flower a little later than the white and pink ones.

Any good loam will grow sweet peas, provided it is not of an acid nature. Use some lime to correct sourness. The beds must have thorough drainage. Cow manure, well decayed, makes an excellent fertilizer. Sheep manure, when procurable at a reasonable rate, also is good. Some fine bone can be used when the plants start to flower. This can be poked into the soil. Liquid manure can also be used with much benefit.

A night temperature of 46 degrees to 48 degrees, when flowering, suits sweet peas. It should not go higher than 50 degrees and an even lower temperature can be given until the flowers start to open. The plants succeed much better grown in solid beds than raised benches. They can hardly have too much headroom. Wide, lofty houses are the best, with not less than six feet headroom and as much more as you can give. I have seen well grown greenhouse peas ten to fourteen feet high. C. W.

THE OLDEST EX-PRESIDENT.

Among the oldest as well as the best known of Scotch gardeners in this country is William R. Smith, superintendent of the Botanic Gardens, maintained by the government, on land directly opposite the capitol grounds, in Washington, D. C. This post he has held continuously for the almost unprecedented period of more than fifty years. An additional distinction is that he is the oldest living ex-president of the S. A. F., for Robert Craig, who preceded him by six terms in the presidency, numbers but 62 years against Mr. Smith's 81.

Wm. R. Smith was born in Scotland in 1828, and gained his first professional experience in Lord Elcho's gardens at Haddington. In 1853 he entered Kew Gardens, London, thence coming to America. He was first employed as a private gardener in Philadelphia, but soon went to Washington and there began his life work. The Botanic Gardens emerged from a swamp, into the beautiful aspect they now present, under his able management. Mr. Smith has in addition to his long years of service at the Botanic Gardens given liberally of his time as chairman of the Parking Commission of the District of Columbia and has done much towards making the streets, squares and parks of the national capital among the most beautiful in the world.

Mr. Smith has been the friend of many of the presidents, statesmen and other distinguished men of their day, and it was principally his wide acquaintance that made it possible for the S. A. F. to secure its national charter, granted by congress and signed by Wm. McKinley March 3, 1901. Mr. Smith is an ardent admirer of Robert Burns and has what is said to be the largest private collection of Burnsiana in the world. Mr. Smith possesses his full share of those characteristic Scotch traits, sturdy independence and grim humor, and has had many amusing experiences during his long career. The two following are typical:

A pompous senator, meeting Mr. Smith at one time in the Botanic Gardens, stated emphatically that he could see no utility in the gardens, nor any reasonable excuse why Congress should continue to maintain the place. Giving him a withering glance, Mr. Smith is said to have replied: "My dear sir, if the Great Creator of all the universe had had utility in mind when he made you, He would have put you on four legs and sent you to eating grass."

Another senator, from one of the southern states, heard, early in his term of office, that Superintendent Smith, of the Botanic Gardens, made presents of palms and other plants to statesmen he liked. This senator wanted some palms, so he tried to find a way of getting on the right side of the superintendent. Learning of the latter's admiration for the poet Burns, he let that serve as his cue.

Walking over from the Capitol to the Botanic Gardens, he found Mr. Smith, and after talking some time on general topics, led the conversation around to the subject of Burns.

"There was the poet!" he exclaimed. "For fine sentiment he has them all beaten a mile. I read my Burns every day."

"Ken ye Burns?" asked Smith, thoroughly interested.

"I should say I did," replied the senator. "Why, I know most of his poems by heart. They can talk about their other great poets, but as for me, give me Jimmie Burns."

"Jimmie Burns!" fairly snorted the enraged Smith. "Jimmie Burns! Augh! Billie Washington! Frankie Napoleon! Georgie Lincoln! Get out of my sight, ye ignoramus!"

And that crestfallen senator never did get his palms.

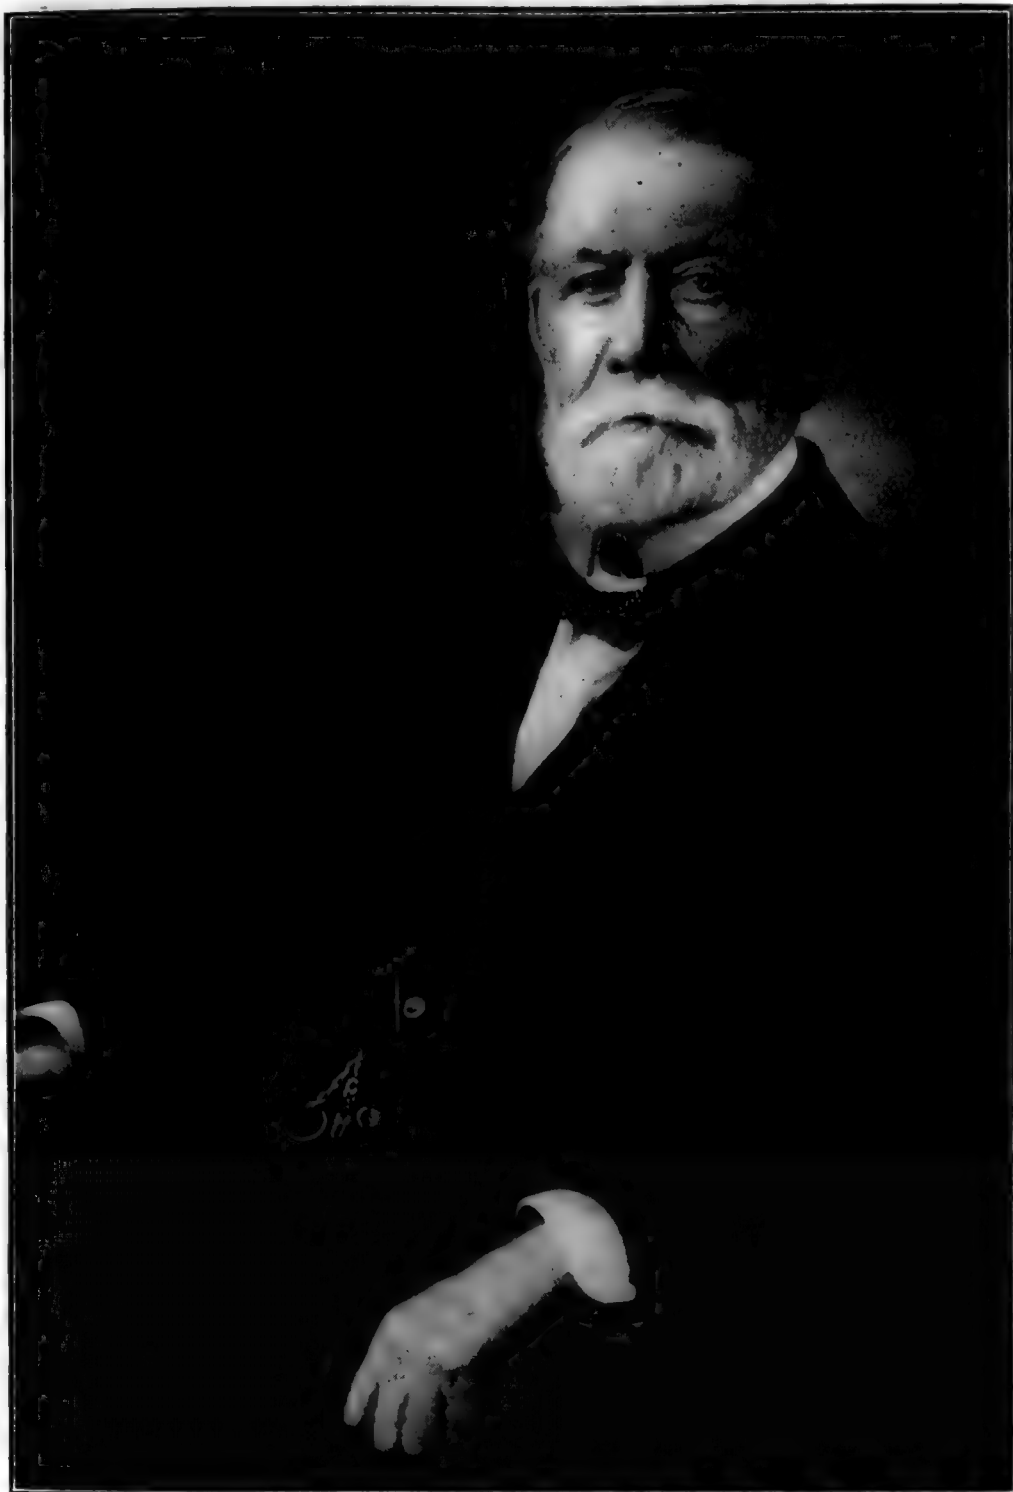

IOWA FLORISTS MEET.

At the annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, held at Des Moines September 1 and referred to in last week's REVIEW, the following officers were elected:

President, G. D. Black, Independence.
Vice-president, F. J. Olsan, Ames.
Secretary, Wesley Greene, Davenport.
Treasurer, Peter Lambert, Des Moines.

A resolution was passed offering a special premium of $25 from the funds of the society for the best mantel decoration of gladioli to be shown at the state fair next year.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

The Question of Early Blooms.

We are having ideal weather conditions for the establishment of recently housed plants. The bright days with cool nights favor strong growth, and soon some early flowering sorts will be showing a disposition to form buds. Whether these should be allowed to develop into blooms is a question which each grower must decide for himself, but a few remarks may serve as a partial guide.

If one is reasonably sure of a market at fair prices, it might be advisable to permit moderate blooming, but, as has been before advised in these notes, it is best to proceed with caution and, above all, to offer the best that it is possible to produce or none at all. Too often, however, have we seen the market flooded with miserable apologies for carnations—at a time, too, when chrysanthemums command attention.

Growers of this stock probably reason that, being grown without expense of fuel, the returns are practically all velvet, while in reality it is more an example of "trying to eat one's cake and have it, too."

An Insufficient Root System.

The usual tendency of newly planted stock, when disposed to bloom, is to do so on short stems, thereby giving evidence that the check incident to transplanting has more influence on bud formation than maturity of the plant. The root system has not become sufficiently extended to supply the needed material for both stem and bloom of high grade.

Aside from the low price received for short-stemmed flowers, there is a certain amount of plant energy wasted which would better have been conserved, to be expended later in the production of first-class stock.

If, however, market conditions demand carnations, a proper proportion of the strongest plants can be used to furnish the supply, the rule of disbudding and otherwise handling the product being as strictly observed as when the season is at its height.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

BELGIANS STUDYING US.

The Belgian government has sent to the United States Prof. Adolph Buysseus, head of the horticultural department in the University of Vilfordt, with instructions to investigate floricultural methods here, particularly with reference to growing carnations for the winter market. He has already interviewed the Agricultural Department at Washington, and visited Philadelphia, near which, in Chester county, the carnation is a specialty. During the last few days he has been visiting the big greenhouse plants in the vicinity of Chicago, and will extend his tour to all the principal cities of this country and Canada.

The visit of Prof. Buysseus is attracting much attention from the daily papers in the cities he visits, many editorial comments being published because of the fact that his journey has given not a few editors a new idea as to the extent and importance of the flower business.

A QUESTION OF FAIRNESS.

Is it honorable to accept advance orders for plants and then, at the last minute, when the plants are ordered shipped, to say, "Sorry, but we are sold out; we return check," etc.?

For my planting this season I ordered months ahead, from two growers, and received the most profuse acknowledgments, saying that the plants would be held, etc., and yet both growers turned me down, one for the entire order, the other for a part, after writing me a short time ago that he had fine growing weather and the plants were looking fine.

Last season I had similar experiences and put on my "unfair list" two names that are often before the public. This season I will add two more names of those from whom I will never buy a penny's worth again. These names I will give you for publication if you will accept them, and to any brother florist I will send their names upon request. I pay my bills promptly, often in advance, and I believe I am entitled to fair treatment. As a reader of the REVIEW, I wish you would take up the matter in your usual fair and vigorous way and get us fair treatment. You owe this much to your subscribers.

Please publish this, so we may hear from the other side. A. J. SEIDERS.

The gentleman is entirely justified in withholding his patronage from any who do not appreciate it.—Ed.

LILIES FOR EARLY EASTER.

I should like to know if I will be safe in relying on giganteum bulbs for my crop for the coming Easter. W. M. N.

In reference to the above inquiry and the replies in the REVIEW of September 2, as to whether or not it will be safe to depend on the giganteum lilies for the coming Easter, we would certainly say yes, providing, however, that the temperature of the house they are in is well under control and that they are grown as a crop and not as a side issue. As for ourselves, giganteums are among the varieties we grow.

PEIRCE BROS.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Fire Heat.

We have now arrived at a season of the year when we get some very cool nights, followed by hot days. The temptation is strong, when there is a half frosty nip in the air, to close down the ventilators tight in order to keep up the temperatures in the houses. This is a poor policy and there can be no easier way to promote the spread of bacteria. It is far better to somewhat reduce the ventilation, but do not close the houses. Let some ventilation circulate in them rather than create a damp, stagnant, clammy atmosphere. Never mind if the thermometer goes a few degrees lower. It will not harm your plants a particle.

Some growers run a little fire heat nearly all summer, and for some kinds of stock this is quite helpful. Roses, tropical plants and certain orchids are all benefited by a little warmth in the pipes on damp days and cool nights; a more buoyant and better growing atmosphere is created, and mildew and other troubles are the more easily warded off. There is, however, no need to use heat yet for carnations and the general stock in trade grown by the average retailer.

Let syringing be done not later than two o'clock in the afternoon, so that all foliage will be dry before nightfall, and reduce the moisture on floors and below benches. Be sure that your heating plant is ready to start up. All repairs not completed should be attended to now and not when freezing weather makes it imperative. If heaters and piping are in good order, and any necessary painting and glazing done, the grower should feel happy, but every year we see laggards who feverishly start this work when it should be completed.

Poinsettias.

The last batch of poinsettia cuttings should be in the sand by the last week in August. It is unprofitable to root them any later than this, as they have so short a season of growth that the bracts are very small. The earlier batches should by this time be in the pans in which they are to flower. Grow them cool and water carefully, in order to keep them stocky and keep the foliage down to the bases of the plants. It is a mistake to coddle poinsettias. It simply makes spindling, unsalable stock. The time they enjoy a good heat is from the time bracts form until they are fully developed. When making up the pans it is a good plan to work in some small nephrolepis, Cyperus alternifolius, grevilleas, dracenas or other green foliaged plants among them. In case of a loss of foliage on the poinsettias, they cover the nakedness and render salable pans which would otherwise be of little value.

Berried Solanums.

For an easily grown plant, which can be profitably sold at a comparatively low price, the Jerusalem cherries are hard to beat and, while they may not sell so well at the high class stores as ardisias or Otaheite oranges, the average country florist can always dispose of a good number at Thanksgiving or Christmas. Plants in the open ground are now heavily berried and can be lifted and potted into 5-inch and 6-inch pots, according to the strength of the plants. Allow a little soil to adhere to the roots if possible when lifting. Pot firmly, soak well with water, spray freely during bright weather, shade for a few days and the wilting consequent on removal will soon disappear. The plants can remain outdoors a few weeks longer. A light frost will not harm them.

Christmas peppers should also be potted now. They are somewhat more tender than the solanums and, while popular in some localities, are hardly so desirable a pot plant as the Jerusalem cherries.

Bedding Geraniums.

In the more northerly states the middle of September is quite early enough to start propagating bedding geraniums. By waiting until cool weather the shoots get harder and are less liable to damp off than a month earlier. Well drained flats of sharp sand, or fine charcoal and sand, are preferable to loam. The percentage of rotted cuttings will be greater if loam is used, although some growers claim to get good results from it. Sandy loam during the winter, when the harder, less sappy indoor cuttings are used, is all right, especially when small pots, which dry out quickly, are used, but in the fall flats filled with it are too retentive of moisture; at least, such is the general experience in the colder states. Unless you are growing rooted cuttings for fall sale, do not be in a hurry about getting in your geranium cuttings. The later you can leave them, with due safety, the better they will root, and remember that, unlike most cuttings, they should never be shaded.

German and Japanese Iris.

German and Japanese iris should be divided and replanted not later than every third year. This work is better done during the month of September. It can be delayed much later, but by early transplanting the stock gets a chance to make good roots before freezing weather arrives. The German iris are specially useful when they come in season for Memorial day. They prefer well drained land which has been deeply plowed and well manured. The Japanese varieties are not semi-aquatics, as many imagine, except during the growing season. If under water during winter, the roots will decay; therefore they should be allotted a place where they can have perfect winter drainage.

Mignonette.

Keep a careful watch for the white butterflies which are busy among your mignonette this month and kill all you see. Their larvæ will do untold damage to the young plants in a short time if not carefully looked after. It will not pay to allow the plants to run up to flower thus early; pinch them back so that they will break from near the base. Then, if you want fancy spikes, select three of the strongest shoots. If more moderate ones only are needed, leave double the number. Scratch over the surface soil frequently. The more you stir it, the faster the plants will grow. Never close the ventilators. Mignonette is always at its best when the temperatures are the lowest and no fire heat should be given until absolutely necessary.

Pansies and Violas.

The pansy and viola seedlings are now demanding attention and should be transplanted before they become too crowded. Where small quantities are grown, it is best to place them in coldframes, the sashes, of course, not being used until the beds are frozen solid. Where thousands are to be handled they will winter well outdoors on land with a gentle slope, just sufficient to prevent "wet feet," a winter mulch of some light material being given after real winter weather has arrived. Keep the ground frequently cultivated among the little transplanted seedlings and they will grow rapidly, September and October being months in which they delight.

Myosotis, daisies and any other biennials or perennials should also be pricked out as soon as possible. Keep the hoe or cultivator going between the earlier planted digitalis, coreopsis, gailardias, Canterbury bells and other hardy plants. They grow fast with the arrival of cooler and moister weather and double in size quickly when the surface soil is kept loose among them.

CATTLEYA PORTIA.

Cattleya Portia is the result of a cross between the popular C. labiata and C. Bowringiana, both fall flowering varieties. C. Portia is almost exactly intermediate in character. The flowers are held erect on stiff scapes, usually six to ten flowers on each, more nearly approximating the size of C. labiata than the other parent. Two leaves are usually produced on each bulb, as in the case of C. Bowringiana. Flowering with its parents in October and November, C. Portia makes an excellent addition and, when placed on the market in sufficient numbers at a more moderate price, should prove of great commercial value. Pots or pans of fern fiber, with treatment similar to that given the well known C. labiata, will grow C. Portia well. Like all cattleyas, it likes to be grown near the light, in order to develop its free flowering qualities.

Two photographs are here reproduced which show the successful manner in which Adolph Brix, of St. Louis, Mo., participated in recent street parades. Such photographs may justly be considered valuable as testifying in various ways, directly or indirectly, to the energy, advertising ability, good taste and success of the florist who designed the originals. The canopied float, which is decorated—"decorated" is precisely the right word, is it not?—by several living figures as well as by the flowers, was used in the business men's parade, August 11. HOUSING FIELD VIOLETS.

Will you kindly give me, in an early issue of the REVIEW, full instructions as to the planting of violets? A. B. C.

This query, coming now, must of course refer to violets grown outdoors during the summer, a practice that the larger growers have long since abandoned, as a rule, having found that growing them in the house all summer is a much better way. Having grown them outdoors, you will want to put your house in shape at once, if you have not already

Before taking the soil into the house—if you have not already taken it in—be sure to fumigate the house thoroughly with sulphur, giving it a good, strong dose and keeping it closed all night, thus sweetening the house as well as killing all the "live stock" possible, in the way of sow bugs, centipeds, snails, etc., of which there is usually a more or less abundant supply. Do not neglect to use plenty of lime, dusted freely under the benches, in the paths, etc. The moisture in the soil, etc., is usually sufficient to slake it, making it more effective than if air-slaked lime is used. Of course, before bringing in the soil, you sprayed the benches or borders with freshly slaked lime while it was hot.

Before lifting the plants, the house should be well shaded, and should be kept so for a few days, until the plants have become established and commenced to grow, and then the shade should be gradually thinned off and entirely removed in a few days, so that the plants may make a sturdy, healthy, strong growth before the short, cloudy days of fall and winter come on.

See that the plants are lifted with care, retaining a good sized ball of earth if possible, and do not get soil in the crowns, or crack the leaves or stems. Clean them of all old, yellow foliage and runners, also the flower buds now showing, cutting them off cleanly with a sharp knife. Do not pull them off, thus tearing and breaking the plant more or less and so putting it in good condition for rot and disease.

Having firmed the plants well in place, follow after a short interval of time with the hose, settling the earth well into place about the roots, taking care not to have the water turned on too hard. Also at this time wash out the crowns thoroughly, to remove any loose soil that may have rattled in more or less, despite your care to prevent this from happening. This first watering should be thorough, so that all that will be required for the next few days will be to keep the air well moistened with a fine, misty spray during the warm, sunny parts of the day, so as to keep the plants from wilting and drooping. Of course, watering is a particular job, to be done with great discretion, and the conditions obtaining outdoors at planting time largely control your work with the hose. Much good judgment must be used.

market? Please give us brief cultural directions. W. & R.

Seeds of stocks can be had now. Sow at once in flats in a frame or cool house. Pot off into 2½-inch pots when of sufficient size and they will be ready to follow chrysanthemums. You cannot get these in for Christmas, but they will come in useful during January and February; possibly a few may be had at the end of December. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night suits them. You must not exceed these figures, however.

Pull out single-flowering plants as soon as you can detect them (they are of little value), in order to give doubles ample room. A similar soil to that used for mums and carnations will be all right. Give them full sunshine and abundant ventilation. C. W.

done so, and get the plants in as soon as possible. This applies to the double varieties; many growers think it best to leave the single variety out as late as possible.

As soon as the plants become well established, be sure to give all the air and light possible, for plants that are allowed to make a soft, tender growth at this season of the year will have no opportunity to "make good" later, when conditions are naturally against plant growth.

Now, as soon as you have the house filled, you should lift and pot up a good supply of extra plants, to be held in reserve and put in the place of a plant here and there that does not take hold well and an occasional one that may possibly die. This will enable you to have your beds or benches look more uniform and even than if you rely on lifting from outside, even allowing that the weather holds on to permit this. Then, also, if you have a holiday plant trade—which, if you have not, you should work up—you want to pot up a supply for this, as a well grown pot of violets in full bloom is a very satisfactory gift, liked and appreciated by nearly everybody. In our own experience we have never found any variety to excel the Lady Hume Campbell for this purpose, and, if well grown, the flowers will be large, of good color, and profusely borne on long, strong stems. They also last longer and will stand the high temperature that they encounter in most living rooms. Thus the well grown plants are the most satisfactory in the long run, both to customers and to yourself. What is best for one's customers is what one should be always looking out for, since a satisfied customer is the one that brings the profit to the grower. In these days of keen rivalry and price cutting, the grower has to look well to his ways to keep his profits up to the proper mark, and it is and always will be the grower that puts the best on the market that will receive the rewards he is looking for, both in money and in satisfaction.

NOTES ON BEDDING PLANTS.

[A paper read by J. T. D. Fulmer, gardener in City Parks, Des Moines, Iowa, before the Society of Iowa Florists, in session September 1, 1909.]

This topic is one that is many-sided and the writer realizes fully the importance and necessity of keeping within a reasonable scope.

Bedding plants in parks are largely composed of two groups. The first contains the old-time favorites, such as cannas, geraniums, coleus, santolina, alternantheras, echeverias, Stevia variegata, petunias, dahlias, roses, alyssum, artemisia, achyranthes, heliotrope, salvia, begonias, celosia, pennisetums, verbenas, phloxes and pansies. The second group contains some of the newer ones, as araucarias, crotons, pandanus, palms, dracenas, aca-lyphas, agaves and cactus.

To the first group we look for our main supply, for the reason that in this climate they do better than many in the latter group.

Selection of Combinations.

We prefer to use but one color of canna or geranium in a bed, and above all, to avoid using a border which does not harmonize with that color. Thus a bronze-foliaged canna should be bordered with artemisia rather than with Coleus Verschaffeltii, and a green-foliaged canna should be bordered with a dark coleus rather than with Coleus John Good. We know of no border so effective for a large bed of cannas as Pennisetum Ruppelianum. In good soil it should be set about twelve inches apart to secure best results.

For dark geraniums, as S. A. Nutt, we use Mme. Salleri for border. We prefer to have our geraniums in 4-inch pots, good strong plants, well watered just before planting out. Cannas also should be strong 4-inch stuff at planting time, which in this vicinity is from May 15 to June 1.

We are fully aware that there is a strong feeling against the so-called carpet-bedding, but we are willing to go on record as saying that seven-tenths of those who deride it are unable to properly do such work themselves and thus we find it merely a case of "sour grapes." If one cares to see which kind of bedding is admired by the flower-loving public, just watch them as they pass by a fine bed of geraniums or cannas, and stop to admire an artistic bed of this much derided carpet work.

Again, I do not think a bed of coleus, however well arranged in its planting, looks well unless it is pinched regularly and evenly. We all know that alternantheras, santolina and achyranthes must be kept topped to appear at their best.

Crotons, strong, well-colored plants, are good bedding plants either massed alone, or with araucarias and dracenas. The crotons may be taken out of the pots, or they may be plunged, but araucarias should always be plunged, to avoid the risk of losing them when taken up in the fall.

Propagation of Stock.

We are inclined to think the title of this paper warrants a few words being said about the propagation of these bedding plants. While we still propagate alternantheras in August, we find that they root equally well in December and January and make fully as good plants. For geraniums, we prefer the September or October cuttings. These are put into flats of sand, watered well and then set in the full sunlight, where they remain until the sand is quite dry before receiving more water. With this treatment, we count on from eighty to ninety per cent rooting. They are potted as soon as well rooted in 2-inch pots and shifted as they need it.

Canna roots are cut up from January 25 to February 15 and started in sand. These we find make strong 4-inch pot plants for bedding. Dahlias are cut up and put in sand about February 20 and from this start we take cuttings. And just a word about these cuttings. We are careful to take the cutting off just below the joint, as they then make tubers, whereas, if the cut is made between the joints, we find many refuse to make more than fibrous roots.

In closing, let me urge strongly the use of Gruss an Teplitz rose. It is a never failing source of beauty in park work. With strong, vigorous plants ready to break into flower as soon as planted, they continue blooming through sunshine and rain, their beautiful, dark, velvety flowers always smiling a welcome to each visitor who comes.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With the return of vacationists to the city from mountain and seashore a little more life has been galvanized into the flower business, but arrivals, especially of outdoor stock, are more than can be assimilated. Asters continue to arrive in multitudes and of such fine quality that it seems a thousand pities they have to be sold at such unprofitable prices; ruling rates are 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred, some extra fine making 75 cents to $1. Gladioli continue abundant, the chief call being for the white shades. Sweet peas are getting poor and do not sell as well as they did. The outdoor crop is nearing the end, but the new indoor crop from some growers will be coming in before we see the last of them, sweet peas being a year-around crop now.

Good white roses are rather scarce and sell well. Beauties are improving and the cooler weather has somewhat reduced the supply of small, worthless flowers of other varieties. Quite a few carnations are coming in, but stems are short yet. Prices vary from $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Cattleyas and gardenias each remain scarce. Lilium longiflorum and L. speciosum are both plentiful. Tuberose are in oversupply, also cosmos and dahlias. Lily of the valley continues to meet with a steady call. Quite a variety of outdoor fall flowers are seen, but the demand for any of these is limited.

At Horticultural Hall.

Horticultural hall was given over to the collections of fruits, flowers and vegetables from children's homes and school gardens September 4 and 5, there being an interesting and extensive display, in spite of the dry weather. A novel and attractive feature was arranged in the center of the main hall to show how a small home lot can be tastefully laid out and planted with comparatively little or no expense. The plot was 30x40, one-fourth being occupied by the house. There were flowers along the fence boundaries and about the house. There was a small but neat vegetable garden and grass covered the front and most of the side lawn. The house was further beautified with window-boxes. All vegetables and flowers had been grown in boxes or pots and were transplanted so as to look as fresh and natural as possible. Everything about the house itself was simple and easy to care for. Mrs. R. G. Shaw and Miss Bradley were the originators of this unique and pleasing feature.

Various Notes.

So great is the demand for space at the coming New England fruit show that it has been found necessary to limit many exhibits, Horticultural hall being found quite inadequate to accommodate the promised exhibits.

A large attendance at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day at the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, September 11, is assured. The party will leave Boston (South Station) on the 12:43 train, arriving at North Abington at 1:20. Dinner will be served immediately on arrival, after which the nurseries will be inspected. Ladies are especially invited to attend.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, are finishing a new 300-foot house, to be used for pot plants.

James Tulis, of South Sudbury, is sending in some fine Fair Maid and Enchantress carnations to the market at present.

A. R. Hutson, W. H. Elliott's genial salesman, returned August 31 from a six weeks' trip to Canada and Alaska. He went as far as the Yukon Pass and speaks enthusiastically of the magnificence of the Alaskan flora. He says vegetables and garden flowers of fine quality were seen at many places in Alaska. Mr. Hutson secured numerous photographs, which he hopes to use in lantern slides when developed.

H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, is picking a fine crop of carnations from his new house. He has the finest long-stemmed white asters seen in the market, 24-inch stems being the average.

J. W. Duncan returned September 1 from his western trip. San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Salt Lake City, Omaha and Colorado Springs were visited among other places on the return journey. He will describe some of the things seen at the club meeting September 21.

Among visitors last week were J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, and H. H. Battles, Philadelphia.

September has so far proved unusually cool; temperatures near freezing were recorded in the first few days. We still require a lot of additional precipitation to thoroughly soak the ground.

Club Visits Keller's.

The Toledo Florists' Club, on invitation of T. N. Keller, on the bay shore, paid a visit to his place last Sunday afternoon, September 5, and had an interesting time sight-seeing. While Mr. Keller has but one house of carnations and one of sweet peas, he produces possibly more outside cut flowers than anybody in this neighborhood. The asters seem to be about done and quite a bit of disease made the crop rather small. Mr. Keller's two sons, who stay with him at the home place, are largely interested in market gardening, especially in asparagus, of which they have a number of acres, also cauliflower and, last but not least, onions. Of the latter they produce mostly pickling sizes and sets. In their well ventilated storehouse they have thousands of bushels of both sizes partly ready for market and partly awaiting the planting season next spring. Mr. Keller owns one of the prettiest places along the Maumee bay, and a view from his beach through a pair of good glasses is a picture not soon forgotten.

Mr. Keller was kind enough to invite the Florists' Club to have its next year's picnic on his beach and if the writer knows anything about it they will go.

After inspecting the fields the party was piloted to the house, where Mrs. Keller and her daughter served luncheon. A unanimous vote of thanks partly paid them for their labor, after which one of the sons conveyed the entire party to the end of the Ironville car line. Everybody enjoyed the trip. The writer got so homesick for the water that he went out to Niles beach next day and caught about 100 lake perch.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business, on the whole, is fair, with funeral work good. Asters are plentiful just now; they are the late ones. The flowers are firm and the stems are long; 35 cents per dozen, retail, is the price.

A few carnations are to be seen; these are of fair quality and bring 35 cents per dozen. Roses are good, though some of the stems are rather short; $1 and

Joseph Heacock.

(Nominated unanimously September 7 for President of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.)

$1.50 per dozen are the retail prices. Sweet peas are still in bloom; they realize any sort of price. Gladioli help out well. Outdoor flowers are quite plentiful.

The housing of carnations is nearly completed. The plants in this section have done fairly well, considering the long drought we have had and are still having.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray has some fine Boston and Whitmani ferns. His place is in excellent shape.

A dahlia somewhat out of the ordinary is one shown by W. F. Turner & Co., of this city. It is ball-shaped, formed by the intersection of three heads, and weighs a quarter of a pound. This is quite a freak.

Wm. H. Richardson, of this city, shows four seedling dahlias, one of them a cactus, one a decorative, and two show dahlias. The cactus is a rich plum color, without shading, with a good center and stem. The decorative is bluish white, heavily shaded with pinkish lavender, and is of true decorative form. One of the show varieties is orange buff, shaded much deeper in the center, and of fine petal and form, while the other is cardinal red, with a fine, high center. Mr. Richardson has been making quite a study of bringing out new varieties from seed, which are hybridized and grown in his fields, and thus far he has been quite successful.

J. H. Cleary has a nice line of canary birds, all good singers; also cages and bird supplies. Trade is a little quiet with him just now. He is receiving some nice asters from Boston.

The garden and seed committee of the Mattapoisett Improvement Association, a few miles from here, awarded the prizes in the school garden contest on the school grounds last week. The committee was delighted with the efforts of the boys and girls of the town and with the improvement over last year. The specimens from the children's gardens were on exhibition, and proved to be an interesting collection.

Wm. Livesey has a nice batch of smilax plants which he is shipping to the trade.

R. H. Woodhouse's carnations are looking fine.

The stores were closed all day Labor day. W. L.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

F. K. Dienst, of Middletown, N. Y., carried off all the honors in the trade section at the county fair, occupying almost the entire tent. Mr. Dienst, Jr., promises to follow in his father's footsteps as a floral artist, his wagon loaded with plants being one of the features of the exhibition.

E. A. Lorentz, of Middletown, is always busy. Just now he is lengthening two houses, using iron and cement wherever possible. He is fortunate in having help of a mechanical turn, which enables him to do his own work.

The Drummers' Retreat, at Middletown, described recently in the REVIEW, is almost finished and will be the Mecca of many a knight of the grip who knows the sociability of the genial proprietor, who, by the way, is park commissioner and gives much of his valuable time to the beautifying of the several pretty parks here.

An auto party, consisting of H. Bryant, of the Hews Pottery Co., and your correspondent, piloted by R. Harry Cathcart, Jr., of the Yuess Gardens Co., paid a visit to the well-known plant of Adam Laub & Sons, Hughsonville, where we were joined by Lewis Wood, of Wood Bros., Fishkill, who came over in his Cadillac. A tour of the Laub place, where everything was found in apple-pie order, and a chat with the Laubs, senior and junior, made time fly and a quick run was made to the College City, where a round of the craft was in order. The veteran Saltford was found looking over his cattleyas, noting the promising growths shooting out here and there, representing so many gold dollars later, when Vassar's queens demand the best of Flora's products. Mum was the word as we looked over the vigorous stock indoors and planted outside, between the houses, for early crops, following which sweet peas are sown for spring flowering. Golden Glow is first, Monrovia next and then Bonnaffon, which is a favorite with all.

Murphy & Schaumburg, at Poughkeepsie, were busy cleaning up after the busiest season on record.

Conrad C. Gindra, of Poughkeepsie, has his modern plant in excellent shape. Violets look promising.

West Newburgh was next on the program. Here the Newburgh Floral Co. was found adding one house, for bulb forcing, which is quite a factor with this firm.

The modern plant of the Yuess Gardens Co. is close by. Percy Herbert, the able grower, is justly proud of the thrifty stocks of mums and carnations. A fine storage shed and barn are being built. Downtown the store is being decorated, in keeping with a general plan being carried out by all the progressive merchants, in celebration of Hudson-Fulton week, which is expected to just pour the shekels into someone's treasury. M.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The summer is over and we look for the return of the busy season, when we can once more stock up with an assurance of sales. Stock in variety is limited just now, and no doubt will be for a few weeks. Good asters are scarce, with hundreds of shorts going to waste. Asters are selling on the market at 10 cents per dozen. Gladioli are good and in fair supply. Mums continue to be on the market and will be seen steadily now until the last of the late varieties are gone. In viewing the stock in this vicinity it appears everybody has gone into late mums heavily. Beauties are selling well, especially in short stock. Other roses are not good, with a scarcity of Kaiserin and Carnot. Carnations are coming in small quantities and short stems.

Various Notes.

Several small alterations are being made by the greenhouse men about town. All the stores are redecorating in some way and everybody is trying to make a good appearance. Two new stores are in the field this season and all this makes competition keener.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held September 7, at which Mr. Legg was to read a paper on parks of Buffalo.

they may be plunged, but araucarias should always be plunged, to avoid the risk of losing them when taken up in the fall.

Propagation of Stock.

We are inclined to think the title of this paper warrants a few words being said about the propagation of these bedding plants. While we still propagate alternantheras in August, we find that they root equally well in December and January and make fully as good plants. For geraniums, we prefer the September or October cuttings. These are put into flats of sand, watered well and then set in the full sunlight, where they remain until the sand is quite dry before receiving more water. With this treatment, we count on from eighty to ninety per cent rooting. They are potted as soon as well rooted in 2-inch pots and shifted as they need it.

Canna roots are cut up from January 25 to February 15 and started in sand. These we find make strong 4-inch pot plants for bedding. Dahlias are cut up and put in sand about February 20 and from this start we take cuttings. And just a word about these cuttings. We are careful to take the cutting off just below the joint, as they then make tubers, whereas, if the cut is made between the joints, we find many refuse to make more than fibrous roots.

In closing, let me urge strongly the use of Gruss an Teplitz rose. It is a never failing source of beauty in park work. With strong, vigorous plants ready to break into flower as soon as planted, they continue blooming through sunshine and rain, their beautiful, dark, velvety flowers always smiling a welcome to each visitor who comes.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With the return of vacationists to the city from mountain and seashore a little more life has been galvanized into the flower business, but arrivals, especially of outdoor stock, are more than can be assimilated. Asters continue to arrive in multitudes and of such fine quality that it seems a thousand pities they have to be sold at such unprofitable prices; ruling rates are 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred, some extra fine making 75 cents to $1. Gladioli continue abundant, the chief call being for the white shades. Sweet peas are getting poor and do not sell as well as they did. The outdoor crop is nearing the end, but the new indoor crop from some growers will be coming in before we see the last of them, sweet peas being a year-around crop now.

Good white roses are rather scarce and sell well. Beauties are improving and the cooler weather has somewhat reduced the supply of small, worthless flowers of other varieties. Quite a few carnations are coming in, but stems are short yet. Prices vary from $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Cattleyas and gardenias each remain scarce. Lilium longiflorum and L. speciosum are both plentiful. Tuberoses are in oversupply, also cosmos and dahlias. Lily of the valley continues to meet with a steady call. Quite a variety of outdoor fall flowers are seen, but the demand for any of these is limited.

At Horticultural Hall.

Horticultural hall was given over to the collections of fruits, flowers and vegetables from children's homes and school gardens September 4 and 5, there being an interesting and extensive display, in spite of the dry weather. A novel and attractive feature was arranged in the center of the main hall to show how a small home lot can be tastefully laid out and planted with comparatively little or no expense. The plot was 30x40, one-fourth being occupied by the house. There were flowers along the fence boundaries and about the house. There was a small but neat vegetable garden and grass covered the front and most of the side lawn. The house was further beautified with window-boxes. All vegetables and flowers had been grown in boxes or pots and were transplanted so as to look as fresh and natural as possible. Everything about the house itself was simple and easy to care for. Mrs. R. G. Shaw and Miss Bradley were the originators of this unique and pleasing feature.

Various Notes.

So great is the demand for space at the coming New England fruit show that it has been found necessary to limit many exhibits, Horticultural hall being found quite inadequate to accommodate the promised exhibits.

A large attendance at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's field day at the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, September 11, is assured. The party will leave Boston (South Station) on the 12:43 train, arriving at North Abington at 1:20. Dinner will be served immediately on arrival, after which the nurseries will be inspected. Ladies are especially invited to attend.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, are finishing a new 300-foot house, to be used for pot plants.

James Tulis, of South Sudbury, is sending in some fine Fair Maid and Enchantress carnations to the market at present.

A. R. Hutson, W. H. Elliott's genial salesman, returned August 31 from a six weeks' trip to Canada and Alaska. He went as far as the Yukon Pass and speaks enthusiastically of the magnificence of the Alaskan flora. He says vegetables and garden flowers of fine quality were seen at many places in Alaska. Mr. Hutson secured numerous photographs, which he hopes to use in lantern slides when developed.

H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, is picking a fine crop of carnations from his new house. He has the finest long-stemmed white asters seen in the market, 24-inch stems being the average.

J. W. Duncan returned September 1 from his western trip. San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Salt Lake City, Omaha and Colorado Springs were visited among other places on the return journey. He will describe some of the things seen at the club meeting September 21.

Among visitors last week were J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, and H. H. Battles, Philadelphia.

September has so far proved unusually cool; temperatures near freezing were recorded in the first few days. We still require a lot of additional precipitation to thoroughly soak the ground.

Club Visits Keller's.

The Toledo Florists' Club, on invitation of T. N. Keller, on the bay shore, paid a visit to his place last Sunday afternoon, September 5, and had an interesting time sight-seeing. While Mr. Keller has but one house of carnations and one of sweet peas, he produces possibly more outside cut flowers than anybody in this neighborhood. The asters seem to be about done and quite a bit of disease made the crop rather small. Mr. Keller's two sons, who stay with him at the home place, are largely interested in market gardening, especially in asparagus, of which they have a number of acres, also cauliflower and, last but not least, onions. Of the latter they produce mostly pickling sizes and sets. In their well ventilated storehouse they have thousands of bushels of both sizes partly ready for market and partly awaiting the planting season next spring. Mr. Keller owns one of the prettiest places along the Maumee bay, and a view from his beach through a pair of good glasses is a picture not soon forgotten.

Mr. Keller was kind enough to invite the Florists' Club to have its next year's picnic on his beach and if the writer knows anything about it they will go.

After inspecting the fields the party was piloted to the house, where Mrs. Keller and her daughter served luncheon. A unanimous vote of thanks partly paid them for their labor, after which one of the sons conveyed the entire party to the end of the Ironville car line. Everybody enjoyed the trip. The writer got so homesick for the water that he went out to Niles beach next day and caught about 100 lake perch.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business, on the whole, is fair, with funeral work good. Asters are plentiful just now; they are the late ones. The flowers are firm and the stems are long; 35 cents per dozen, retail, is the price.

A few carnations are to be seen; these are of fair quality and bring 35 cents per dozen. Roses are good, though some of the stems are rather short; $1 and

Joseph Heacock.

(Nominated unanimously September 7 for President of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.)

$1.50 per dozen are the retail prices. Sweet peas are still in bloom; they realize any sort of price. Gladioli help out well. Outdoor flowers are quite plentiful.

The housing of carnations is nearly completed. The plants in this section have done fairly well, considering the long drought we have had and are still having.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray has some fine Boston and Whitmani ferns. His place is in excellent shape.

A dahlia somewhat out of the ordinary is one shown by W. F. Turner & Co., of this city. It is ball-shaped, formed by the intersection of three heads, and weighs a quarter of a pound. This is quite a freak.

Wm. H. Richardson, of this city, shows four seedling dahlias, one of them a cactus, one a decorative, and two show dahlias. The cactus is a rich plum color, without shading, with a good center and stem. The decorative is bluish white, heavily shaded with pinkish lavender, and is of true decorative form. One of the show varieties is orange buff, shaded much deeper in the center, and of fine petal and form, while the other is cardinal red, with a fine, high center. Mr. Richardson has been making quite a study of bringing out new varieties from seed, which are hybridized and grown in his fields, and thus far he has been quite successful.

J. H. Cleary has a nice line of canary birds, all good singers; also cages and bird supplies. Trade is a little quiet with him just now. He is receiving some nice asters from Boston.

The garden and seed committee of the Mattapoisett Improvement Association, a few miles from here, awarded the prizes in the school garden contest on the school grounds last week. The committee was delighted with the efforts of the boys and girls of the town and with the improvement over last year. The specimens from the children's gardens were on exhibition, and proved to be an interesting collection.

Wm. Livesey has a nice batch of smilax plants which he is shipping to the trade.

R. H. Woodhouse's carnations are looking fine.

The stores were closed all day Labor day. W. L.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

F. K. Dienst, of Middletown, N. Y., carried off all the honors in the trade section at the county fair, occupying almost the entire tent. Mr. Dienst, Jr., promises to follow in his father's footsteps as a floral artist, his wagon loaded with plants being one of the features of the exhibition.

E. A. Lorentz, of Middletown, is always busy. Just now he is lengthening two houses, using iron and cement wherever possible. He is fortunate in having help of a mechanical turn, which enables him to do his own work.

The Drummers' Retreat, at Middletown, described recently in the REVIEW, is almost finished and will be the Mecca of many a knight of the grip who knows the sociability of the genial proprietor, who, by the way, is park commissioner and gives much of his valuable time to the beautifying of the several pretty parks here.

An auto party, consisting of H. Bryant, of the Hews Pottery Co., and your correspondent, piloted by R. Harry Cathcart, Jr., of the Yuess Gardens Co., paid a visit to the well-known plant of Adam Laub & Sons, Hughsonville, where we were joined by Lewis Wood, of Wood Bros., Fishkill, who came over in his Cadillac. A tour of the Laub place, where everything was found in apple-pie order, and a chat with the Laubs, senior and junior, made time fly and a quick run was made to the College City, where a round of the craft was in order. The veteran Saltford was found looking over his cattleyas, noting the promising growths shooting out here and there, representing so many gold dollars later, when Vassar's queens demand the best of Flora's products. Mum was the word as we looked over the vigorous stock indoors and planted outside, between the houses, for early crops, following which sweet peas are sown for spring flowering. Golden Glow is first, Monrovia next and then Bonaffon, which is a favorite with all.

Murphy & Schaumburg, at Poughkeepsie, were busy cleaning up after the busiest season on record.

Conrad C. Gindra, of Poughkeepsie, has his modern plant in excellent shape. Violets look promising.

West Newburgh was next on the program. Here the Newburgh Floral Co. was found adding one house, for bulb forcing, which is quite a factor with this firm.

The modern plant of the Yuess Gardens Co. is close by. Percy Herbert, the able grower, is justly proud of the thrifty stocks of mums and carnations. A fine storage shed and barn are being built. Downtown the store is being decorated, in keeping with a general plan being carried out by all the progressive merchants, in celebration of Hudson-Fulton week, which is expected to just pour the shekels into someone's treasury. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

BEAR in mind that Easter, 1910, falls on March 27, two weeks earlier than last year.

MANY subscribers save the bother of renewal, and at the same time insure not missing a copy of the REVIEW, by sending $2, $3 or occasionally $5, instead of the $1 that pays for a single year's subscription.

THERE is complaint by far western florists that eastern houses use unnecessarily heavy boxes in packing plant shipments, thereby transferring much of the florist's possible profit to the express companies.

THE confidence which the president-elect of the S. A. F. has in the White Killarney rose is shown by the fact that the F. R. Pierson Co. has planted 25,000 of it at its place at Scarborough for cut flowers for the New York market.

LATANIA BORBONICA is about as much out of fashion as hoop-skirts are. J. G. Crozer, Dubuque, Ia., says he still has on hand some of the larger latanias he bought at the auction in Chicago when Albert Fuchs went out of business years ago.

THE holding of joint annual meetings by the American Rose Society and American Carnation Society, as proposed at the Cincinnati convention of the S. A. F., will meet with the approval of practically every man who attends either of these meetings.

MAGAZINE WORK.

(The appeal.)

Dear Editor: I'd like to do
Work for your magazine;
I've wrote in verse to show you that
In such I am not green.
I can do stories just as well,
In fact, most anything;
If you would like to try me on,
Just let me know the string.

(The answer.)

Dear Sir: You say you'd like to work
Upon our magazine?
Then hustle out and get some "subs,"
'Twould help us most, I ween.
Inclosed find blanks, which are for "prose."
Don't worry o'er the verse;
We answer, too, in rhyme, to show
That we are not so worse.
—Boston Herald

OBITUARY.

John W. Dunlop.

John Wilson Dunlop, Milwaukee's first professional florist, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. C. Martin, at Wauwatosa, Wis., September 1; he was 96 years of age. Mr. Dunlop was in excellent health up to within the past few months, and remained active until three years ago. Last winter he sustained a fall which injured his hip, and since then he had not been as robust, but only a few days ago his strength began to fail and he took to his bed. Mr. Dunlop was to have been the guest of honor at the Juneau dinner of the Pioneers' Association September 14, to celebrate the anniversary of the coming of Juneau to Milwaukee in 1818.

John W. Dunlop was born in the parish of Cragie, near Tarbolton, Ayrshire, Scotland, October 16, 1813. He learned his trade as a gardener at a nearby castle, Caprington, and upon finishing his apprenticeship took charge of an estate with houses and ground in and near London. About 1840 he came to America, locating in Milwaukee, where he resided ever since with the exception of a couple of years spent near Sacramento, Cal. Soon after his arrival in Milwaukee he established himself as a florist and he raised flowers in Milwaukee for a great many years, first being established on the square directly east of Notre Dame convent, later on the west side of Jackson street in the block directly north of the court house and finally at the Rose Hill nursery near Forest Home cemetery.

Mr. Dunlop was a member of the council from the district now known as the Eleventh and Fourteenth wards a great many years ago, and obtained the establishment of a public school on Forest Home avenue. He was connected with the sheriff's office off and on for a matter of ten years either as deputy or undersheriff.

Since locating in America he made one trip to his home in Scotland, and drove across the plains to California at the head of a little expedition of his own, returning a couple of years later via Nicaragua and New York. A great many years later he visited California again, but by means of a much faster mode of transportation. He went to Washington, D. C., a few years ago to visit the botanical gardens and Smithsonian Institute and talk Burns with that great collector of Burnsiana, Wm. R. Smith.

For a number of years after retiring from business Mr. Dunlop was superintendent of Juneau park.

Mr. Dunlop was married in 1848 to Miss Ann Eliza Griswold. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ann Dunlop, 80 years of age; a daughter, four sons, sixteen grandchildren and ten great grandchildren.

The funeral was held September 3. The floral offerings from the Old Settlers' Club, the Milwaukee Pioneers' Association, the Board of Public Works, under which Mr. Dunlop served many years, and from other organizations and private individuals were notably beautiful.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The business done in this market during the last seven days has been entirely satisfactory, and many houses report that the week has given them the best business they ever had at the opening of September.

The weather conditions have been such that the production of stock has been curtailed, while quality has been improved. The result has been an acceleration of the demand; a greater increase than usually comes at this season, because of the unusually cool weather and the fact that crops are light not only in the vicinity of Chicago, but in places that draw at least a part of their supply from this market. The increase in demand, while it has been sufficient to take up all flowers of usable quality, has not been such as to produce any special change from the summer prices previously quoted, ex-

Our arrangements for the current season make us especially strong on

Killarney

The leading Rose on this market

No other rose ever so captured the Trade and the public. The demand for it is so heavy we have had to largely increase our supply each season. We have so added to our supply that Killarney is now our strongest specialty. We want every buyer to understand that for 1909-10 there is no other house in this market can compete with us on Killarney, either for quantity or quality. Cuts are now coming on and will soon be heavy.

Finest Quality :: Largest Quantity

Beauties

We have for years supplied the best Beauties, day after day and season after season, to be had in this market. The stock still is of superior quality and the supply is larger than ever. You always can get good Beauties if you order of us. Do it today.

Kaiserin—Maryland

There are no better white roses in market than our Kaiserin, and for pink our My Maryland are coming stronger every day. Our supply of Summer Roses is better than ever before—sure to please—and we want to hear from all the buyers who want the best stock and best service.

Asters

This week we are shipping the finest Asters of the year—the late varieties are in strong; the stock is much better than it was early in the season.

Besides the finest outdoor stock we have Asters grown under glass that are special fancy and meet the needs of the most critical trade.

Mums

Golden Glow, yellow, and October Frost, white, now ready. Order Mums of us if you wish the best stock. Advance orders desirable.

Green Goods

The best Ferns in the market, in unlimited quantity. Asparagus bunches, Smilax, Farleyense, Adiantum and all other greens in quantity. Asparagus strings are scarce. New crop Leucothoe ready.

cept possibly in carnations, which are bringing much better average prices than a year ago, largely because of the shortage of good asters. White roses also command a little premium.

The Beauty market is well cleaned up. Crops have not come on as rapidly as the growers would like. The medium length stems, which are a rather larger proportion of the receipts than usual, are generally of good quality, though, of course, buds are not of either midwinter size or color; however, the demand is so good that the stock does not tarry long in the wholesale houses. The production of roses has been light during the spell of cool weather, and everything in the rose line has met with good sale. There are more Killarney than any other one variety, and it is the best selling item, but the special call has been for white, and it has not at all times been possible to fill all orders with a satisfactory grade of stock. Kaiserin is still the best white rose. Some excellent White Killarney are received, referring to other qualities than color; this rose has not yet become really white. There are small quantities of Mrs. Jardine of excellent length and size of flower. Many growers are cutting My Maryland, but it generally is short in stem as yet. Richmond is not much of a factor at the moment.

There are some really first-class asters, but a majority of the stock is of poor quality. The supply of asters this fall is nowhere near so great as it usually is at this season. The best stock brings about 4 cents, with a little more for some special indoor flowers, and the lower grades bring better prices than the same quality has in other years. Outdoor carnations have profited by the shortage of asters. Considerable quantities now are received of both field-grown and early benched carnations. The stems are gradually lengthening, but the stock is yet nothing to brag about. It is, however, bringing excellent prices.

There is just a little more life in the demand for chrysanthemums, and the retailers show a little more willingness to pay the price for the best stock. Supplies are not large, but orders generally can be filled if a few hours' notice is given.

The market has been shy on Easter lilies and valley the last few days, the shortage having been so sharp that a good many orders have been unfilled and lilies have been shipped out in the close bud state. There has been a momentary rise in price on both lilies and valley, but new batches will be in before many days have passed.

The gladiolus has ceased to be much of a factor; they don't sell. Augusta still is received in considerable quantity, and is the best seller. Dahlias are arriving, but are poor sale. Hydrangeas are received in considerable quantity and sell fairly well to those who have decorations.

There is some question of the supply of green goods this fall, especially strings of smilax and asparagus, which the decorators are now looking for. Wild smilax is here; also new crop leucothoe and new crop green galax.

Pink and White.

Thus far in its experience on this market the Killarney rose has commanded a better price than other roses—possibly twenty-five per cent more than Maid or Bride. What with the steadily increased planting of Killarney, an increase notably heavy this summer, and the planting of My Maryland in considerable quantity, this question arises:

Will Killarney this season continue to command a relatively better price than other roses, or will the abundance of pink set the average price of Killarney back with the others, or will Bride and White Killarney step to the front in the matter of price?

Club Meeting.

H. N. Bruns occupied the chair at the meeting of the Florists' Club at the Union Restaurant September 2, President Asmus being out of town. There was an attendance of about thirty.

B. Zima and A. W. Morgan were elected to membership, and the proposals included C. M. Dickinson, W. E. Lynch and Clifford Pruner, all three of the house of E. H. Hunt; H. S. Garland, of Des Plaines, and O. J. Friedman.

J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, was a visiting member, and talked of old times, when he was a regular attendant. W. N. Rudd threw some interesting sidelights on the Cincinnati convention, and proposed that the club consider inviting among the thousands present being practically all the gardeners and cut flower growers in the north end. The cut flower display was staged under the direction of N. J. Wietor, and the most notable feature possibly was the vase of Mrs. Jardine rose in his firm's exhibit. The judges were J. B. Deamud, William Kidwell and T. E. Waters. They awarded Wietor Bros. five firsts on roses, Beauties, Richmond, Bride, White Killarney and Mrs. Jardine, and second on Kaiserin. On carnations they won first on Victory, Winsor, White Perfection, Enchantress and White Lawson. Adam Zender was first for Kaiserin and Killarney, second for Bride and Richmond. Fischer Bros., of Evanston, were first on cannas and second on a display of palms and decorative plants. Nick Reding, of Rogers Park, was first on palms and on geraniums. Joseph Parmentier, also of Rogers Park, was first for cockscomb. Vaughan's Seed Store received honorable mention for a collection of fifty varieties of perennials. The John C. Moninger Co. put up a boiler and Messrs. Kurowski, Rupp and McKay were in attendance at the exhibit.

August Weather.

The general impression of August is that it was a cool, pleasant summer month, but the weather man says that with the single exception of 1906 and 1900, which beat it by a single degree, it was the warmest in the history of the weather office—the mean temperature was 75 degrees, while 71 degrees is the average for the last thirty-nine years. The rainfall was 6.20 inches, just double the average for the last thirty-nine years, but at the same time there was an unusually high percentage of possible sunshine, on nine days the sun being unobscured 100 per cent of the time it was above the horizon.

Various Notes.

John Mangel has rebuilt and extended his show windows to the edge of the sidewalk, so as to get better display.

O. J. Friedman was 43 years of age September 2, and had several guests for luncheon at the Hofbrau. The affair was most enjoyable in every way, and were it the rule for each retailer and wholesaler to observe his natal anniversary in the same way it would lead to better fellowship in the trade. Mr. Friedman's guests were John B. Deamud, John Poehlmann, C. L. Washburn, E. Wienhoeber, A. Lange and T. C. Yarnell.

Prof. Wm. Crocker, of the University of Chicago, has been conducting experiments to test the effect of gas leaking in the streets adjoining greenhouses, as happened with John Lang and H. Bauske under conditions that caused them large loss. Prof. Crocker's experiments were made with the carnation. He found that gas causes open flowers to go to sleep, and that it prevents the buds from opening at all. The one valuable result of the experiments is the demonstration that one part of gas in 80,000 parts of air is enough to cause injury.

Wendland & Keimel, at Elmhurst, are beginning to cut Killarney and Richmond, and soon will be on with a good crop. This season they have seven houses, 27x200, against three last season, two houses of Richmond and five of Killarney. When seen at E. C. Amling's September 4, Mr. Wendland said they had just invested $7,000 in ten acres of land adjoining their property and had broken ground for three more houses 27x200, to be completed by March 1, for planting to White Killarney in case one bench of it now on the place behaves in approved fashion this winter.

The J. A. Budlong estate is cutting Mrs. Jardine rose of exceptional quality.

E. H. Hunt is clearing a large space at the front of the store preparatory to building a glass enclosed sample room, in which it is planned to tastefully display a sample of every item carried in the supply department.

Heim Bros., at Blue Island, have repaired the damage done by the big hail storm last spring, and have the place all planted to roses, Richmond, Killarney, Maid and Bride. Their original intention was to plant part of the place to carnations, and they had the stock in the field for that purpose, when they changed their minds and decided to go in exclusively for roses. The field-grown carnation plants have proved to be excellent property. In repairing the damage done by the storm the Heim boys themselves erected a new 80-foot brick stack.

The A. L. Randall Co. is receiving White Killarney in considerable quantity and good length of stem. A few My Maryland also are received.

Percy Jones says that explorations indicate that practically every grower has his place in splendid shape, and that this market may look for larger and better supplies this season than in any previous year.

Field-grown carnations continue in excellent demand. What happened with many of the growers is shown by the loss of 20,000 plants in the field at Capt. Schuttler's place at Wilmette.

George Asmus reached home September 4 from his vacation. From Cincinnati he went to Cedar Rapids and other Iowa places, thence to St. Louis for a few days, and then home.

Vaughan & Sperry have added a plant department temporarily to their business. One of their growers needed room more than he did a bench of nice araucarias, so he sent them in to be sold.

The work of fitting up the rooms in the Atlas block for Hoerber Bros. and Kyle & Foerster is progressing rapidly. The stores will be among the finest in the wholesale section.

Peter Reinberg is cutting Perle in considerable quantity. This is a rose no longer generally grown for this market, but for which there is frequently excellent demand.

C. W. McKellar and Mrs. McKellar returned September 5 from their visit with friends in Michigan. They made the trip of 163 miles by auto in one day. Dendrobium formosum also returned to McKellar's this week.

E. S. Thompson, South Haven, Mich., was in town September 6 and says frost last week nipped the dahlias, but not enough to hurt. North of Grand Rapids it was reported to him the frost was heavy enough to kill corn.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. uses the corrugated pasteboard boxes exclusively for shipping stock from Morton Grove, the saving in express being considerable. They have had crates made in which the empties are packed knocked down as they accumulate at the store. When a crate is filled, with some fifty boxes, it is shipped back to the greenhouses by freight.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has issued its fall list of bulbs, plants and shrubs. The business in August is reported as much better than a year ago, and September starting briskly. Among the specialties handled are the primulas of Alois Frey.

Among the week's visitors have been Prof. Adolph Buysseus, of the University of Vilfordt, whom the Belgian government has sent to this country to study floricultural methods, and especially the carnation industry; J. A. Peterson, president of the Cincinnati Florists' Society; E. H. R. Green, president of the Green Floral & Nursery Co., Dallas, Tex.; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; Walter Retzer, St. Louis; M. PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pittsburg is beginning to feel the wave of prosperity which is traveling over the country, and is almost herself again. Of course the florist has not much to brag of at this time, but he sees it coming. The last season was a fair average year, but now all are looking for great things, and, as all have had their vacations and are feeling an excess of energy, some get impatient and want to jump right into the regular winter rush, but while it is not here business is showing improvement over last year at this time. The few cool days and nights have shortened up stock, but there is no scarcity.

Various Notes.

Oliver Crissman, of Punxsutawney, Pa., who has been visiting Seattle and other points in the west, returned last week and says there are still grand opportunities out there for the young man with ambition. However, he does not think any less of Punxsutawney.

Charles Eisner started for a western trip Thursday, September 2. He has no special destination, and will keep moving until he satisfies that "wanderlust," when he will return with renewed energy to push his several lines of business.

A number of wholesalers have been considering the advisability of forming an association, such as they have in the east, to enable them to collect slow accounts, and particularly to prevent skinners from getting credit divided among the various houses up to the point where it pays to fail.

Will Faulk spent his vacation at Rocky Roost, where he was compelled to live on a diet of chicken and eggs, but he came home looking well.

Good carnation plants seem to be the one scarce thing in this section, as most of the growers were a little short on finishing planting.

Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, was a visitor. It is thought he is looking for gasoline for his auto.

Uncle John Wyland has just returned from the Pacific slope. His youth has been renewed, and now he would like to sell his Allison Park place and return to the west.

George R. Elliott, youngest son of B. A. Elliott, who for years was one of the leading florists of our city, was shot by MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Market conditions last week were fair. Business was not rushing; yet there was enough doing, when one considers the time of the year, so that there was no real cause for complaint. With the opening of all schools and colleges September 7, a number of the folks returned from their summer homes, and thus it will not be long till social functions, which create a demand for flowers, will again be under way.

At present good asters are scarce and sell well, causing a fine opening for good, clean carnations, even though the stems are still short. All in all, the aster market for this season, both in quality and quantity, is far behind that of previous years. The supply of roses is about equal to demand, with a brisk demand for Beauties.

Club Meeting.

The main topic of discussion at the last club meeting, held September 2, was the fall flower show. Several members of the executive committee outlined some of their plans and tried to make it clear that it is only with the good will and assistance of each member that this affair can be made a success.

Owing to the lack of the time which the office demands, M. P. Vallier, secretary of the club, handed in his resignation. It was accepted and Eugene Oestreicher was elected to fill out the balance of the term.

Various Notes.

The Wisconsin State Fair will take place September 13 to 17, and we will then have as our guest President Taft. Although his stay at the fair will be brief, it undoubtedly will help swell the attendance.

Robert Zepnick, on Lincoln avenue, is having the interior of his store tinted in cream, and, with its gilded furnishings, it will present quite a neat appearance.

The Market.

Business is quiet. A little funeral work makes about all the business there is.

The supply of flowers is equal to the demand, for not many are needed. Good stock is scarce. Asters, perhaps, are the exception; while there is no glut of them, they are seen in quantity. Most of them are second-grade. White roses are scarce. Beauties are coming in, perhaps, in larger supply than any other roses, but few long stems are seen as yet. All of the foregoing are in good demand.

Gladioli are still in the running, but sweet peas are about down and out. The new-crop carnations are appearing, but in a limited supply. A few chrysanthemums are seen at some of the stores.

Belated Convention News.

Those who attended the convention are slowly returning, and are sought out and interviewed by those who remained behind. All report having had a fine time, as the Cincinnati brothers did all they could to make the visit a pleasant one.

The president's reception at the Zoo gardens was a success. It is a beautiful place and well kept. The fireworks were much enjoyed. The illustrated poem, "Hiawatha," acted by real Indians, was also greatly appreciated.

The bowling of the Denver bunch turned out as well as was expected, and was not bad for a lot of "bum" bowlers. However, one of the team men won prizes, and another man won second prize in the individuals.

The Park Floral Co. was well represented at the convention, the delegation including President Valentine, R. Kurth, W. D. Smith, G. H. Cooper, as well as the ladies of the party.

Fort Collins, Colo., was represented by Mr. and Mrs. Warren, and Colorado Springs by Ed. Johnson, of the Pike's Peak Floral Co. Among others from this vicinity were: A. H. Bush, who was accompanied by Mrs. Bush, for Daniels & Fisher; Emil Glauber, of the Montclair Greenhouses; C. F. Maler, C. A. Benson, Henry Wislander and E. S. Kennedy, of the Alpha Floral Co.

The trip to Chicago was ideal in its pleasurable features, thanks to President Valentine being due for the charming manner in which it was arranged. To express their appreciation of the many courtesies shown them, the party presented to President Valentine, on his arrival at Cincinnati, a handsome cut glass vase.

The Chicago florists are also thanked most cordially for the way in which they contributed to the enjoyment of the Denver delegates on the president's special from Chicago to Cincinnati.

ST. PAUL.

State Florists' Association.

The State Florists' Association held its annual meeting at Holm & Olson's store September 2. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Theo. Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, A. S. Swanson, Merriam Park; secretary, Jerry P. Jorgenson, Minneapolis; treasurer, E. Nagel, Minneapolis. Executive committee, A. J. Smith, Minneapolis; L. R. Cady, St. Anthony Park; O. J. Olson, St. Paul; S. D. Dysinger, St. Paul.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $49.96.

An amendment to the by-laws, making the annual dues $2 instead of $5, was proposed and will be voted on at the next meeting.

The regular monthly meeting will be held at the hall, 510 North Snelling avenue, on Tuesday evening, September 20. X. Y. Z.

CONWAY, MASS.—C. C. Flagg has torn down his old greenhouse and is erecting another in its place.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Charles Long, the veteran landscape gardener, seedsman and florist, has been a resident of this city since February, 1865. He has been a gardener since 1842. After his arrival in Rochester he worked some time for Ellwanger & Barry, at the Mount Hope Nursery. Mr. Long is now 80 years old.

Niessen's News Column

Beauties

The best, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

Plenty of medium sizes at $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 per doz.

Dahlias

$2.00 to $3.00 per 100.

All the best varieties in season.

We are booking orders now for regular shipments direct from the grower. Our dahlias are carefully selected and well packed.

Try a sample shipment.

Wild Smilax

$6.00 per case.

We now carry a small stock of it on hand and can ship a few cases on receipt of order. You will find our southern smilax of better quality than the stock usually offered.

Asters

The choicest stock in the market at $1.50 to $2.00 per 100.

Also a good grade at $1.00 per 100.

We have not handled a better grade of asters nor larger quantities of them than this season.

Carnations

$1.50 and $2.00 per 100.

The quality is improving; flowers fair, but stems somewhat short.

FALL FLOWERS

DAHLIAS The showiest flower for decorative purposes can now be had in crimson, scarlet, orange, yellow, white and variegated, and in many shades of these colors, in a variety of beautiful forms. Our specialist promises a fine crop of Dahlias from now until frost and we can supply them in quantity of any color desired at moderate prices.

COSMOS Giant flowers, long stems, pink, white and red, very decorative.

ASTERS will be an important fall flower for a week or so yet, splendid stock, purple, white, pink, most attractive to all flower lovers.

WILD SMILAX for the decorator.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market, while quiet, shows signs of improvement. There was a little flurry in Beauty roses Saturday, September 4, which was felt Monday, despite the holiday, the retailers who had experienced the demand buying for stock. The better grades were most popular, indicating that the best flower buyers are returning home. There was some shipping, in which cattleyas and valley shared in favor with Beauties.

The aster season appears to be past its height, to judge from the relative proportions of fancy and low grade flowers. One large shipper of asters to this market has not yet commenced cutting, but nearly everyone else's best flowers have been shipped. Dahlias are just coming into their glory. Indications point to a splendid crop of fancy flowers with the aid of some rain soon. The dahlia vanguard is here. They have not reached their proper position and are selling cheaply. Cosmos is good, but, like dahlias, cosmos is hardly in season before the middle of September. Cattleyas continue scarce and high, with the promise of increased supplies when labiata comes into bloom.

Carnations are improving. The standard varieties can generally be obtained with nice flowers and reasonably long stems. The demand for these continues light, while asters are so fine.

The rose list has been strengthened by White Killarney. For some time this rose has been a disappointment, the color in warm weather having an unwashed appearance most unattractive to behold. The cool nights, combined with skillful handling, have overcome this defect, some nice flowers now being seen. Richmond, too, is improving as the season advances. Neither of these roses can yet be had in quantity equal to Maryland, Kaiserin, Killarney, Bride or Maid.

The supply of gladiolus is decreasing. Choice stock is at times difficult to obtain. Easter lilies are apparently off crop. There is a good assortment of outdoor flowers. Greens are quiet.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, held September 7, John Westcott and Leo Niessen spoke on the Cincinnati convention. Nominations for officers for the ensuing year were as follows: President, Joseph Heacock; vice-president, Alfred Burton; treasurer, George Craig; secretary, David Rust.

A Rose Garden.

Nobody who pretends to know anything about matters floricultural would advise you to go down to Riverton to see roses; they would send you there to see palms and ferns, hardy perennials and aquatics, unless, indeed, it be in the spring when the roses are just bursting into leaf to be shipped away to all parts of the country before the flower buds show. Yet, curiously enough, the first thing that George A. Stroblein said to a visitor the other day was: "Shall we take a look at the rose garden?" His smile said more clearly than words: "I have a treat for you." It was a treat. There were 268 varieties of roses planted out in rows, three or four of each variety to a row. It was the last week in August, yet they were nearly all in full bloom, bearing silent testimony to the popularity of the hybrid tea class over all others. It was a beautiful sight. There were all, at least so many that it seemed to be all, of the older varieties and many of the new ones side by side, giving most valuable opportunities for comparison under similar conditions. Think of seeing Mme. Jules Grolez, Mme. Caroline Testout and Killarney together.

The gem of the collection was the Lyon rose, introduced by Pernet-Ducher in 1908, a cross between Mme. Meldine Soupert and an unnamed seedling of Soleil d'Or, awarded a gold medal at Paris in 1907. This I gleaned from Mr. Stroblein, with many another bit of interesting information about the roses, their ancestry, their quality and their habits. The Lyon rose—I remember well reading the description when the medal was awarded, 100 points (an unheard-of number), and after thought I decided, as we all do in a self-opinionated way, that such a med-

Opening of the Dahlia Season

The Dahlia has come rapidly to the front as a cut flower of late years and is now indispensable in every well conducted flower store. Many new and beautiful varieties have been introduced recently, most of which we have tried out for cut flower purposes, and our experience in that connection is one of value. We recommend only such as are of

- 1st, superior lasting quality,
- 2d, of good form,
- 3d, good stem, and
- 4th, good clear color.

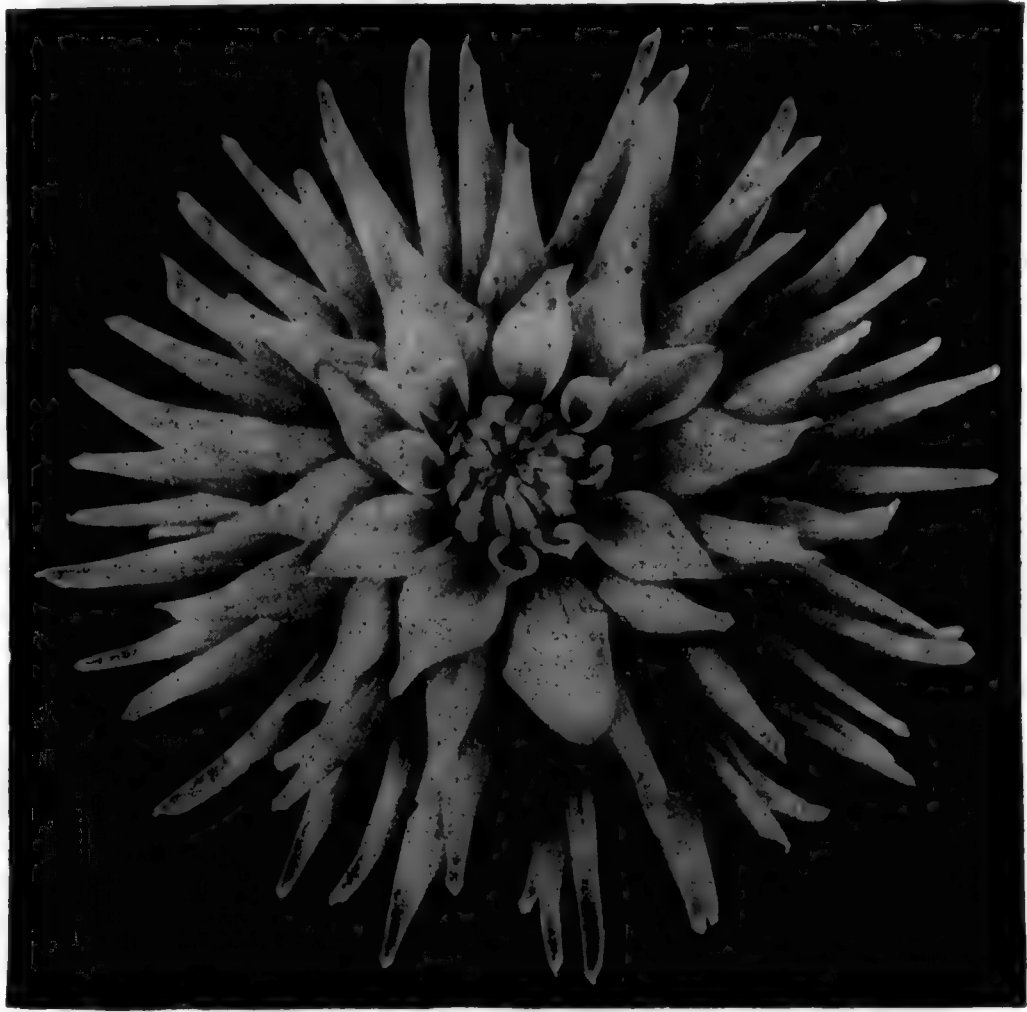

We represent the principal growers of Acto and Hammonton and others in this vicinity and can offer unexcelled service.

The earlier varieties are now arriving in fine condition and we will have a regular supply of the later sorts as the season advances.

We offer for this season

Storm King, Perle d'Or and Snowclad, among the whites; Livoni and Sylvia, pink; Agnew, Lyndhurst and Red Hussar, crimson; Arabella and Bruton, yellow.

$2.00 and $2.50 per 100.

We will also have a limited supply of Jack Rose, the brilliant new crimson, and Delice, the beautiful new pink decorative, the greatest keeper of them all, which we can furnish at $4.00 per 100.

NOTE:—As the supply of the last two varieties is very limited, orders should be placed as much in advance as possible.

Various Notes.

Edmund A. Harvey was married to Miss Flemming, of West Philadelphia, September 8. The happy couple will reside at Brandywine Summit, where Mr. Harvey has built up a splendid reputation as a grower of fine carnations.

M. Rice & Co. report the following visitors: John Ratcliffe, of Ratcliffe & Tanner, Richmond, Va.; C. D. Mills, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miniborya Farm Flower Shop, Richmond, Va.; M. J. Connell, of Shepard Co., Providence, R. I.; Miss Mary Smith, of Baltimore, Md.

Edward Reid left for the west September 5. He will do a little business and let us hope he will have a little recreation, for Mr. Reid is a hard worker.

John Berger returned September 4 from a business and pleasure trip to New England. Mr. Berger said it was too soon to talk about business, but he was enthusiastic over the fishing.

Daniel E. Gorman, of Williamsport, Pa., was a visitor here last week. He came in the interests of the citizens of his town as well as in his own interest.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have the entire machinery on the road, in the factory and in the warehouse running smoothly, with the merchant prince himself at the helm.

Frank Ross opens a new store at 13 South Sixtieth street, West Philadelphia, this week. Mr. Ross will conduct this store in person; his store at 206 East Grand avenue will be continued.

Victor Groshens, of Glenside, believed to be the largest White Killarney grower in this section, has begun cutting from ley of colors might suit a Frenchman but would not do here, and dismissed the matter. This first sight of the Lyon rose made me feel that perhaps those French judges were not so far wrong after all; at any rate it would bear watching as a novelty of merit, the colors being remarkably clear and soft for a rose grown in the open air.

We spent fully an hour in that rose garden, just walking down one frame of 2-year-olds and back the other frame of yearlings, and it was an hour I shall long remember with pleasure. It is difficult to tell you much about it; better go there and see them, or, better still, have a rose garden of your own, perhaps not on so large a scale, where you can grow your favorite hybrid teas of several varieties side by side.

The new tariff has materially increased the duties on florists' supplies.

The Henry F. Michell Co. is about to begin work on its seed testing greenhouse, to be erected at Torresdale. Frederick J. Michell is enjoying a short respite from his hard work.

William J. Baker paid his long promised visit to Thornhedge, September 2. Henry Bauer and Frank Gaul were his escorts.

John W. McIntyre returned from the south September 4. He speaks favorably of the national capital as a floral center, with Gude Bros. Co. in the usual role of both leading growers and leading retailers.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report awakening activity in both anthracite and bituminous coal.

B. Eschner says the orders are heavier than ever before, compelling overtime to keep up.

James C. Clark says that popular favor is centering on Nephrolepis Scottii, with N. Whitmani as leader among the crested sorts. The new claimant, N. Scholzei, is coming forward rapidly.

Paul J. Klingsporn, who returned from Florida some time ago, has been seen once more in the wholesale centers. His time has been devoted to moving pictures rather than to moving flowers.

September has brought as fine a sample of seasonable fall weather as could have been made to order. Its good effect is seen in the improving quality of the stock now reaching the wholesale market and in the perfection of the late asters and gladioli, both of which are at their best after the needed rains.

most encouraging sign of awakening is the general repairing, repainting and activity that betokens faith in the coming season and assurance of an aggressive campaign. It will be the liveliest ever known in this lively center. The retail department of the business is also about ready for the revival. New stores are opening rapidly and the old ones are being redecorated and made ready for the promised prosperity which now seems assured. With the openings of theaters and schools, and the Hudson celebration, which will bring hundreds of thousands of visitors to New York and cause numberless dinners and other social events, the outlook for the immediate future is bright.

The best Beauties and, in fact, the selected roses of every kind, already feel the influence of the times and are in improved demand. There is a great abundance of mediocre stock arriving, short-stemmed roses and carnations and common asters and gladioli, that no price can be accurately quoted for, and that is sold in bulk to street men or jobbers, and by the wagon-load, at any figure the auto-crats of the department stores may see fit to offer, a demoralizing state of affairs that seems to have no remedy while the law of supply and demand continues.

Fortunately, there is the promise of a great business this fall and winter, and the flooding of the market will see its finish as soon as the chrysanthemums are gone. The first arrivals of these, the Golden Glow, may already be seen in the windows of the up-to-date retailers, and selected stock last week touched at times $2 per dozen. It will be some weeks before the market will feel seriously the inflow of the autumn queen.

Dahlias are here again in larger volume, and will soon be reckoned with as a serious factor in an overstocked market, the best varieties only being assured of remunerative value. Splendid asters from local growers and the Rochester shippers command attention now, and prices for these are more encouraging. Orchids and gardenias are scarce and high. Every variety of lilies is abundant, and as to hydrangeas and golden rod, the sooner a killing frost comes and the market is relieved of all outdoor burdens the better.

Various Notes.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Retail Florists' Association September 7 it was decided to hold a smoker Friday, September 17, at Reisenweber's, on Fifty-eighth street, to which the mayor and prominent city officials will be invited as well as leading retailers in all the suburban towns. An elaborate vaudeville program will be arranged. The committee consists of Messrs. Bowe, Warendorff and Klausner. The association now numbers sixty-five members.

Wertheimer Bros. say fall business is starting in so well in ribbons and chiffons that it was necessary to work overtime every night last week.

Monday, September 13, the fall reunion of the Florists' Club takes place at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on West Twenty-third street. This first meeting of the new year will be one of the most important the club has ever held.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., the secretary of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, said early this week that the response to the invitations to that society's outing Thursday, September 9, means a record crowd. Chairman Miller is a great manager, and the committee has an elaborate program, including one of John King Duer's famous clam bakes, and numerous prizes for the bowlers.

The new store at Forty-eighth street and Madison avenue, a short distance above Charles A. Dards' place, will be opened by September 15, and the enterprise will be known as the Alfred T. Bunyard Floral Co.

The fall fairs of Islip, L. I., and Red Bank, N. J., last week were tremendous successes. Never have such crowds been seen at the agricultural shows. This week the great fair known as the Tri-Centennial is in progress at Dongan Hills, Staten Island. September 4 the fair was opened, on the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Staten Island by Hendrick Hudson. Many of the New York florists and seedsmen have been attending.

The annual affliction of hay fever is making life miserable in the wholesale section. Several of the craft are sneezing their heads off, and some are recovering in higher altitudes. Phil Kessler is in Canada; A. M. Henshaw has completed his western trip, and Mr. and Mrs. Dailedouze are touring beyond the Rockies.

Charles H. Brown will shortly open his new store between Eighty-sixth and Eighty-seventh streets on Broadway, in the Belnord, the largest apartment house in the world. It will have the largest show window in the city, and is being elaborately fitted in white and gold. Mr. Brown will continue his branch on Columbus avenue, opposite the Museum of Natural History.

Gilmore Clarke, of David Clarke's Sons, has returned from his summer at Ragnet Lake, in the Adirondacks. Marshall Clarke and family are home from a holiday in the Thousand Islands. Fred Lentz and wife, in his motor boat, have been doing New England and Maine resorts, and Gus Koppel and family have returned from a two weeks' outing at Asbury Park. The firm is getting ready for a big season. They have a big wedding at Great Neck this week, and have built another greenhouse this summer at their Bronx headquarters.

Warendorff, of the Ansonia, had the decoration in honor of Edison at Brier Cliff Inn last week, at which 1,000 Beauties, 4,000 Killarney and 4,000 white asters were used. Over 5,000 electric lights were used in the table decoration. Mr. Edison himself said he never saw a more beautiful floral display. Mrs. Warendorff, now celebrating her seventy-third birthday, gave the work her personal attention. This lady, who may appropriately be called the mother of florists, has just returned from a two months' tour of Europe, alone, visiting all the large cities of France, Germany and England. She declares, with the exception of Paris, American floricultural art leads the world. She purchased many novelties. Victor Warendorff has returned from a long fishing trip in the Rowena with a 19-pound muscullonge among his trophies.

Christatos & Koster in a few days will open their new store at 717 Madison avenue. It is one of the neatest and prettiest in the city, and has at the back a good-sized conservatory. This firm has had a successful season at Long Branch, where at West End their enterprise has no competition. The store in New York is fitted up by the Foster Mansfield Co.

N. Christatos, at Fifty-eighth street and Sixth avenue, has opened a branch store at the corner of Eighty-third street and Columbus avenue, which is one of the largest in that section, and two blocks above the handsome store of Mengham & Westwood.

H. Slinn, Jr., has rented the store on the ground floor of the Coogan building, next door to Charles Millang.

Scherer & Co. have opened their new store at 106 W. Twenty-sixth street, next door to the Geller Florists' Supply Co. They have rented the whole building,

The Market.

Business in our line is still dull, and about the only thing that keeps us a little busy nowadays is funeral work, but we are looking for better trade now that we are turning into the autumn season and the summer tourists are coming home for the opening of the schools.

The receipts at the wholesale houses are not much at present. Stock in the fancy grades is in demand, but there is not much of this grade coming in. The roses that are in are short in stem, but the cool nights will improve them. Carnations, too, are short in stem, with fair flowers. Good asters are still scarce. Some eastern consignments of fair grade are coming in. All the outdoor stock that comes in is of poor quality. Everything is much in need of rain. All greens have a good demand.

The Wholesale Houses.

Our four wholesale houses are looking forward to a big season in their line, and are putting things in shape so as to supply the trade this coming fall and winter with their wants in cut flowers and other stock.

At C. A. Kuehn's place, E. Gerlach and George Schreifer will attend to the wants in the cut flower and supply departments, and Will Mitthoeffer will be the boss in the wire shop.

For the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., "Billy" Smith, Will Assie and Frank Windler will boss the flower and supply departments, and Oscar Kuehn will be in charge of the wire department.

Berning's place will again be in charge of the boss and Otto Bruening, with Miss Bruening as bookkeeper. A large stock of cut flowers and supplies is handled here.

Fred Alves and Albert Gunus, with the boss, will look after the customers at Angermueller's. Here a good quantity of cut stock and supplies is handled. The latter two places have no wire shops.

The above are fully prepared to handle the local as well as shipping trade in good shape this season.

Various Notes.

George Asmus, of Chicago, spent a day with us last week. He was returning home from the convention.

Miss Mattie Schell, the East St. Louis florist, is spending a two weeks' vacation at the northern lakes. A busy week prevented her from attending the convention.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, has given up growing carnations, with which he had such grand success last season. He says he will content himself with growing his new violet and sweet peas.

The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, Ill., is through housing its carnation plants. The firm's new Twentieth Century, a pink variety, is in splendid shape, and great things are expected from it this season. A. S. Halstead, president of the company, says it is the coming carnation.

The Michel Plant & Bulb Co. held an auction sale of plants September 8, for florists only. The sale consisted of 3,000 each of ferns, rubbers and crotons.

The Schuerman Floral Co., of North Grand avenue, has contracted with most of the large downtown stores for decorations during Centennial week, which will be the first week in October.

Miss T. Badaracco reports a busy week with funeral work in large designs.

A. G. Greiner's place, on the Natural Bridge road, which attracts a great many visitors during the summer months, was unusually attractive this year. The front of his place was filled with fancy beds of 20,000 varieties of cactus plants. A lot of new varieties have been added to his already large collection.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., spent a day in the city last week. Mr. Ammann, as usual, will have a large crop of cut flowers for this market this year, which are consigned to Kuehn.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers spent her vacation at the Ozark mountains and is now ready for a busy season.

A. J. Bentzen, president of the Bentzen Floral Co., spent Sunday in Chicago, buying decorative plants for his new show house.

John Quinn and his family are still traveling in California for the benefit of his daughter's health. They will return when the cooler weather sets in.

The St. Louis members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the S. A. F. are much pleased with the selection of Miss Matilda Meinhardt as president of that body, and say she will make an excellent presiding officer.

Garden this year took place September 5. The weather was most beautiful and the attendance numbered nearly 20,000. As usual, the orchid and cactus houses drew the crowds. Superintendent Irish, A. G. Pring, J. H. Thompson and a host of students were on hand to show the visitors all points of interest. Mr. Gurney, at Tower Grove park, close by, also had a great crowd of visitors to view his fine lily ponds, in full bloom. J. J. B.

Miss M. S. Newman, at 3720 Olive street, was visited recently by one of the class of swindlers who tell an affecting story about a dead friend, order flowers for the funeral and present a bogus check in payment. Miss Newman, however, was fortunate enough to lose only $1 in the transaction, unless she places a financial valuation on the sympathy which she wasted on the make-believe mourner.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

The cut flower market was good during the month of August. There were many parties and social functions at the club houses, many visitors from the east having spent the hot summer months here. There was also much funeral work during the month, which is usually one of the dullest of the entire year. Roses and carnations are getting more plentiful than they have been and the quality is improving. Speciosums, albums and rubrums helped out nobly during the summer months. Giganteums were also much used in floral designs. Asters are coming on nicely.

Various Notes.

H. E. Cross, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in the city on business September 2.

The Baur Floral Co. had a pretty window display for Labor day. A panel with the inscription, "Labor omnia vincit," attracted much attention.

Pres., J. O. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

HENRY SALZER, La Crosse, Wis., was a Chicago visitor September 8.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. Herbert Coy, Waterloo, Neb., on a fortnight's trip to New York, Philadelphia and other eastern cities.

HENRY FIELD, president of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., also is president of the Civic Improvement League of his city.

S. F. LEONARD, Chicago, reached home September 4 after a three months' European trip on which he was accompanied by Mrs. Leonard and their daughter.

THE reports from Nebraska are not favorable as regards sweet corn, especially the later varieties, but a great deal will depend on the weather of the next three weeks.

THE frosts in Michigan last week, when the thermometers in the southern tiers of counties registered as low as 28 degrees, certainly have altered the cucumber seed situation if nothing else.

WORK on the principal general seed catalogues is now being pushed. In nearly every case effort is being made for a better book, but in some cases editions will be cut down for 1910.

THE H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, occupied 1,000 square feet of space with a display of seeds, bulbs and garden requisites at the recent big farmers' fair at Chestnut Hill park.

W. W. BARNARD and Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, are at present sojourning at Excelsior Springs, Mo. They intend to visit some of the principal western cities before returning.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, has carried to the Interstate Commerce Commission one of its freight rate claims on which it could not get from the railroad the consideration desired. The complaint was filed September 2.

THE seed bill introduced in the Alabama state legislature has been killed in the senate. A member of the Seed Trade Association from the south writes that they are receiving a good many inquiries regarding this bill, and it will be a matter of interest to the entire trade that the bill is dead.

A BRITISH advertiser offers Liliun longiflorum Formosum as "the best Easter-flowering variety, the best substitute for Harrisii or Azorean longiflorums, and the best variety for retail trade."

CHICAGO has been the point of attack this week for the travelers of leading foreign houses, James Comont, E. J. Deal, S. B. Dicks and Otto H. R. Wiese being in the city within a day or two of each other.

ACCORDING to trials made at the Kansas State Experiment Station, seed may be protected from burrowing animals, NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

WATERLOO, NEB., September 3.—The corn crop throughout the state has undergone a radical change for the worse as a result of recent unfavorable weather conditions. One of the large seed growers here estimates the deterioration in condition as twenty per cent, though he says that in the eastern part of the state the situation is less unfavorable and will average nearly a full crop.

Melons and cucumbers are poor, from one-fourth to half a crop, damaged by green fly and the dry weather. Squash will be a light crop, owing to the dry season and the stalk worm.

On the whole, the situation is not nearly so promising as it was earlier in the season, and it becomes doubtful what part of contract orders can be filled.

FROST IN MICHIGAN.

The Michigan seed growing sections had unseasonably cold weather last week, with frost in some places heavy enough to do considerable damage. As usual in such cases, reports of the injury to crops appear to be exaggerated. How the situation looks to growers in different sections is shown by the following letters:

W. H. Grennell, Saginaw, wrote September 4: "The frost in central Michigan August 29 and September 1 killed beans, corn, potatoes and cucumbers that are not ripe. I estimate late varieties of beans will be very short. It is likely all pole varieties are lost, and on early varieties one-quarter are lost. Peas are coming much shorter than estimates and percentages are out of the question at the present time. This season has been the most disastrous of any in my experience. Snow in May, cloudburst in June, and killing frost in August! Farmers are discouraged and dealers have no profit."

Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, wrote as follows September 4: "The frost on the night of September 1 did considerable damage to cucumbers, late planted potatoes and tomatoes. It also did some damage to late crops of beans, principally the dwarf, green-podded varieties. We can not tell the extent of damage done. The frost was not general throughout the state, and for this reason we do not think it as bad as reported."

Bromfield & Colvin, Bay City, wrote September 4: "Relating to the frost that has hit our territory, we will say sowed ones, but on the other hand the later sowed had such a good stand and a healthy appearance that we were inclined to think that, taking it all in all, we would get a fair crop of beans. Regarding peas we will say that the pea crop

The above is from the original photograph of different types of lily bulbs. There are four distinct kinds, one of which is believed to be the original bulb from which Bermuda Harrisii was derived years ago. Three of these types are now being cultivated from wild grown bulbs, in new soil.

We show these to illustrate that we are looking ahead several years and always searching for new and better lily bulbs. It takes years to work up a crop of a good lily from a small stock, and hardships are often experienced before they can be marketed. Results cannot be foretold, but we are working all the time, regardless of what others may think or do.

The Giganteum at present is probably the best lily bulb in quantities. Our Horseshoe Brand bulbs are dug from the best fields in Japan. They are unexcelled in keeping qualities and there is nothing as good for cold storage purposes. A large part of our bulbs for storage arrive in December and January—late dug bulbs—well matured. That's the kind you need. Think ahead; now is the time to order cold storage bulbs for delivery during 1910 and spring of 1911. Let us know the quantities you can use during the year and we will tell you what they will cost you. There is no real necessity for worrying about the flowering time. When you use cold storage stock you can plant when you please and have lilies at any time throughout the year.

If you grow lilies you ought to be interested, and if so, write us.

with us is turning out very poorly, and in several cases we have been notified by our growers that the peas that they are growing on contract for us are such a poor crop that they are not worth harvesting and in this case we are the total loser. It appears to us that the pea crop will run ten to twenty per cent below the yield of a year ago, which appears to be a fact from the pea crops that we have received up to the present date."

E. L. Olmsted, superintendent of the Wisconsin branch of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., wrote September 5: "In this immediate vicinity no damage has been done to growing crops by cold or frost. The writer has no reports from any of his territory showing such damage. There has, however, been considerable damage done to the bean crops in lower Michigan by frosts."

WADING RIVER, N. Y.

Wading River is sixty miles out on Long Island, near the sound. Here are oaks, elms and sycamores that were old a hundred years ago, and houses built in the eighteenth century, when the Indians were making this their hunting ground. In one of these houses, where his grandfather lived before him, resides E. S. Miller, grower of the gladiolus and of herbaceous plants. Here he cultivates some fifty acres of the choicest bulbs and seeds for the wholesale trade. Twenty-two years ago Mr. Miller was noted for the excellence of his strains of verbena, phlox, balsam and scarlet sage. For fourteen years he was superintendent for John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park. In 1902 Mr. Miller decided to return to his first love and located again in the old homestead built in 1800, and still in an excellent state of preservation and good, he says, for 109 years more.

Mr. Miller's specialties now are gladioli, German and Japanese irises, hardy given to gladioli one-tenth of the land is devoted to seedlings, and for six years he has been selecting new types until now he has many that compare favorably with anything before the public. In these are a pure white, a rich yellow, floriferous and ten perfect flowers in bloom at one time on a single spike; an intense scarlet, and several beautifully variegated ones, also a pink that may fairly be termed a rival of America and which he is advised to call the Dr. Cook, or the North Pole, because it is so near the top in quality. The gladioli are about ready for harvesting and the dry season has been no disadvantage to their growth, cultivation being thorough and constant. Fifteen varieties of lilies are grown here; one immense field of L. tigrinum splendens making a magnificent show from the train windows, covering a full half acre.

Next season a considerable increase in the acreage will be made. The demand this fall is already developing beyond that of other seasons at this date and Mr. Miller says the outlook is most promising. He is an extensive exhibitor at the large horticultural fairs of Long Island and his Giant Neapolitan squash seed is already contracted for. On his trial grounds are seventy-five varieties of pumpkins and squash, every variety known to the trade. He also grows fruit of many kinds, including an orchard of 1,000 peach trees. One and a half miles west of Wading River is the Long Island Experimental Station.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business has kept up remarkably well for the season, and the dealers are much encouraged at the outlook for the next season. There has been an unusual amount of social work, which has been accelerated by theatrical presentations and other features. September 3 the demand commenced for white sweet peas and white asters, and on Saturday this had increased to such an extent that prices at wholesale stiffened considerably. This was on account of the visit of the Italian warship Etruria, for a five-day stay. Not only were corsage bouquets much in demand, but also potted plants and table work for social functions in connection with the visit. Funeral work has also been much on the increase, and the tendency has been for more expensive pieces than usual at this time of the year.

Various Notes.

James Manning, florist for the Apponaug Co., at Apponaug, has a sunflower plant with thirty-seven blossoms, some of which are of huge dimensions, and there are more than forty blooms nearly ready to blossom out, making a total of about eighty blooms.

Alex H. Johnson, city forester, was authorized to establish a nursery at Roger Williams park for providing the city with needed shade trees, at an estimated expense of not exceeding $500.

Hoffman had the decoration for the England-Merry wedding at Pawtucket, September 1.

TOMATOES IN ENGLAND.

I am an English grower, with fruit gardens near Bournemouth. As a subscriber to the REVIEW, I should like to ask what is the cause of rot in tomatoes, starting at the flower end. Please inform me also as to the cause of tomatoes splitting and the cause of tomatoes coloring up nicely except around the stem end. Some of mine seem to keep quite green while the other part is quite ripe.

H. Y.

Blossom end rot or dry rot is generally admitted to be a bacterial disease. It was formerly supposed to be a fungous disease, because fungus (mold) is often seen growing on the black, rotten spots, but this is only because the rotten spots are a suitable place for spores of fungus to locate on and grow.

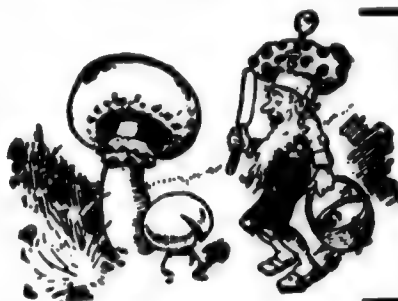

Spraying will not keep the blossom end rot away. It is a disease that flourishes only when the plant is not supplied with sufficient moisture at the roots. If the plant is kept well watered, it can fight off the enemy. I have often had the lowest or first cluster badly affected, but by liberal applications of water have prevented loss of fruit on any of the other clusters. The disease does not worry me in the least any more. When a grower reports to me that some of it is appearing among his plants, I say, "Dig down and you will find the roots are dry in the bottom of the boxes or benches."

As to the splitting of the fruit, tomato fruit will split if wet very much above ground, especially if they have been very dry previously. In rainy periods in summer they split badly outdoors.

I think that the trouble of not ripening properly is a fault of the variety. Some growers like varieties that are slow to ripen around the stem, as they stand transportation better. I have never had trouble with them ripening improperly, but would not like them, even if they did ship better.

I take unusual interest in this inquiry, on account of its coming from a different country. Perhaps my advice will not be found of much value to H. Y., on account of the different conditions, methods, etc. I have had several good English gardeners in my employ, and from them I learn that tomatoes are difficult to grow outside in England, while here any inexperienced person can grow the finest without giving much attention to them. This is the home of the tomato, and it grows as easily as any weed in the garden. In the greenhouses we have more trouble.

For years American growers have been forcing only English varieties. They are decidedly inferior in size, shape and quality to our poorest American varieties, and are never grown outside for that reason, but somehow they yield a little more heavily and seem to do a little better than our own varieties in winter under glass. Perhaps it is because they are from breeds of hothouse grown varieties. However, some native sorts are now being forced inside, and about all imported varieties have been discarded, except Comet and Sutton's. I think that another season will be their last.

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing Cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., \$1.75; lb., \$6.00.

I wish H. Y. or some other progressive English grower would try some of our best varieties and report how they do over there. I will furnish the seed samples if requested, and would be pleased to hear from the inquirer again. We have looked to the English for many good things, and I believe we can return the favor in no better way than by giving them a tip on tomato varieties. It might be possible that they would act differently over there, but it does not seem possible that the difference would be great.

I was somewhat amused recently to see a write-up in an English paper on the Dwarf Champion, an American variety, which is now so far outclassed that it is nearly extinct. It was formerly our best earliest sort, and last winter it seemed to make a good impression on the English writer. I have been wondering what he would think of our good varieties.

I have grown many acres of tomatoes in the fields, and of about all known varieties. After another careful test of thirty varieties this season, I have decided on five varieties as best for me—two early, one medium and two later: Earliana, earliest large; Early Jewel, about ten days later, decidedly better in shape and quality; Globe, a pink variety, third in rotation, and Improved Stone and Matchless for late varieties. Another year I will grow no others, except a few new ones to test them out.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Mrs. M. D. Reimers has returned from a western trip of two months' duration. After visiting the Seattle exposition she spent a week in Santa Rosa, the home of Luther Burbank, whose place was most interesting. San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver and Colorado Springs were visited on the homeward route.

—because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

NAME OF PLANT.

I am mailing you, under separate cover, a sprig of fern, of which we bought a collection about four years ago. We bought it for an Asparagus plumosus nanus, but it is unlike the plumosus proper. We have never seen it catalogued, and we do not know anyone who has seen one like it. Please tell me whether there is any such fern on the market or not, and if so, please state the name of it.

E. M.

The plant in question is Asparagus tenuissimus, a variety that has been in cultivation since 1882. Like A. plumosus, this plant was introduced from South

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Freecias.

The earliest batch of freecias is now well above the ground. These are very useful around the holidays. Keep them either in a coldframe or on a shelf in a light house, where they will do better than if left outdoors. A successional lot of bulbs should now be gotten in. They will appear above the soil much earlier than the first batch and will flower only a few days later. If you are growing for a wholesale market, you will find that freecias at Christmas are usually scarce and bring double the prices realized in January. You can get part of your early batch in for Christmas, if you place your pans in flats on the sunny shelf of a house kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night not later than October 1.

Antirrhinums.

The present is a good time to make a sowing of antirrhinum seeds for early spring flowering. Sow in flats in a cold-

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y., Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

It is stated that the contract for planting the ground belonging to the Spring Valley Water Co., in San Francisco and district, has been given to the McRorie-McLaren Co., of that city. Upwards of 5,000,000 trees will be required for this work, which is expected to extend over a number of years.

PREPARATIONS for a second national apple show, to be held in Spokane, Wash., in December, are now being made. The success of the 1908 exhibition has encouraged growers of the northwestern fruit country, and it is planned, if possible, to make the apple show an annual event. At the 1908 exhibition there were $35,000 in premiums awarded, and more than 100,000 paid admissions to the show. The best carload exhibit of apples got a cash premium of $1,000 and was sold to a firm in Liverpool. It was from Wenatchee, Wash., and contained 630 boxes, or 50,000 apples.

SOUTHERN NURSERYMEN MEET

At the eleventh annual meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association, held at Huntsville, Ala., in August, the following officers were elected:

President, R. C. Berckmans, Augusta, Ga.
Vice-president, W. A. Easterly, Cleveland, Tenn.
Secretary-treasurer, A. L. Smith, Knoxville, Tenn.

It was decided to meet next year at Knoxville, Tenn.

The sessions were held in Elk theater. On the opening day the address of welcome was made by Congressman William Richardson. The response was by Charles T. Smith, of Concord, Ga. The program was as follows:

"The Nurserymen's Part in Making this a Better Country," Hon. N. W. Hale, of Knoxville, Tenn.; "Nurserymen Pulling Together a Little More," by J. H. Dayton, of Palmsville, O.; this paper was read before the American Association at Rochester in June. "The Vital Importance of Spraying Orchards in the South," E. L. Worsham, Atlanta, Ga.; "Stock Raising in Connection with the Nursery Business," J. A. Young, Greensboro, N. C.; "Who is to Blame for the Nurserymen's Troubles?" C. C. Mayhew, of Sherman, Tex.; "The Importance of Educating Our Agents on Varieties Best Adapted to the Localities They are Working," Harry Nicholson, Winchester, Tenn.; "Improved Pecans," R. C. Simpson, of Monticello, Fla.; "The Satsuma Orange," H. K. Miller, Monticello, Fla.; "Our Relation, One to Another," J. R. Mayhew, Waxahatchie, Tex.; "Civic Improvement in Relation to the Nursery Business," O. J. Howard, of Pomona, N. C.

After dinner the opening day the whole party left in carriages for the Fraser Nursery, four miles north of the city, and then back to the Alabama Division of the Chase Nursery, nearer the city.

At the conclusion of the business sessions the nurserymen boarded a train for Chase, where an old-fashioned barbecue was given on the grounds of the Chase Nursery Co. Spring mutton and spring lamb were the principal offerings, and the supply of both was bounteous.

Discussions and reports showed that there has been a notable decrease in the prevalence of San Jose scale, which for several years has been the bane of the fruit nurserymen of this country. Scientific spraying has done the work, and the spraying is shown to be beneficial to the young trees, so the fight against the scale

By reason of the recent purchase of the catalogue business and entire plant stock of Heller Bros., New Castle, Ind., and owing to our increased operations at West Grove, Pa., and Charlotte, N. C., we have come into possession of a number of magnificent new Roses and other new plants of sterling merit, which we will offer to our own trade in 1910, and which would make splendid features for anyone issuing a catalogue. We will furnish full particulars and favorable contract terms on application to anyone interested.

THE BENNETT APPLE.

The Yearbook of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has for a number of years carried an article by W. A. Taylor on "Promising New Fruits." They are none the less interesting that "little known" would be more accurately descriptive than "new." In the Yearbook for 1909 there is a beautiful illustration of the Bennett apple and the following comment:

"This promising new member of the well-known Winesap group of apples originated as a seedling in an old fence row on the premises of S. L. Bennett, Medford, Ore., about 1883. Mr. Bennett cut scions from the seedling about 1893, which he top-grafted into bearing trees on his place. Fruit of it was exhibited at the Charleston exposition in 1902, where it was awarded a gold medal, and at the St. Louis exposition in 1904, where it received a silver medal award. It was first commercially propagated about 1903 by J. S. Barnett, Central Point, Ore., and was commercially introduced by him. It has been considerably planted in the Rogue river valley of Oregon during the last five years, but so far as known has not yet been fruited outside of that section.

"The fruit is roundish conical, often unequal; size large to very large; cavity regular, large, deep, russeted; stem short to medium; basin regular, of medium size, furrowed and downy; calyx segments long, narrow, converging, slightly reflexed at tips; eye medium, closed; surface smooth, gently undulating; color deep yellow, washed with mixed red and brokenly striped with crimson; dots small, yellow, many indented; skin medium thick, tenacious; core of medium size, broad, conical, clasping, closed; seeds small, plump, brown, numerous;

Dr. Clark, the superintendent of the hospital, endeavors to make the grounds the pride of Stockton.

TREE ROSES IN CALIFORNIA.

The growing of roses in the standard or tree shape is a branch of the business that is not followed closely by many of the California growers who handle considerable quantities of them. The imported stock from Europe is not suited to this climate and this fact has been more noticeable during the past season than ever before. The roses are received in California in good shape, but our dry, hot summers are invariably fatal to the stock that is indigenous to a more moist country, and if they are allowed to sucker at all they quickly die downward until the bud is entirely dead and a wild stock is all that is left to represent that which once was a fine standard rose. Under the most favorable conditions some of them will last a season or two, but a dealer dislikes to handle them and sell them to his customers after he has had a little experience with them.

Standard roses that are to be planted in California must have for a stock some variety that is long-lived in our dry climate. Up to the present time the best all-around stocks for these purposes are La Grifferie and Manetti. The former will accommodate about seventy-five per cent of the varieties usually grown in standard form, and the balance can be made to do well on the latter sort. Gloire Lyonnaise, Gloire des Rosomanes, Castellane, Baltimore Belle and Prairie Queen have all been tried, with varying success, and each of them is particularly suitable for several varieties, but the two I mention have proven to be the best of the long-lived kinds. Each of the others has a few good points, but there is some drawback also.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Trade has been comfortable, with no special rush except a few good funeral orders, and a start of wedding work to whet up our appetites for the season. Summer stock continues to be of good quality and roseum lilies, valley, tuberose, stocks and gladioli are seen in quantity. Asters and peas we still have with us, the asters improving in quality each day and the peas holding up well. Carnations, especially Enchantress, Winsor and white, are reported as improving in some quarters, while no good roses are promised for two or three weeks yet.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

With the coming of September we have been given the taste of much cooler weather. The city schools have opened and a large proportion of our inhabitants have returned from the country resorts to the city. Business continues quiet, however, along all lines and the excess of flowers that has been in such evidence for the last few months is unabated. With the possible exception of fancy roses and a few varieties of carnations, there is nothing more to be desired in the flower line.

Gladioli are somewhat scarcer than they have been, and such varieties as America and Augusta are in considerable demand. Dahlias have not sold well for the last month, as the public does not seem to fancy them this season as much as last year. Amaryllis of the early flowered sorts are now past their prime and but little use has been made of them, except in a decorative way. All the varieties of Japanese lilies have moved well, but at rather lower prices than formerly received. A few Lilium longiflorum are seen, but they do not sell as well as the L. album. Valley is again in full crop with most of the growers and is fairly well used up. Asters are slightly past their prime and are the most popular flower at present. In another couple of weeks mums will be in full swing and we shall then have another problem on our hands. Sweet peas are practically over for the year, all of those now being brought into market being rather short-stemmed and small-flowered.

Other kinds of hardy stock are of slow sale and are handled principally by the hucksters and street stands.

Greens of all kinds, including asparagus, are plentiful and are showing the results of our long continued summer weather. Many of the retailers are relying largely on potted ferns and decorative plants to keep up their window shows during the warm weather.

Various Notes.

Samuel Lundy is with the Haeckel Floral Co., on Powell street, at present.

John Kappelman has taken charge of the store of the Thorsted Floral Co., on Washington street, Oakland.

J. J. Kegley, of Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, is on a visit to his old home at Ames, Ia.

Wm. J. Ward, until recently with C. C. Morse & Co., will open a store in Sacramento, Cal., in a few weeks.

NEW ORLEANS.

Charles Eble, state vice-president of the Society of American Florists, returned from the convention recently held in Cincinnati, encouraged by what he heard and saw, and hopeful that New Orleans florists will gain by the large representation which were present at the session from this city.

From his observations Mr. Eble said he believed business here was a great deal better than in the north at this time. He found much interest in his exhibit of Phoenix Roebelenii, which grows rapidly in this climate, and has orders for plants which will net him fine profit.

Mr. Eble said everyone present at the convention wanted to know about New Orleans, and many of the northern florists said they believed this city should make an effort to secure the convention in the near future. While it would take considerable money to entertain them properly, Mr. Eble expressed his approval of a plan to bring the organization here, as it would mean a step in the right direction, for trade conditions would be greatly benefited.

The delegation which went to Cincinnati was the largest ever attending from this city. Among those who took part in the meetings were: A. Alost, Charles Eble, Peter Chopin, J. A. Newsham, C. W. Eichling, Harry Papworth, M. Cook, U. J. Virgin and B. M. Wichers, of Gretna.

Mr. Eble displayed several of his fine specimens of Phoenix Roebelenii in his new store in the Hotel Grunewald on the opening day, September 1. While other florists have grown this palm in this city, Mr. Eble intends to devote special time to it for the purpose of attracting more attention to the local market. He is joined in the movement by the florists who attended the convention and have seen for themselves the magnitude of the association and the opportunities it offers for southern florists to get in touch with the live men in the business.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

The REVIEW for September 2, page 46, contains an interesting note regarding the Champion peach. This variety also flourishes in the eastern part of New York state. The REVIEW's correspondent, last week, paid a visit to the peach orchard of E. W. Barnes & Son, of Middle Hope, a short drive out, where a splendid sight was presented. Situated on rolling land a short distance back from the noble Hudson, and on the highest point in Orange county, this orchard, comprising twenty-five acres, is planted with two varieties, Champion for early and Elberta for late. At the time of writing the Champion is in full crop and yielding enormously—so well that the fortunate owners figure that the returns being received from the New York and Boston markets will more than pay for the whole farm.

The trees are in their fourth year and are perfectly healthy. They are planted 8x16 feet apart and 8,000 are in full bearing—a grand sight. The proportion of undersized fruits is remarkably small. I never saw finer specimens. They equal the choicest grown under glass or upon walls. Next winter every other tree will be taken out, to prevent crowding. Wherever there are misses, apples are planted, with a view to a future apple orchard.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

A sudden change to cool weather brought a good business spurt, but, owing to this change and some dark days, stock was at a premium. Roses and carnations are small and scarce. Outdoor stock is falling off rapidly. There are quite a few speciosum and some Harrisii lilies on the market, but everything else is at a premium.

Next week being Fair week, there will not be much doing in extra orders, but out-of-town visitors will be here looking over the prospects, and placing orders for the coming season.

Various Notes.

The space allotted florists at the State Fair has never been adequate, nor the prizes commensurate with the stock required to make a favorable showing. Therefore, with a view to getting a better line of accommodations, etc., at the meeting of the State Florists' Association at St. Paul, September 2, resolutions were adopted and will be distributed throughout the state, and to the board of managers, and it is hoped that conditions will be remedied in the near future.

The officers for the coming year for the Minnesota State Florists' Association are as follows: President, Theo. Wirth; vice-president, Aug. S. Swanson; secretary, J. Jorgenson; treasurer, E. Nagel. Executive committee, S. D. Dyringer, A. J. Smith, Prof. Cady, O. J. Olson.

John Monson attended the Winnipeg florists' flower show last week, acting as judge, and professed himself delighted with the country and with the treatment received from brother florists there.

Miss Whitted had a good week, with some weddings and funerals.

E. Nagel & Son have their place in shipshape order, and find business good.

Oscar Carlson is cutting some good roses, and in large quantities.

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual."
—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

POCAHONTAS TRADE MARK REGISTERED

The Standard of Excellence

A Symbol of Quality

Our registered Trade-Mark covering THE CELEBRATED C. C. B. POCAHONTAS SMOKELESS COAL corresponds to the Sterling Stamp on silver, as the United States Geological Survey has made it The Standard for grading all Steam Fuel.

C. C. B. POCAHONTAS SMOKELESS

Is the only American Coal that has been officially indorsed by the Governments of Great Britain, Germany and Austria, and is the favorite fuel with the United States Navy, which has used it almost exclusively for many years.

Unequaled for the Generation of Steam and Domestic Purposes.

Greenhouse Heating.

KIND OF FUEL.

S. G. Nissley supplies the fuel for all the largest greenhouses in the city of Springfield, O., and also in Urbana, and says that in almost every instance he is furnishing them a Smithers Creek, West Virginia, gas mine run coal. In one case he uses Fairmont, W. Va., coal. The users report that this coal is strong and suitable for the business, as they can build their fires and leave them quite a while, with the certainty of finding their fires in good shape when they return.

TO STOP SHORT CIRCUITING.

We are building a new range, consisting of six houses 22x100. They are to be heated by steam. Can we attach the coils to a large return pipe if we put a check valve on each coil, or is it necessary to run a separate return pipe for each coil back to the boiler? The water level in the boiler is two feet lower than the lowest part of the returns. C. A. F. C.

No check is needed on the system, but put on a hand valve and water seal the same; that is, a pocket in the return pipe where water will collect and stop short circuiting. G. T. E.

A SMALL OHIO HOUSE.

I have a small greenhouse which is heated with hot water according to your instructions, and the system worked to perfection last season. The present house is 12x60 and seven feet to the ridge, with board sides three feet high. It runs north and south and is connected at the north end with a two-story building, 12x12, beneath which is the boiler-room, built of concrete. I have a Wilks boiler, with a 16-inch firebox. The flow runs up to the ridge of the greenhouse, then through the house, down through two 2-inch pipes to the manifolds, and back through six 1¼-inch pipes on each side, to the bottom of the boiler. We used hard coal. This heated the greenhouse to 65 degrees regularly, and also furnished plenty of heat upstairs, in the workroom.

Now, as I know your instructions can be relied on, I wish to ask your advice with regard to a change which I propose to make. I intend to build another house, the same size as the present one and adjoining it on the east side, and I wish to use natural gas for fuel. There is a good pressure of gas here, and my boiler is so arranged that I can tap it at top and bottom with 2-inch pipe for hot water. I do not care to carry over 40 to 45 degrees in the new house. The wall between the two houses can be removed. How shall I arrange the pipes in the second house? A. O. N.

In reply to your letter, would say that you can pipe the second house the same as the first one, with a separate flow and return. G. T. E.

TWO CONNECTED HOUSES.

I am about to pipe my two new greenhouses, each 33x100 feet and seventeen feet to the ridge. The houses run north and south, with an old house adjoining them on the west side. The height to the west gutter is five feet; the height to each of the other two gutters is eight feet. I am using steam. Kindly tell me how much piping will be required to maintain a temperature of about 50 degrees in the coldest nights, here in southeastern Michigan.

I intend to run a 3-inch main from one end of the houses to the other, returning under the 8-foot and 5-foot gut-

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 15, 1906.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours of the 11th at hand. The Wilks heater bought from you last fall has done finely. We burned coke and it has done just fine. By filling up the magazine about 9 or 10 o'clock and closing it up all around, we found a good fire in it by 7 a. m. The grate is one of the best arrangements we ever saw for an ordinary sized plant. It is one of the best heaters I have ever seen.

ner. House No. 1, which is 22x100, extends in a southeasterly direction from the potting shed. The flow pipe in this house would be overhead and the returns would consist of one 2-inch pipe on the walls or under the gutter and six 1¼-inch pipes under the benches. Would that be enough to carry a temperature of 56 to 58 degrees in zero weather, in this Pennsylvania climate? House No. 2, which is also 22x100, runs straight east and west, with its west end joined to the potting shed and the north end of house No. 1. In this second house there would also be an overhead flow, with one 2-inch return on the north wall and nine 1¼-inch returns under the benches, to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees. House No. 3, which is at the south side of house No. 2 and parallel with it, is 12x65, and would have a flow pipe on the south wall and six 1¼-inch returns, for a temperature of 58 to 65 degrees.

The houses have three feet of fall in 100 feet, and the boiler is ten feet lower than the houses. Will that be plenty for a gravity system? Are check valves necessary at the boiler, for the returns? If so, please state why. Where should I place the air cocks? Will one at the higher end of the flow pipe be enough?

I wrote some time ago inquiring about the capacity of my boiler, but omitted the length. The boiler is nine feet long and three feet in diameter, and the fire-box is 3x4 feet. It contains thirty-two 3-inch flues and eighteen 4-inch flues. How much more glass will it care for, without being crowded? M. B. S.

Your plan is a good one, except for one thing, and that is the running of the mains up in the air. You have enough head room to allow putting the mains in a trench, where they can be insulated, thus saving a great amount of coal. Follow your plan otherwise, but put the mains underground and rise into the returns, instead of coming down. Your boiler will care for about 3,000 feet of glass more than you have now. You do not need a check on the return pipes, as you will have a dry system. The pitch is all right, unless it may be a little too strong. G. T. E.

Right Fit or Tight Fit?

There is an advantage in knowing your business, for instance, the heating question; a lot of people think they know a good bit about it and tell you the greenhouse men are robbing you. And sometimes you believe it, so in goes a tight fit boiler and piping—that just does your work and no margin. When a cold snap comes you have to crowd your boiler—and be on the anxious seat till the mercury lets up. You have burned more coal and got less results for what you burned. Your boiler has been overworked and that is no good thing for any boiler. We know greenhouse heating thoroughly, and refuse to skimp the boilers or radiation. That means you pay a right price for the right thing—and no more. Get in touch with us.

GRAND RAPIDS.

We are having a dry time of it again, with cold nights; in fact, light frosts have injured the tops of tomato plants and nearly ruined late planted corn. Coleus and heliotrope in the field are just enough touched to say so.

Business is quiet, save for funeral orders and an occasional wedding. There is nothing doing, as shipping has not yet started with any degree of activity. Golden Glow chrysanthemums have been in bloom since the middle of August, and while some are sold, it is too early to get mums in flower. A better time is from the middle of September and then on. Carnation planting is not yet finished, but is being pushed as fast as possible. Several of the local florists find themselves short of carnation plants and wake up to the realization that stock, in varieties wanted, is none too plentiful.

The demand being light, there are plenty of asters to go around; otherwise there are few good asters to be had. All outdoor stock is showing the effects of the dry weather.

Bruinslot & Sons are still busily engaged on their boiler-room excavation. The walls will be of cement to the roof, and the depth underground ten feet, so the boiler can be set low enough so the drip can return to the boiler by gravity.

James Schols, who was taken sick with appendicitis while attending the Cincinnati convention, is back home again. He is well, but too weak to do any work as yet. He is to be congratulated on getting over it safely.

W. L. Cukerski, late superintendent of parks, is building several greenhouses on West Fulton street, and will be right in it next year as a full-fledged florist, as well as nurseryman and landscape gardener.

The West Michigan State Fair begins September 13, and extensive preparations are being made to make it a great success. Among other noticeable alterations the florists are transferred from Pomological hall to Art hall, where they will be given an appropriate section. Those intending to exhibit are Henry Smith, Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., Eli Cross and H. Danhoff. We only hope the weather is going to be fine and that no hard frosts will injure the plants. Charles Bowditch, of the Soldiers' Home, will be, as usual, in charge, with W. L. Cukerski as judge. G. F. C.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather continues delightful, but cooler than normal, the nights especially being unusually chilly. The average temperature in August was about 5 degrees below the normal for that month. It was the driest summer we have had for eighteen years.

Trade begins to revive somewhat, and as the tide of sojourners in the country and by the seashore turns homeward, a general expansion is looked for. Planting is generally over, and receipts of cut flowers are not heavy. Of good stock there is but little in sight. This week will about finish the asters, and only a few dahlias have thus far appeared. Some few Golden Glow mums are to be seen, but are not in demand. Mum stock is in fine shape around Baltimore, but not in such large quantities as in previous years.

Various Notes.

Chas. M. Wagner, who was seriously ill with typhoid fever, has recovered and is able to be around among his many friends again.

Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., have sent out invitations to members of the trade throughout the eastern territory to attend their dahlia show and inspect their dahlias, for which they are famous, and the other specialties of their extensive establishment. Arrangements have been made to meet visitors at the station and convey them in vehicles to the Vincent place. There are forty acres planted in dahlias, in 300 varieties, and their geranium houses are planted with 60,000 plants in 400 varieties. The dates of the show are September 28 to October 1. Q.

The Market.

Trade shows a decided improvement over last report, and it will not be long till things will be moving at a good gait. There has been considerable funeral work lately, and the demand for loose flowers, etc., is on the increase. Stock has been fairly good. Some good Brides and Maids and a few good Killarneys are seen. Asters are not plentiful, with the grade low. There are some good blooms, and they demand a good figure.

Carnations are beginning to make their appearance again. While the supply is small, they are picked up almost on sight. It will only be a question of a few days now until they will be coming in in quantity, as the stock here is looking better at this date than for several seasons. Gladioli are running low, with demand light. There are still some good lilies on the market in Harrisii and rubrum, which find a ready sale. The demand for valley has been light for the last few weeks, but there are several weddings booked which will start them moving again.

Various Notes.

Last week witnessed the largest crowds for the state fair that have been in attendance for several years, Thursday, September 2, breaking all records, when there were over 50,000 present. There was a creditable display in plants, shrubbery, cut flowers, etc. The Livingston Seed Co. had a nice display, including a lily pond with a good variety of bloom. Their display of plants, shrubs, seeds, etc., was good. The Storrs & Harrison Co., of Painesville, made a good showing of trees, shrubs, hardy phlox, etc. There were quite a number of out-of-town florists in the city who attended the fair and called on the trade.

C. A. Roth has been handling some good carnations for this early in the season.

E. Metzmaier reports trade improving right along. Reports are that trade is quiet in the different markets, some of the florists not even going to market.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had a large ship for the F. & R. Lazarus Co., to be put on Fred Lazarus' desk on his return from an extended trip.

The Munk Floral Co. reports stock looking fine, and it will soon be cutting in quantity. J. M.

MISSOULA, MONT.—C. F. Dallman, of the Missoula Nursery Co., and his wife and two sons are spending a vacation in fishing and duck hunting. J. H. Smith, foreman for this firm, says that all carnations are planted and mums look fine. There are lots of asters of good quality. Sweet peas, also, are plentiful and good.

TAUNTON, MASS.

At the Taunton Greenhouses 8,000 chrysanthemums are being grown this year and all look well. Some 3,500 single violets looked well outdoors. These are mostly Princess of Wales, but a few hundred Governor Herrick will be planted, this being considered fine in funeral work. Several long benches were filled with Nephrolepis Whitmani; 4,000 young Asparagus plumosus and 1,200 Chinese primulas were also noted. The firm will, as usual, grow several thousand lilies for Easter. During the present summer business has been quite good, there being some funeral orders practically every day. The houses were all being repainted outside and made light for winter.

J. O. Kristenson, at W. J. Clemson's, has nice houses of carnations and chrysanthemums. Outdoors he has some superb vegetables, which have taken many prizes at the Boston exhibitions and will be heard from at shows yet to be held.

William McAloon, on Oak street, is building a house in which he intends to grow tomatoes. Last year he had carnations in one house, but has decided there will be more money in winter vegetables.

E. F. Rose, whose greenhouses are on Bay State and store on Main street, has been away some weeks on an extended trip, which includes the Seattle exposition.

Frank G. Lindsay, of School street, has been quite sick for two or three months, but has improved since a growth was removed from his right cheek.

E. L. Lewis made a big exhibit at the Hartford, Conn., fair, September 6.

B. J. Connolly is still operating his flower store on Broadway, below the City hotel.

H. H. P. Carstens has returned from a three weeks' vacation. He has his place in excellent shape.

W. N. CRAIG.

DIXON, ILL.—N. H. Long, for many years engaged in growing cucumbers north of this city, has decided to quit the cucumber business and enter the business of growing flowers. He is now remodeling his greenhouses, with that purpose in view.

A beautiful showy McCray built-to-order of quartered oak with beveled mirror and galvanized iron drawers beneath for mosses, etc.

A Particular Refrigerator For Florists is the McCray—built of carefully tested materials, and with the best system of circulation of fresh, cold air, cooling all parts of the interior thoroughly and evenly. A small amount of ice does a great amount of cooling. It saves ice which eventually pays for the McCray itself. The constant circulation of dry, cold, pure air in the inside keeps the flowers and stock in a fresh, perfect and fragrant condition.

McCray Refrigerators

are beautiful in finish, and substantial and durable in construction. They give an air of elegance to your store. They are lined with white enamel, or can be had with mirrors, tile, opal glass or marble interiors, to suit your taste.

McCray Florists' Refrigerators are made in a wide range of regular sizes for immediate shipment, or can be built to order for any requirement. There are no other refrigerators on the market which do better work for the florists, or are better made than the McCray.

Send for Catalog No. 71, which gives you all the details of this magnificent line of refrigerators, and will help you make the proper selection.

When Writing Advertisers

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade

THE STANDARD Ventilating Machinery

The original machine with self-oiling cups. The most powerful, least complicated, very compact with ease of operation.

The New Duplex Gutter

Over six miles in use and highly recommended by all. The only DRIP PROOF gutter on the market.

The Standard Return Steam Trap

It has no equal for simplicity or its working. Catalogue free.

FLORIST.....

LUNCHEON TABLES.

When the hostess puts no cloth on the luncheon table she both simplifies and complicates the work of the florist—for no matter how informal the affair may be, it calls for flowers in these modern times, when the luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of today.

A round table being spread with doilies, what can the florist do? He can set something on the center of the table and put baskets or vases of flowers around it at a little distance; not much more. He cannot put flowers directly on a bare board, nor can he use anything that will increase the height of his decorations, and he must keep the outer circle of his flowers lower even than the low central bowl, or he will destroy the symmetry and effect of his work. Under such circumstances, and all retailers who have a first-class trade have met with them many times this summer, the choice is simply one of receptacles and of flowers—there is hardly room for choice of styles of decoration without danger of passing the bounds of the conservatism that is rigidly required of all who cater to those who have had money long enough to have become accustomed to it. The bizzare in floral effects may meet with the approval of Mrs. Newrich and her friends, but Mrs. Usedito wants nothing on the topsy-turvy order.

The accompanying illustrations are excellent examples of tasteful decorations for luncheon tables where doilies are used. The one with the central bowl of My Maryland roses, with valley outside, all in delicate white china vases, is even better than the pink pond lilies and valley in glass receptacles, but both these are better than the china handled baskets of rubrum lilies, simply because in the latter the handles were too high.

GOOD WILL TOKENS.

The Wealth of Materials.

Upon mentioning the subject of store openings, a variety of offerings in the shape of horseshoes, four-leaved clovers, vases and baskets come to mind. The horseshoe is now relegated to the cheap trade. For the better class of customers a handsome basket or vase of flowers is considered in better taste. Of these any number of arrangements can be put up, according to the humor and the pocket-book. Just now even an ordinary stock presents attractive combinations, with mums, Beauties, cosmos, besides the ever present roses and carnations and the various autumn decorative materials, as helps.

Of all opportunities for informal and artistic arrangements, none afford better ones for brilliant effects than these offerings for store decorations. But one other calls for more gaiety in coloring and freedom of arrangement, and that is the theater bunch. Formal designs, more strictly classed as funeral pieces, are occasionally seen. As much the same style of arrangement and the same selection of flowers are used, even to the inevitable adiantum, the suggestion to the recipients, should they be at all familiar with designs as originally used, would be anything but congratulatory. Better send a gay piece to a funeral than a condolence to a new enterprise. Gather up the choicest products of the season and combine in the most skillful manner possible.

Tact in Educating Customers.

"But," someone will object, "we must give the people what they want." If a customer fancies a funeral design, done in outrageous colors, for an opening, let him have it by all means." But, on the other hand, who taught this same customer "what he ought to have for a funeral design? Why, the same man who allows him to buy any old thing for a very different occasion. The florist is supposed to display what the customer should have. He should either inform himself as to what other dealers are offering, or be able to invent appropriate schemes himself. If his customers make ridiculous demands, he may look to himself as responsible. It is just as much a part of his work to educate the public to appreciate the best in art in his line, as it is to provide good stock for sale. The public will sooner or later demand the best display of taste, as well as quality, in flowers and plants.

Of course, if he (or more often she), after being instructed as to the question of propriety and good taste with regard to the shape in which flowers are to be presented, still insists upon something ridiculous, the customer would better get just what he wants. But this rarely occurs, for the majority of purchasers will gladly accept suggestions if they are tactfully offered.

A Misplaced Funeral Piece.

At a store opening recently there were observed, among a nice selection of baskets and bouquets, a star and crescent made in precisely the same style as though it were meant for a funeral. As far as could be known, there was no reason why this design should have been selected. Occasionally such a design is used as a trade-mark, and in this case it would have been a happy selection and should have been executed in brilliant colors. But, as it was, there was no such distinction made. How much better it

At a store opening recently there were observed, among a nice selection of baskets and bouquets, a star and crescent made in precisely the same style as though it were meant for a funeral. As far as could be known, there was no reason why this design should have been selected. Occasionally such a design is used as a trade-mark, and in this case it would have been a happy selection and should have been executed in brilliant colors. But, as it was, there was no such distinction made. How much better it would have been to have suggested a four-leaved clover, an old shoe filled for good luck, or the office waste basket loaded full of long-stemmed flowers, or an open ledger with a clear page and an inscription added! Better still, why not have sent a handsome vase, not forgetting to talk up the always reliable basket of flowers or plants, or the two combined?

The excuse is often given by a salesman for allowing his trade to run in ruts and making the same old things in the same old way year after year, that customers do not appreciate anything better. Of course they do not appreciate better things when they never see them or "hear tell" of them. A tailor or milliner never hesitates to tell a prospective buyer what he ought to have and insist upon it, too. Illustrators, picture makers and all crafts keep ahead of the public and put up their products with the authority of leaders. But some florists assume that they are too modest to urge the use of the new and best things, until the modesty assumes a tinge of what is called, in plain English, laziness.

Baskets of Flowers or Plants.

But to return to the basket. The gayest and freest will be none too much for these occasions. By gaiety is not meant giddiness or disregard for color and taste, but let good coloring run riot and employ loose and playful combinations of foliage, flowers and ribbon. Tin lined baskets are fine for flowers, as well as plants. Fill with sphagnum and stem as needed. When complete and placed, fill with water and the flowers will keep in excellent condition.

Tastefully arranged plant baskets are very acceptable for openings. Plant in the basket pan and fill vacancies with soil or sphagnum. Then water well. Both blooming and foliage plants can be used together. Be finicky about choosing colors. When circumstances permit, cyclamens, with white or heliotrope pink mums and Boston ferns, are happily combined, while another desirable selection might be composed of white primroses with Asparagus plumosus and Enchantress carnations. Another: Pink or lavender primroses in the body of the basket and a cluster of white carnations sprayed over the handle. Wrap the handle first with soft ribbon in green or lavender, with a rosette at one side. If pansy plants are obtainable, fill the basket with the purples and yellows and decorate the handle with yellow mums. Cover the soil with sheet moss or lycopodium.

One way to work off a surplus of jardinieres or vases is to sell the vase or jardiniere and contents for store openings or for hospital patients.

Don't chiffon everything. Ribbon a goodly proportion and leave some pieces unadorned as regards any kind of fabrics.

Sometimes, for openings, fill a birch bark box, like a window box, with tall foliage plants for the center, and bright blooming plants interspersed with depending vines. Use flowers with some and add autumn leaves, cones or such local products. Coleus plants are often of good size at this time of the year, and a few surplus stock plants can be worked in appropriately. Select the brilliant reds and shade with variegated reds and greens, and finally into the clear greens. Finish with a cluster of delicate pink flowers, like Enchantress carnations or Bridesmaid roses. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ALWAYS STATE HOW TO SHIP.

There is nothing more annoying to a shipper of perishable stock, especially of so bulky a nature as plants, than to receive an order like this, "Ship at once," or "Ship without delay," "Ship me," or "Rush the following order," without instructions as to which way to ship, by freight or express.

An addition of one more word, "Freight" or "Express," would relieve the shipper of all doubt and remove the necessity of a lot of correspondence, in which usually the purchaser mentions a dozen times how the stock should have been shipped, if the shipment went wrong.

Sometimes, when a purchaser sends in an order which may run of considerable weight, it looks as if the shipping instructions were purposely omitted, to throw the entire responsibility of judgment upon the shipper, and if he routes it by freight and the shipment does not reach its destination quickly enough, then there is an awful howl about its being shipped by freight. On the other hand, if the stock is expressed and the charges are beyond expectations, as they usually are, back comes the same kick about sending such heavy shipments by express. In nine cases out of ten, the purchaser will try to fall back on the shipper and blame him for lack of judgment or loss sustained, when the purchaser is entirely at fault.

These matters usually start unpleasant relations between buyer and seller, which could be avoided by a proper understanding when an order is sent in. Always state how you want your order shipped.

WILSON SAILS FOR AMERICA.

E. H. Wilson, famous collector of new Chinese and Thibetan plants, sails from Liverpool today to spend a considerable time at Harvard University and Arnold Arboretum, with Prof. C. S. Sargent, arranging, identifying and naming the large number of specimens collected by Mr. Wilson on the more than two years' trip to western China from which he returned to England in May.

Mr. Wilson was in Kew from 1897 to 1899. In February of the latter year he was engaged by James Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, to visit southern and central China for the purpose of collecting new and rare plants. For the greater part of three years Mr. Wilson labored in this enormous district, and in the earlier part of that period he obtained considerable help from Dr. Augustine Henry, himself a keen botanist and collector. The chief results of this mission were the finding of Jasminum primulinum, Davidia involucrata, Ilex Pernyi, Astilbe Davidi and A. grandis, Buddleia variabilis Veitchii, and B. variabilis magnifica, Corydalis thalictrifolia, Lonicera Maacki, Senecio clivorum, Populus lasiocarpa, Viburnum rhytidophyllum, and numerous vitis and rubi. So successful was Mr. Wilson that he undertook a second journey for the Messrs. Veitch, during 1903 and 1904, to western China and the Thibetan border, returning in March, 1905. During this trip he found Meconopsis integrifolia, M. punicea, Prim- ula pulverulenta, P. Cockburniana, P. Veitchii, about fifty species of rhododendrons, including R. Soulei and R. intricata, Larix Potanini, Clematis montana Wilsoni, Berberis Wilsonæ, Rheum Alexandræ, Cotoneaster applanata, and a host of new berberis, pyrus, hollies, etc. Mr. Wilson also sent home quantities of Lilium Henryi, L. sutchuense, and L. myriophylla, and some idea of his great work may be gathered from the fact that, according to the Gardeners' Magazine, besides collecting and forwarding plants and seeds, his herbarium specimens on these two journeys amounted to 30,000 sheets, these now being distributed among the British and Continental herbaria. Long before his return from the second journey Mr. Wilson's fame had spread throughout the Continent and in America, and so it was not surprising that he was asked to undertake a third expedition to China, this time under the direction of Prof. C. S. Sargent, of Harvard University. This expedition, financed by Prof. Sargent, Harvard University, and several keen American and British horticulturists, was readily undertaken, and Mr. Wilson started again for western China in December, 1906, returning in May, 1909. The chief aim of this journey was to secure new and rare trees and shrubs of botanical and horticultural interest. It is yet too early to say much concerning the results obtained, other than that they have been beyond the most sanguine hopes of the promoters, and even the intrepid collector himself. Nearly 30,000 sheets of herbarium specimens give some idea of the richness of the flora of western China, and it may be mentioned that new magnolias, pyrus, prunus, berberis, and cerasus in considerable numbers have been collected, while Cercis racemosa and Catalpa Fargesii have been found. Specimens of many of the new plants, small ones, of course, are now in cultivation at Harvard, Kew, Glasnevin, Edinburgh, Aldenham House, Warley Place, etc., and there is a fine promise of the addition of many good garden plants. This very bald statement of Mr. Wilson's work must conclude with the statement that he has discovered ten new genera at least, and about 1,000 new species or well marked varieties of old species. The Royal Horticultural Society has already granted about fifty certificates and awards to plants he has introduced, and this alone indicates the great value of his introductions.

MARIE LOUISE VIOLET

Will you kindly give me brief cultural directions for Marie Louise violets just planted from 2½-inch pots in coldframes in vicinity of New York city? Please state definitely as to shading. F. G. S.

Keep all runners removed as they appear, also any decaying or spotted foliage. Stir the soil frequently and never permit it to become in any way hard or baked. Give abundant ventilation all the time. Sashes can be left off, especially during warm days, but are better kept on at night. The heavy night dews with succeeding hot days are by many held responsible for the spot disease so common on this variety.

As cold weather arrives you must, of course, provide necessary protection, both on the sides and tops of the frames, but in case of snow-falls uncover and air out as soon as possible. The plants require no shading at this season, but toward spring, when they come in heavy crop, a light covering helps to hold the color in the flowers, as well as keeping the frames cooler. C. W.

Registration of Berberis.

Public notice is hereby given that M. J. Van Leeuwen, of the Continental Nurseries, Franklin, Mass., offers for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Description—Originated in the spring of 1908, when it made its appearance in a batch of seedlings of Berberis Thunbergii. In manner of growth it closely resembles a compact form of the Berberis Thunbergii, making a strong lateral growth from the new wood of the same season. Development in spring from the dormant wood shows a mass of waxy white tinted with pink branches, which, in turn, develop into foliage of the same hue and color, which, coming to maturity, shows a penciling of emerald green, becoming somewhat deeper and stronger during the latter part of August and September, then turning to a decided purplish green of the color of the Berberis purpurea. Its berries are of a coral red when ripe and often nearly round. Name—Berberis Thunbergii, var. Silver Beauty. W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

I have a lot of Canterbury bells that were started last year, wintered inside and set out last spring. Many of them did not flower this year, but grew large and formed a lot of crowns. Some are as large as a half-bushel basket. Will these flower next year? Would they be suitable to force and will they have more than one spike of blossoms? I live in the state of Vermont. C. E. G.

I am afraid the Canterbury bells will be rather large for forcing. These will all bloom next year if you winter them successfully. In your cold state I would advise digging them up and planting in a coldframe about the middle of October. Select some of the smaller sizes for potting. The larger plants will throw up several spikes of flowers. Do not coddle them in the winter; air on every favorable opportunity. The plants will rot if they become damp and the frame is not aired freely. C. W.

would have been to have suggested a four-leaved clover, an old shoe filled for good luck, or the office waste basket loaded full of long stemmed flowers, or an open ledger with a clear page and an inscription added! Better still, why not have sent a handsome vase, not forgetting to talk up the always reliable basket of flowers or plants, or the two combined?

The excuse is often given by a salesman for allowing his trade to run in ruts and making the same old things in the same old way year after year, that customers do not appreciate anything better. Of course they do not appreciate better things when they never see them or "hear tell" of them. A tailor or milliner never hesitates to tell a prospective buyer what he ought to have and insist upon it, too. Illustrators, picture makers and all crafts keep ahead of the public and put up their products with the authority of leaders. But some florists assume that they are too modest to urge the use of the new and best things, until the modesty assumes a tinge of what is called, in plain English, laziness.

Baskets of Flowers or Plants.

But to return to the basket. The gayest and freest will be none too much for these occasions. By gaiety is not meant giddiness or disregard for color and taste, but let good coloring run riot and employ loose and playful combinations of foliage, flowers and ribbon. Tin lined baskets are fine for flowers, as well as plants. Fill with sphagnum and stem as needed. When complete and placed, fill with water and the flowers will keep in excellent condition.

Tastefully arranged plant baskets are very acceptable for openings. Plant in the basket pan and fill vacancies with soil or sphagnum. Then water well. Both blooming and foliage plants can be used together. Be finicky about choosing colors. When circumstances permit, cyclamens, with white or heliotrope pink mums and Boston ferns, are happily combined, while another desirable selection might be composed of white primroses with Asparagus plumosus and Eucharistia carnations. Another. Pink or lavender primroses in the body of the basket and a cluster of white carnations sprayed over the handle. Wrap the handle first with soft ribbon in green or lavender, with a rosette at one side. If pansy plants are obtainable, fill the basket with the purples and yellows and decorate the handle with yellow mums. Cover the soil with sheet moss or lycopodium.

One way to work off a surplus of jardinières or vases is to sell the vase or jardinière and contents for store openings or for hospital patients.

Don't chifton everything. Ribbon a goodly proportion and leave some pieces unadorned as regards any kind of fabrics.

Sometimes, for openings, fill a birch bark box, like a window box, with tall foliage plants for the center, and bright blooming plants interspersed with depending vines. Use flowers with some and add autumn leaves, cones or such local products. Coleus plants are often of good size at this time of the year, and a few surplus stock plants can be worked in appropriately. Select the brilliant reds and shade with variegated reds and greens, and finally into the clear greens. Finish with a cluster of delicate pink flowers, like Eucharistia carnations or Bridesmaid roses. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ALWAYS STATE HOW TO SHIP.

There is nothing more annoying to a shipper of perishable stock, especially of so bulky a nature as plants, than to receive an order like this, "Ship at once," or "Ship without delay," "Ship me," or "Rush the following order," without instructions as to which way to ship, by freight or express.

An addition of one more word, "Freight" or "Express," would relieve the shipper of all doubt and remove the necessity of a lot of correspondence, in which usually the purchaser mentions a dozen times how the stock should have been shipped, if the shipment went wrong.

Sometimes, when a purchaser sends in an order which may run of considerable weight, it looks as if the shipping instructions were purposely omitted, to throw the entire responsibility of judgment upon the shipper, and if he routes it by freight and the shipment does not reach its destination quickly enough, then there is an awful howl about its being shipped by freight. On the other hand, if the stock is expressed and the charges are beyond expectations, as they usually are, back comes the same kick about sending such heavy shipments by express. In nine cases out of ten, the purchaser will try to fall back on the shipper and blame him for lack of judgment or loss sustained, when the purchaser is entirely at fault.

These matters usually start unpleasant relations between buyer and seller, which could be avoided by a proper understanding when an order is sent in. Always state how you want your order shipped

WILSON SAILS FOR AMERICA.

E. H. Wilson, famous collector of new Chinese and Tibetan plants, sails from Liverpool today to spend a considerable time at Harvard University and Arnold Arboretum, with Prof. C. S. Sargent, arranging, identifying and naming the large number of specimens collected by Mr. Wilson on the more than two years' trip to western China from which he returned to England in May.

Mr. Wilson was in Kew from 1897 to 1899. In February of the latter year he was engaged by James Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, to visit southern and central China for the purpose of collecting new and rare plants. For the greater part of three years Mr. Wilson labored in this enormous district, and in the earlier part of that period he obtained considerable help from Dr. Augustine Henry, himself a keen botanist and collector. CHRYSANTHEMUMS

TO REMOVE BORDEAUX MIXTURE

I sprayed Bordeaux mixture on my chrysanthemums to protect them from leaf-spot, and one day afterward I syringed them several times, but it seems I cannot clean this Bordeaux mixture off by syringing with water. Please let me know if there is something to use for washing off Bordeaux mixture.

S. U. E.

S. U. E. might try a weak solution of Ivory soap, or a spray with the new Aphine solution might remove the Bordeaux mixture, as it has great cleansing properties. It is late now to give advice, as the Bordeaux is already applied, but in future, when spraying the mums so near flowering time, use potassium sulphide, one ounce to two gallons of water, as advised for rust and mildew. It does not discolor the foliage to any harmful extent and is a valuable fungicide. The chief merit of the Bordeaux is that it sticks, but S. U. E. does not seem to care for it on that account.

CHAS. H. TOTTY.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Spraying and Watering.

The cooler days are with us and more particularly the cooler nights. Much more care must be taken now in spraying the plants, as a heavy dose of mildew often results from spraying the stock too late in the day and having the plants wet all night. Do all your spraying and watering in the morning, so that the house will be dry everywhere by nightfall, and then mildew will not make any headway, unless your growth is extremely soft. As the buds burst through their covering, overhead spraying should cease, because the water will lodge in the bud and rot the embryonic petals. Some buds that are more or less conical in shape shed the water easily, but the flat ones hold the water, the old Robinson and the Eatons being noteworthy in that respect.

Feeding.

As the different varieties show color the feeding should cease, because if the feeding is too long continued the flowers damp and are rendered useless. It is an art only acquired by long observation, to know when to stop feeding, but the grower had better err on the side of too little rather than too much, as a flower spoiled means the loss of the season's work.

Never use bone or any solid fertilizer so late as this. Confine the feeding entirely to liquids, either chemical or natural manures, as the liquid can be taken up by the plant and used at once and will not remain in the soil to injure the blooms later.

Rust.

The usual complaints regarding rust at this season are coming in, more particularly from growers who have their stock outside. In New Jersey it seems impossible to grow mums outside any more without rust and leaf-spot. Before the plants are got inside they should be sprayed with the liver of sulphur or potassium sulphide. I have found this will keep down rust and will also check any mildew that may be coming as a result of the damp night air.

All plants that are outside should be got in as soon as possible now, especially if they have to be lifted and potted, because time must be given the plants to get established again before the flowers open. Many market pot plants are handled in this way, and if the lifting be carefully done and the plants shaded for several days after potting, they suffer but little injury.

CHAS. H. TOTTY.

WHITE GRUBS IN SOIL.

Will you kindly advise me what to do for white grubs? They eat the roots off my bedding plants and girdle them under the ground. I have lost a great many plants that I had in the field. The soil that I have prepared for my benches also has grubs in it. Each time I handle it I kill all I find, but no doubt several will be left in.

C. A. H.

The grubs you are having trouble with are probably the larvæ of the May beetle or June bug. These are destructive, particularly in dry seasons, when they come near the surface of the soil and eat the roots from grasses and many garden crops. Steam sterilization of the soil destroys these and all other pests. This is, of course, impossible among growing crops, but you can get rid of them by using carbon bisulphide. This will cost you about 25 cents per pound commercially. Bore holes eighteen inches apart each way in the affected beds, using a pointed stick. In each hole pour a few drops of the carbon, covering the hole at once. The fumes are penetrating and deadly, especially when the ground is damp. This remedy can also be applied to plants in pots or crops in benches. It will not hurt any of your crops in the least. Keep any naked lights away from the bottle while using it; when you have done using it, cork up securely and seal the top with paraffin to prevent any fumes escaping.

Geraniums

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I am sending you samples of my geraniums, the leaves of which are diseased. These plants were purchased in April. They have been kept in covered frames, well ventilated, until two weeks ago, when I brought them into the greenhouse. This trouble began the last of May and has been increasing, in spite of all my efforts to check it. I have sprayed them with Bordeaux mixture and have used sulphur and air-slaked lime. What is the trouble and can it be checked? The leaves finally turn yellow and drop. I find my large stock geraniums planted out in the borders are affected also.

Your trouble is not by any means an uncommon one. As your plants appear to have been sickly from the start, it may have been due to overpropagation. If the plants from which your stock was obtained were from plants kept continually under glass and every possible cutting taken from them, it is not surprising that they show a lack of vitality and fall an easy mark to disease. Keeping cuttings too long in the propagating bench is also liable to start this trouble. As a general thing, cuttings taken from indoor stock root with the smallest loss from damping off and, unless the propagating is overdone, they should remain healthy, either inside or out of doors.

Climatic conditions often start blight in the foliage. Damp, warm and sunless weather, if continued for several days, will sometimes ruin whole beds. Your trouble, however, is evidently of a different nature, and as you evidently have it in a virulent form and remedial measures have been of no avail, it would be better to throw away your plants and endeavor to secure clean stock from a reliable specialist in geraniums. If you do not care to do this, pick your pot plants clean and stand them on a sunny bench, where they can get plenty of pure, sweet air. If the pots are well filled with roots, use a little nitrate of soda or soot in an endeavor to tone them up. Before taking any cuttings from your stock plants wait until just before frost threatens. Trim the foliage off quite bare, dip the cuttings in Bordeaux mixture and place in clean sand in a sunny house. It is possible they may keep clean, but I would have more faith in new stock.

C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR SPRING SALES.

How late can cuttings be put in sand to make 4-inch blooming plants not later than June 1?

C. L. H.

The usual plan is to grow along the cuttings taken in September and October for spring sales, but you can propagate as late as the end of January and get nice 4-inch pot stock by June 1. In the case of cuttings taken during the winter the best plan is to insert each singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam. They will root within a month. Shift to 3-inch and later 4-inch pots.

ROSES

MY MARYLAND ROSE.

Frank P. Myers, of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa., is recognized as one of the close observers in floriculture and the stock he turns out at his establishment has a reputation for quality in every market in which it is known, and that includes New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago as well as Philadelphia. For these reasons Mr. Myers' opinion on any subject connected with rose growing is of interest to all engaged in the trade. Speaking of My Maryland the other day at Chicago, he said:

"It is by all odds the most profitable pink rose on the market today. I thought little of it until I heard some of the big growers of the east commenting on it, which caused me to run down to John Cook's place at Baltimore, to have a look at it there. I liked it from the start and the more I have seen of it the better I like it. We put in one house of it, and in one day while I was at the national flower show I took orders for 40,000 plants; it might have been more had I known how readily it propagates. From 1,225 plants we made 80,000 cuttings, and I think we might have made 100,000. We stopped taking wood in March and from those 1,225 plants in April we took 20 cents per plant in cut flowers, in May 17 cents per plant, and in June 18 cents per plant. Could any rose beat that?"

"Our plants, you may well judge, did not stand still at any time last winter. Given the right treatment it will give any grower better financial returns than any other rose I know of."

ROSES UNDER RIBBED GLASS.

I note in the REVIEW for September 9 the illustration of J. E. Bonsall's rose houses, which are glazed with ribbed glass, and should like some additional information. Won't you please tell us more about them?

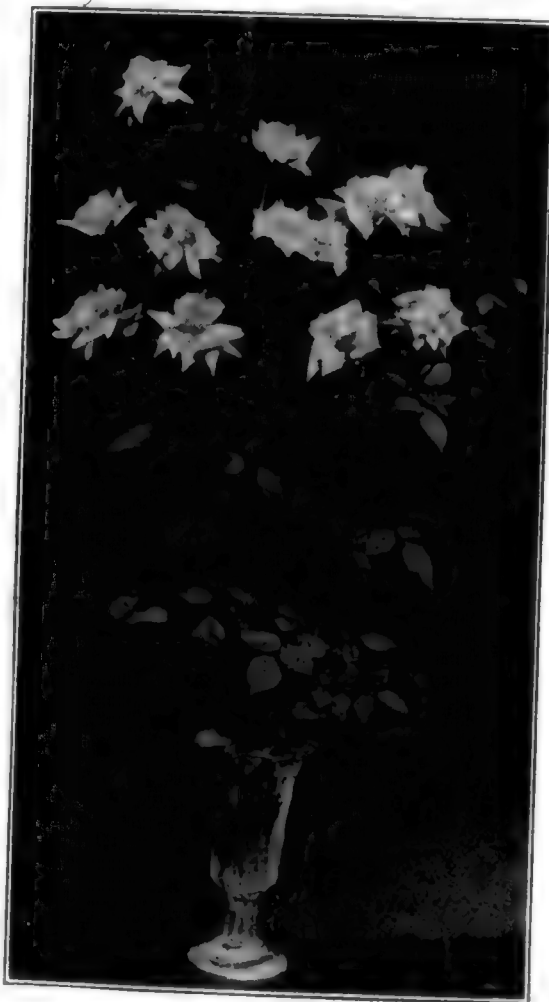

H. O.

The range consists of five houses, each 16x320 feet, even-span, running east and west. The beds are solid, one in the center of each house, between the purlin posts, and one under each valley. They are six feet wide, with 2-foot walks between.

The glass used is what is known in the market as ribbed or corrugated glass, such as is used largely in factories. It is three-sixteenths of an inch thick and 24x27 inches. This glass does not form a lens, so there is no burning. Neither do the rafters or posts cast a shadow, as the refraction from the corrugations overcomes that. The light, while not quite as bright as under clear glass, gives good results for summer crops. There are no heating pipes, as the houses are used for summer crops exclusively.

The crops grown are largely Kaiserin and Carnot roses. They, of course, are dormant during the winter, but the ground does not freeze under the manure mulch used for growing the crop. While dormant they are kept comparatively dry, receiving no water after the last of October until about April 1, the object being to hold them dormant late enough to prevent much growth until there is no danger of hard freezing under the glass. During summer they have the usual treatment, giving the first full crop about Decoration day and continuing until about November 1.

Kaiserin Roses.

(Grown under Ribbed Glass by J. E. Bonsall.)

Early mums are successfully grown in the same houses.

J. E. BONSTALL.

LIFTING FIELD ROSES.

Please give me some advice about lifting young roses from the field, to be potted up for spring sales. Would you lift them this fall and carry them over in coldframes, or leave them in the field until spring? I am located in Tennessee.

J. F. C.

It will not matter much when you pot up the roses from the field. If you pot them this fall, wait until they are dormant. If you put it off until spring, get it done before they make any sign of growth. I would prefer potting them late this fall. Do not pot into too large pots.

H. G.

ROSES FOR FUNERAL WORK

Will you give me the names of the best hardy roses to be used in funeral work? Can I plant the roses along the side of one of my greenhouses with success? It gets hot there, as it would be on the south side. Would the roses need any protection in the winter in central Ohio?

J. A. F.

I would not advise planting the hybrid perpetual section along the side of your greenhouse; in fact, any or all of the hardy roses would do better in a more open location, where mildew and red spider are less liable to attack them.

A few of the best and reliably hardy hybrid perpetuals are: Frau Karl Druschki, pure white; Mrs. John Laing and Mme. Gabriel Luizet, pink; Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; General Jacqueminot, scarlet crimson; Fisher Holmes and Baron de Bonstettin, dark crimson.

White and pink Maman Cochet are two indispensable tea-scented varieties which will give a constant succession of flowers all summer. The everblooming hybrid teas are the most useful of all for the florist who grows for his own home trade. A few good sorts are: Mme. Abel Chateau, carmine rose shaded salmon; Killarney, pale pink; White Killarney, white; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white; Caroline Testout, salmon pink; Bessie Brown, creamy white; Gruss an Teplitz, crimson scarlet; Viscountess Folkestone, creamy pink; Mildred Grant, blush white.

A few other valuable roses for your purpose are: Mme. Plantier, pure white; Clothilde Soupert, pink and white, a persistent flowering polyantha; Blanche Moreau, white moss; Rosa Rugosa, Mme. Georges Bruant, pure white, and Conrad Ferdinand de Meyer, pink. Hermosa is a useful China rose with pale pink flowers. Among climbing roses such sorts as Dorothy Perkins, Baltimore Belle, Hiawatha, Crimson Rambler and Lady Gay are a few of the best.

The hybrid perpetuals will winter well if earth is drawn up to them just before the ground freezes up. The teas, hybrid teas and polyanthas, if dug up and buried in the soil either outdoors or in a coldframe, will come through all right, planting them out as soon as the ground is clear of frost and well dried out.

As the different varieties show color the feeding should cease, because if the feeding is too long continued the flowers damp and are rendered useless. It is an art only acquired by long observation, to know when to stop feeding, but the grower had better err on the side of too little rather than too much, as a flower spoiled means the loss of the season's work.

Never use bone or any solid fertilizer so late as this. Confine the feeding entirely to liquids, either chemical or natural manures, as the liquid can be taken up by the plant and used at once and will not remain in the soil to injure the blooms later.

Rust.

The usual complaints regarding rust at this season are coming in, more particularly from growers who have their stock outside. In New Jersey it seems impossible to grow mums outside any more without rust and leaf-spot. Before the plants are got inside they should be sprayed with the liver of sulphur or potassium sulphide. I have found this will keep down rust and will also check any mildew that may be coming as a result of the damp night air.

All plants that are outside should be got in as soon as possible now, especially if they have to be lifted and potted, because time must be given the plants to get established again before the flowers open. Many market pot plants are handled in this way, and if the lifting be carefully done and the plants shaded for several days after potting, they suffer but little injury. CHAS. H. TOTTY.

WHITE GRUBS IN SOIL.

Will you kindly advise me what to do for white grubs? They eat the roots off my bedding plants and girdle them under the ground. I have lost a great many plants that I had in the field. The soil that I have prepared for my benches also has grubs in it. Each time I handle it I kill all I find, but no doubt several will be left in. C. A. H.

The grubs you are having trouble with are probably the larvæ of the May beetle or June bug. These are destructive, particularly in dry seasons, when they come near the surface of the soil and eat the roots from grasses and many garden crops. Steam sterilization of the soil destroys these and all other pests. This is, of course, impossible among growing crops, but you can get rid of them by using carbon bisulphide. This will cost you about 25 cents per pound commercially. Bore holes eighteen inches apart each way in the affected beds, using a pointed stick. In each hole pour a few drops of the carbon, covering the hole at once. The fumes are penetrating and deadly, especially when the ground is damp. This remedy can also be applied to plants in pots or crops in benches. It will not hurt any of your crops in the least. Keep any naked lights away from the bottle while using it; when you have done using it, cork up securely and seal the top with paraffin to prevent any fumes escaping. C. W.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I am sending you samples of my geraniums, the leaves of which are diseased. These plants were purchased in April. They have been kept in covered frames, well ventilated, until two weeks ago, when I brought them into the greenhouse. This trouble began the last of May and has been increasing, in spite of all my efforts to check it. I have sprayed them with Bordeaux mixture and have used sulphur and air-slaked lime. What is the trouble and can it be checked? The leaves finally turn yellow and drop. I find my large stock geraniums planted out in the borders are affected also.

L. M. D.

Your trouble is not by any means an uncommon one. As your plants appear to have been sickly from the start, it may have been due to overpropagation. If the plants from which your stock was obtained were from plants kept continually under glass and every possible cutting taken from them, it is not surprising that they show a lack of vitality and fall an easy mark to disease. Keeping cuttings too long in the propagating bench is also liable to start this trouble. As a general thing, cuttings taken from indoor stock root with the smallest loss from damping off and, unless the propagating is overdone, they should remain healthy, either inside or out of doors.

Climatic conditions often start blight in the foliage. Damp, warm and sunless weather, if continued for several days, will sometimes ruin whole beds. Your trouble, however, is evidently of a different nature, and as you evidently have it in a virulent form and remedial measures have been of no avail, it would be better to throw away your plants and endeavor to secure clean stock from a reliable specialist in geraniums. If you do not care to do this, pick your pot plants clean and stand them on a sunny bench, where they can get plenty of pure, sweet air. If the pots are well filled with roots, use a little nitrate of soda or soot in an endeavor to tone them up. Before taking any cuttings from your stock plants wait until just before frost threatens. Trim the foliage off quite bare, dip the cuttings in Bordeaux mixture and place in clean sand in a sunny house. It is possible they may keep clean, but I would have more faith in new stock. C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR SPRING SALES.

How late can cuttings be put in sand to make 4-inch blooming plants not later than June 1? C. L. H.

The usual plan is to grow along the cuttings taken in September and October for spring sales, but you can propagate as late as the end of January and get nice 4-inch pot stock by June 1. In the case of cuttings taken during the winter the best plan is to insert each singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam. They will root within a month. Shift to 3-inch and later 4-inch pots. C. W.

MY MARYLAND ROSE.

Frank P. Myers, of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa., is recognized as one of the close observers in floriculture and the stock he turns out at his establishment has a reputation for quality in every market in which it is known, and that includes New York, Pittsburg and Chicago as well as Philadelphia. For these reasons Mr. Myers' opinion on any subject connected with rose growing is of interest to all engaged in the trade. Speaking of My Maryland the other day at Chicago, he said:

"It is by all odds the most profitable pink rose on the market today. I thought little of it until I heard some of the big growers of the east commenting on it, which caused me to run down to John Cook's place at Baltimore, to have a look at it there. I liked it from the start and the more I have seen of it the better I like it. We put in one house of it, and in one day while I was at the national flower show I took orders for 40,000 plants; it might have been more had I known how readily it propagates. From 1,225 plants we made 80,000 cuttings, and I think we might have made 100,000. We stopped taking wood in March and from those 1,225 plants in April we took 20 cents per plant in cut flowers, in May 17 cents per plant, and in June 18 cents per plant. Could any rose beat that?"

"Our plants, you may well judge, did not stand still at any time last winter. Given the right treatment it will give any grower better financial returns than any other rose I know of."

ROSES UNDER RIBBED GLASS.

I note in the REVIEW for September 9 the illustration of J. E. Bonsall's rose houses, which are glazed with ribbed glass, and should like some additional information. Won't you please tell us more about them? H. O.

The range consists of five houses, each 16x320 feet, even span, running east and west. The beds are solid, one in the center of each house, between the purlin posts, and one under each valley. They are six feet wide, with 2-foot walks between.

The glass used is what is known in the market as ribbed or corrugated glass, such as is used largely in factories. It is three-sixteenths of an inch thick and 24x27 inches. This glass does not form a lens, so there is no burning. Neither do the rafters or posts cast a shadow, as the refraction from the corrugations overcomes that. The light, while not quite as bright as under clear glass, gives good results for summer crops. There are no heating pipes, as the houses are used for summer crops exclusively.

The crops grown are largely Kaiserin and Carnot roses. They, of course, are dormant during the winter, but the ground does not freeze under the manure mulch used for growing the crop. While dormant they are kept comparatively dry, receiving no water after the last of October until about April 1, the object being to hold them dormant late enough to prevent much growth until there is no danger of hard freezing under the glass. During summer they have the usual treatment, giving the first full crop about Decoration day and continuing until about November 1.

Early mums are successfully grown in the same houses. J. E. BONSALE.

LIFTING FIELD ROSES.

Please give me some advice about lifting young roses from the field, to be potted up for spring sales. Would you lift them this fall and carry them over in coldframes, or leave them in the field until spring? I am located in Tennessee. J. F. C.

It will not matter much when you pot up the roses from the field. If you pot them this fall, wait until they are dormant. If you put it off until spring, get it done before they make any sign of growth. I would prefer potting them late this fall. Do not pot into too large pots. H. G.

ROSES FOR FUNERAL WORK

Will you give me the names of the best hardy roses to be used in funeral work? Can I plant the roses along the side of one of my greenhouses with success? It gets hot there, as it would be on the south side. Would the roses need any protection in the winter in central Ohio? J. A. F.

I would not advise planting the hybrid perpetual section along the side of your greenhouse; in fact, any or all of the hardy roses would do better in a more open location, where mildew and red spider are less liable to attack them.

A few of the best and reliably hardy hybrid perpetuals are: Frau Karl Druschki, pure white; Mrs. John Laing and Mme. Gabriel Luizet, pink; Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; General Jacqueminot, scarlet crimson; Fisher Holmes and Baron de Bonstettin, dark crimson.

White and pink Maman Cochet are two indispensable tea-scented varieties which will give a constant succession of flowers all summer. The everblooming hybrid teas are the most useful of all for the florist who grows for his own home trade. A few good sorts are: Mme. Abel Chateau, carmine rose shaded salmon; Killarney, pale pink; White Killarney, white; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white; Caroline Testout, salmon pink; Bessie Brown, creamy white; Gruss an Teplitz, crimson scarlet; Viscountess Folkestone, creamy pink; Mildred Grant, blush white.

A few other valuable roses for your purpose are: Mme. Plantier, pure white; Clothilde Souper, pink and white, a persistent flowering polyantha; Blanche Moreau, white moss; Rosa Rugosa, Mme. Georges Bruant, pure white, and Conrad Ferdinand de Meyer, pink. Hermosa is a useful China rose with pale pink flowers. Among climbing roses such sorts as Dorothy Perkins, Baltimore Belle, Hiawatha, Crimson Rambler and Lady Gay are a few of the best.

The hybrid perpetuals will winter well if earth is drawn up to them just before the ground freezes up. The teas, hybrid teas and polyanthas, if dug up and buried in the soil either outdoors or in a coldframe, will come through all right, planting them out as soon as the ground is clear of frost and well dried out. AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

More Special Prizes to be Awarded.

President August F. Poehlmann wishes to call the particular attention of all intending exhibitors to the amended rule which is to be observed by exhibitors. This cuts out the requirement for a single growth of the current season. The rule, Section 6, now reads as follows: "Any article manifestly unfit to show may be excluded by the management, and the judges shall withhold any premium when the entries are unworthy of awards. The management may at any time order the removal of an exhibit which is in bad condition."

Since issuing the preliminary schedule, the following prizes have been filed:

The Waban Rose Conservatories, of Natick, Mass., offer a silver cup, valued at $50, for the best fifty blooms of White Killarneys, Waban variety.

Alexander Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., offers a silver cup, valued at $25, for the best new rose of American origin, of the year 1909-1910.

For the prettiest exhibit of roses in the exhibition, to be decided by the ladies' vote, a $10 gold piece, given by Miss Marian I. Hammond, of Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

The H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., offers a silver cup, valued at $25, for fifty blooms of Killarney roses.

The happiest woman in the county of Dutchess and the state of New York was Mrs. Amelia Lefevere, who received a recognition of a medal from the American Rose Society for a dooryard of roses, so well kept that it was the admiration of the neighborhood. This award has excited considerable interest and is one of the ways to build up the American Rose Society in popular esteem. Let one person in a neighborhood set an example like this and others are sure to follow. The good work grows and the result is in a practical way a benefit to the commercial flower growers, aside from the pleasure which a well kept dooryard gives to every passerby.

CARNATIONS IN POTS.

Kindly let me know if carnations can be grown with any success in pots, and what kind of fertilizer to use and how often it should be applied. I am located in a flooded district and may have to move them before they bloom. This is the reason I want to plant in pots. My house is 10x40, running north and south, nine feet high at the gable and five feet at the eaves; raised benches, with eighteen inches of glass above the benches on the sides. I have some planted now in 5-inch pots plunged up to the rim in soil on the benches and set so the plants stand 9x12 inches apart. I am located in West Virginia. G. H.

Carnations can be grown successfully in pots, but will require much closer attention and more labor than when grown in the regular way on benches.

Pot them at once into 5-inch pots and stand them on your benches on sand as you would any other pot plant. Stand them far enough apart to allow good circulation of air between the plants. Water carefully, as they will dry out more quickly than they would if growing on benches. After they become fairly well potbound shift into 7-inch pots and do not feed with liquid manure until the plants are potbound in the 7-inch pots. Use a good, fibrous loam for potting, such as you would use in your benches. No special fertilizer is needed other than what you would use on the bench-grown stock. Keep them supported nicely and you will get some good blooms. Do not plunge the pots until toward spring.

THRIPS NOT TO BLAME.

Since reading Mr. Baur's carnation notes of August 26 I am inclined to think I have thrips in my carnation house. I housed them the first week in August and the warm weather led me to believe that was the cause of so many of the buds drying up. I purchased my White Enchantress from a grower who was troubled with thrips last season. The buds and tops of the plants seem to die and dry up. I have examined them carefully, but cannot find insects of any kind, but I am not sure I could tell thrips if I should see one. I have been careful about keeping the house watered and cannot account for so many buds dying. I have frequently dusted the plants with a dry Bordeaux powder, but the trouble is spreading to other varieties than White Enchantress. J. L. M.

these leaves and they may be partly responsible for your trouble. The blasting of the buds may be attributed partly to them and partly to the root disturbance in transplanting, and the accompanying conditions.

I would advise you to go over the plants and take off every shoot and every leaf which shows the trouble. Then syringe them as hard as you can with the hose in the morning of a bright day. After dinner spray the plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture and scatter slaked lime in the walks and under the benches. If you run any artificial heat, paint a pipe with sulphur and lime in equal portions, made into a thick paint with water. Keep picking off the affected leaves if any more appear. Give plenty of air and water carefully but not too sparingly.

FOR A CRISTMAS CROP.

When shall I discontinue topping my carnations in order to have a good crop for Christmas? D. S.

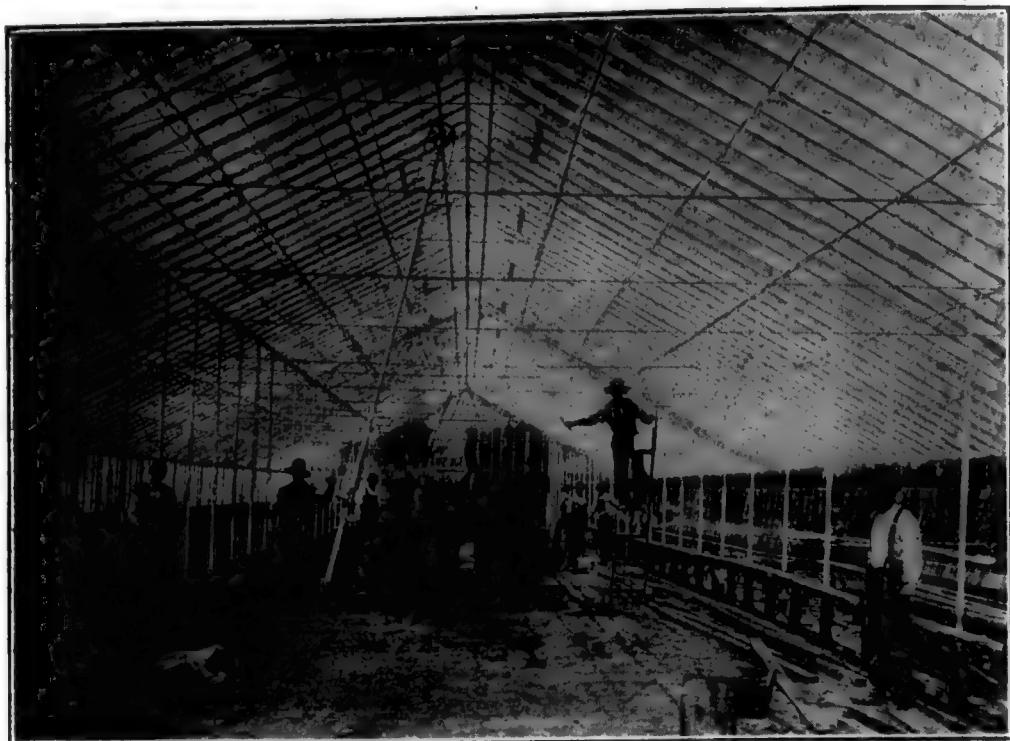

You will likely do well to discontinue topping your carnations now. Much will depend on how close you top and then, too, varieties differ greatly in the time it takes them to produce a crop of blooms. If you merely remove the blooming shoots just before the bud shows color you can take them off until a month before you want blooms, but if you take them off when the bud first shows, then you must allow fully two months. Beacon ought not to be topped after this date except as first stated, else you are likely to miss Christmas.

CARNATIONS IN THE FIELD.

Please state what kind of soil is the best to use in planting carnations in the field, in order to secure good, strong plants for greenhouse purposes. Would sandy soil be the best for the purpose, or soil well mixed with cow manure? Also state whether daily watering is helpful in securing good, healthy plants.

O. A. C.

The best soil for growing carnations in the field is a sandy loam of moderate fertility. You will find that a sandy soil will always lift well. While you may not always be able to save a large ball of soil on the roots, you can always get all the small, fibrous roots intact. They are more essential than a ball of soil, and we never mind much if all the soil comes off the roots, providing it crumbles without tearing the roots. A stiff, clayey soil will perhaps lift well enough after a rain, as long as it is moist, but as soon as it gets somewhat dry it comes up in lumps, and, to reduce the ball, one is obliged to tear the roots in spite of the utmost care. Consequently, recovery from the transplanting is slow and many plants are lost altogether.

It is best to have the soil in the field only moderately rich. It should not be as rich as that put into the benches. It is not at all desirable to produce a large, rank growth in the field, but, on the contrary, you want just a good, moderate growth. You want the growth to be what we call hard at planting time, so that it will not wilt during the period of reestablishment. A plant which has grown on a soil of moderate fertility and sandy texture, in a season of moderate rain, will come up with practically all its roots, and when it is set into soil a little richer than that in the field, the fibrous roots will take hold quickly. Before the well-matured plant has had a chance to wilt, the roots are supplying it again with moisture and nourishment. Size of plant is not at all essential to success, although good, reasonable size is desirable, providing it is not secured at the expense of the above-mentioned qualities. Better secure size by starting your cuttings fairly early, and planting out good, strong plants early in the field.

The reasons given above also hold good against watering carnation plants in the field. If you merely wanted size of plant, then watering would be advisable. In the absence of rain during the outside growing season, the cultivator will do more good than all the watering you can do. The drier it gets, the oftener should the cultivator be run over the patch, to keep the soil from crusting.

A QUARTER MILLION BLOOMS.

Two hundred twenty-eight thousand six hundred fifty-two carnation blooms from one house in one season is a pretty fair cut, and the growers in charge of the greenhouses of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., are proud of this record, made last season.

The accompanying illustrations show the house in process of construction and again just after being planted. It is a trussed-roof house, built with a solid concrete north wall and a glass partition separating it from the adjoining house. The structure is 50x200, twenty feet to the ridge and seven feet to the gutter. It contains seven benches 5x195 feet. The construction was begun with grading April 13, 1908. The truss roof was up June 15 and the house was glazed July 10. It was planted between July 27 and July 30 and contained 9,480 plants. These had been set in the field April 20 from 2½-inch and 3-inch pots. About half the plants, to be exact 4,680, were Enchantress, with sixteen other varieties in small numbers, as follows:

Pink Imperial	100
Mrs. Lawson	100
Aristocrat	100
Variegated Imperial	100
Dorothy Whitney	100
Mrs. Patten	250
Boston Market	100
Sarah Hill	100
White Enchantress	400
White Perfection	500
Purity	1,800
Defiance	100
Victory	500
Harry Fenn	100
Winsor	200
Enchantress	4,680
Rose-pink Enchantress	250

Total.....9,480

The house was run at a temperature of 50 degrees to 52 degrees at night. No record was kept of the number of blooms cut from each variety, but count was kept of the total number cut in the house. The first flowers were sent to the city retail store September 14, and the last July 19. During the intervening period the blooms cut were as follows:

Period.	Blooms Cut.
September 14 to 30.....	8,741
October	17,021
November	24,072
December	20,316
January	12,375
February	13,171
March	18,545
April	17,762
May	25,524
June	48,780
July 1 to 19.....	21,745

Total cut for season.....228,652

This makes an average of a fraction over twenty-four blooms per plant.

trussed-roof house, built with a solid concrete north wall and a glass partition separating it from the adjoining house. The structure is 50x200, twenty feet to the ridge and seven feet to the gutter. It contains seven benches 5x195 feet. The construction was begun with grading April 13, 1908. The truss roof was up June 15 and the house was glazed July 10. It was planted between July 27 and July 30 and contained 9,480 plants. These had been set in the field April 20 from 2½-inch and 3-inch pots. About half the plants, to be exact 4,680, were Enchantress, with sixteen other varieties in small numbers, as follows:

Pink Imperial	100
Mrs. Lawson	100
Aristocrat	100
Variegated Imperial	100
Dorothy Whitney	100
Mrs. Patten	250
Boston Market	100
Sarah Hill	100
White Enchantress	400
White Perfection	500
Purity	1,800
Defiance	100
Victory	500
Harry Fenn	100
Winsor	200
Enchantress	4,680
Rose-pink Enchantress	250

Total.....9,480

The house was run at a temperature of 50 degrees to 52 degrees at night. No record was kept of the number of blooms cut from each variety, but count was kept of the total number cut in the house. The first flowers were sent to the city retail store September 14, and the last July 19. During the intervening period the blooms cut were as follows:

Period.	Blooms Cut.
September 14 to 30.....	8,741
October	17,621
November	24,072
December	20,316
January	12,375
February	13,171
March	18,543
April	17,762
May	25,524
June	48,780
July 1 to 19.....	21,745

Total cut for season.....228,652

This makes an average of a fraction over twenty-four blooms per plant.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cinerarias.

As the growth on cinerarias is now much more rapid, the plants will require spacing once a week and potting should be done before the young plants become crowded in the flats or potbound. Cinerarias like a light, rich soil, not pressed too firmly in the pots until the final shift, when it is better to use a potting stick and see that it is well firmed. For compost in the earlier stages of growth, one-half loam, one-fourth leaf-mold and one-fourth fine cow manure, well decayed, answers well. At the last potting drop the leaf-mold. Two-thirds loam and one-third cow manure, with a little fine bone and a dash of sand and fine charcoal, will then be found excellent.

Grow the plants cool all the time; air abundantly; shade from bright sunshine; spray overhead early in the afternoons of hot days. Fumigate or spray once a week for aphids and always keep well up to the glass. With this treatment the plants cannot fail to thrive. For some time yet frame culture will be found much the best for the plants.

Ericas.

It is now time to lift and pot ericas. Where they have been planted out in a sunny spot and kept well syringed, they should be bristling with little flower buds. In lifting, it is essential to have a good ball. This can be reduced with a sharp pointed stick so as to permit them to go into pots of moderate size. It is an erroneous notion that ericas must have peat to successfully grow them. It is true they thrive beautifully in peat, to which sand, leaf-mold and some old manure have been added, but loam will answer as well as peat, particularly if it is of a fibrous nature. Ericas, like all hardwooded subjects, must be potted firmly. Pack the soil a little at a time around the sides of the pots with a thin, flat potting stick, being sure that no open crevices are left.

If nice balls were on the plants when lifted, they will require little shading. Be sure to soak them thoroughly after potting and keep outdoors until danger of frost necessitates their removal to a cold house or pit. Erica melanthera is probably the most widely popular of the heaths in the United States and is an excellent plant for stores, on account of its splendid keeping qualities. It is easily flowered for Christmas by housing a few plants now, giving them a light, airy structure to grow in.

Lilies.

Bulbs of L. longiflorum multiflorum and of the so-called Formosa type should be potted as soon as received. A larger proportion of growers than usual are planning to grow these in lieu of L. longiflorum giganteum, on account of the early date on which Easter falls in 1910. There can be no question but that the giganteum is the best lily commercially, but it is going to require more forcing than usual to flower it by the end of March. This will make it necessary to have buds in sight by St. Valentine's day.

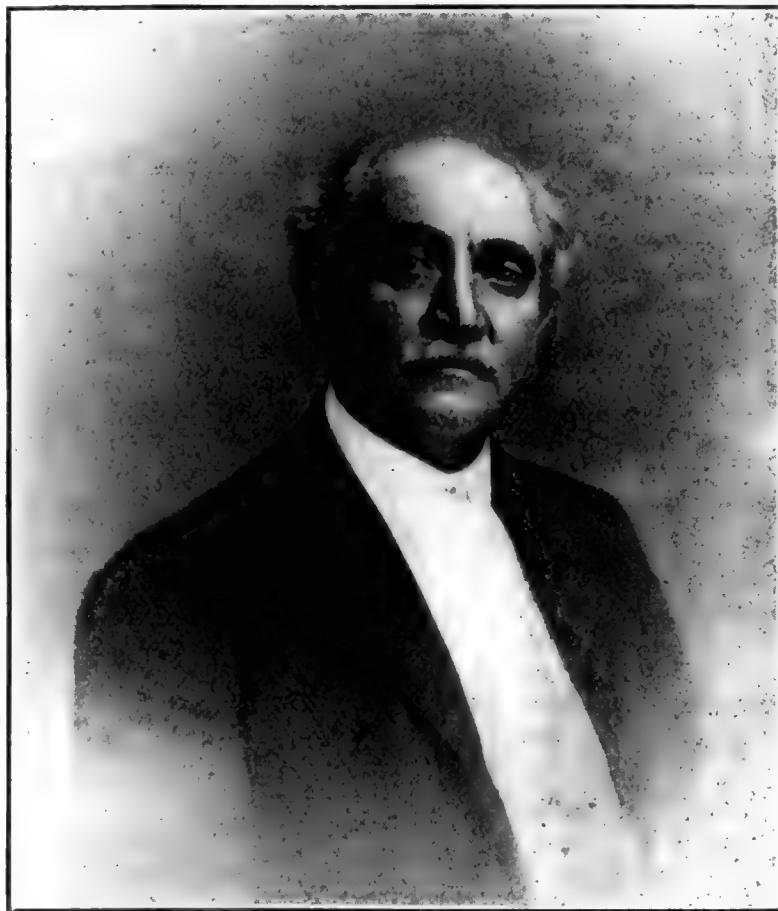

Small growers, who lack forcing facilities, had better depend on Harrisii, multiflorum or Formosa. The first named may require some holding back. It is, unfortunately, subject to disease. Formosas are of such variable heights, all the way from twelve inches to six feet, and also show so much irregularity in the flowers, that they do not make desirable pot plants, though they are good for cutting. Their practical immunity from disease is the great point in their favor. Good multiflorums are probably the best to grow where giganteums cannot be flowered in time.

The giganteums are dwarf in habit and flower profusely. The flowers are large and the percentage of loss from disease is, as a rule, less than from Harrisii or multiflorum. Just as soon as the lily bulbs arrive, get them in the soil. If allowed to lie around for a week in flats, they will lose much of their weight and become quite flabby. When the scales of ter to secure any propagating wood on marguerites in the hot months, every shoot hardening and running to bloom. There should be no trouble now for some months about securing all necessary cuttings. Plants carried over the summer in pots do not at present look particularly promising, owing to the constant effort they make to bloom, causing a continual removal of buds. They will soon take on a new lease of life. Any which are getting cramped at the root will be benefited by a small shift. Do not give too big a shift, for it will mean an excess of growth at the expense of flowers. For early winter flowering the plants must be well rooted in the pots.

Hydrangea Otaksa.

Easter comes early in 1910, and it behooves us to get the wood ripened on our hydrangeas in good season, so that they will be in a fit condition to force a little earlier than usual. Field-grown stock, if potted now and kept in an open, sunny spot, will wilt but little, provided some ball was retained on the plants and they are freely sprayed for a few days. Plants kept in pots through the summer can have the water supply gradually reduced, in order to check the growth and harden the wood. Remember the withholding of water must not be sudden, or it will be more harmful than helpful. What we are aiming at is to have the foliage matured and the wood of a nutty brown color early in December. If we can secure these things, we can depend upon it that the plants will be in a fit condition for forcing.

a lily bulb become soft, it is a moral certainty that much of its vitality has gone. Be careful, then, to delay potting of all lilies as short a time as possible.

Marguerites.

Stock plants of marguerites in the field are now throwing a nice lot of soft cuttings, free from flower buds, and a good batch of these should be placed in the sand bench at once. It is a difficult mat-

Lemon-scented Verbenas.

Every florist is asked for some plants of lemon-scented verbenas each spring. It is often found a difficult subject to propagate. From hard wood the chances of rooting this plant are small, but by selecting soft tops or little side shoots rubbed off with a heel, and inserting them in an ordinary propagating bench where there is a little bottom heat, few should fail to root. It is always well to dig up a few old plants, to be kept dormant during winter. These, when started, yield an abundant crop of soft growths which are ideal for propagating purposes.

Eucharis Amazonica.

A crop of spikes of Eucharis Amazonica around the holiday season is always welcome. Plants in pots should now be placed in a cool house and gradually dried off. Of course, they are not to be rested so as to lose their foliage, but it will be found that they withstand quite a severe drying with little loss of foliage. If given a rest from about September 20 to November 15, then placed in a warm, moist house and well watered, a good crop of spikes should be in season for Christmas. As the spikes show, afford some liquid manure and it will much improve the size of the flowers, besides promoting a vigorous leaf-growth.

Late Asters.

While there may be no frost in some latitudes for a number of weeks yet, some states had temperatures below the freezing point during the first few days in September, and over the northern states there is always a probability of tender crops being destroyed before October 1. Late asters are an invaluable crop to many a country florist and every effort is made to prolong the crop until the mum season is in full swing.

It is a pity to see fine beds of asters, just coming into flower, destroyed by frost, when a covering of cheesecloth or thin canvas would have saved them. It is a good plan to plant the latest asters in any spare coldframes, so that sashes can be placed over them to keep them clean and protect from early frosts. The sash covering also means a good deal when severe rain and wind storms come along. These practically ruin plants in the open. Provided the ground is moist and the plants are lifted with a ball of earth, they are easily removed to a frame from the open. A little shade for a day or two will prevent any wilting. Where funeral work is an almost daily duty, these little details are well worth attending to.

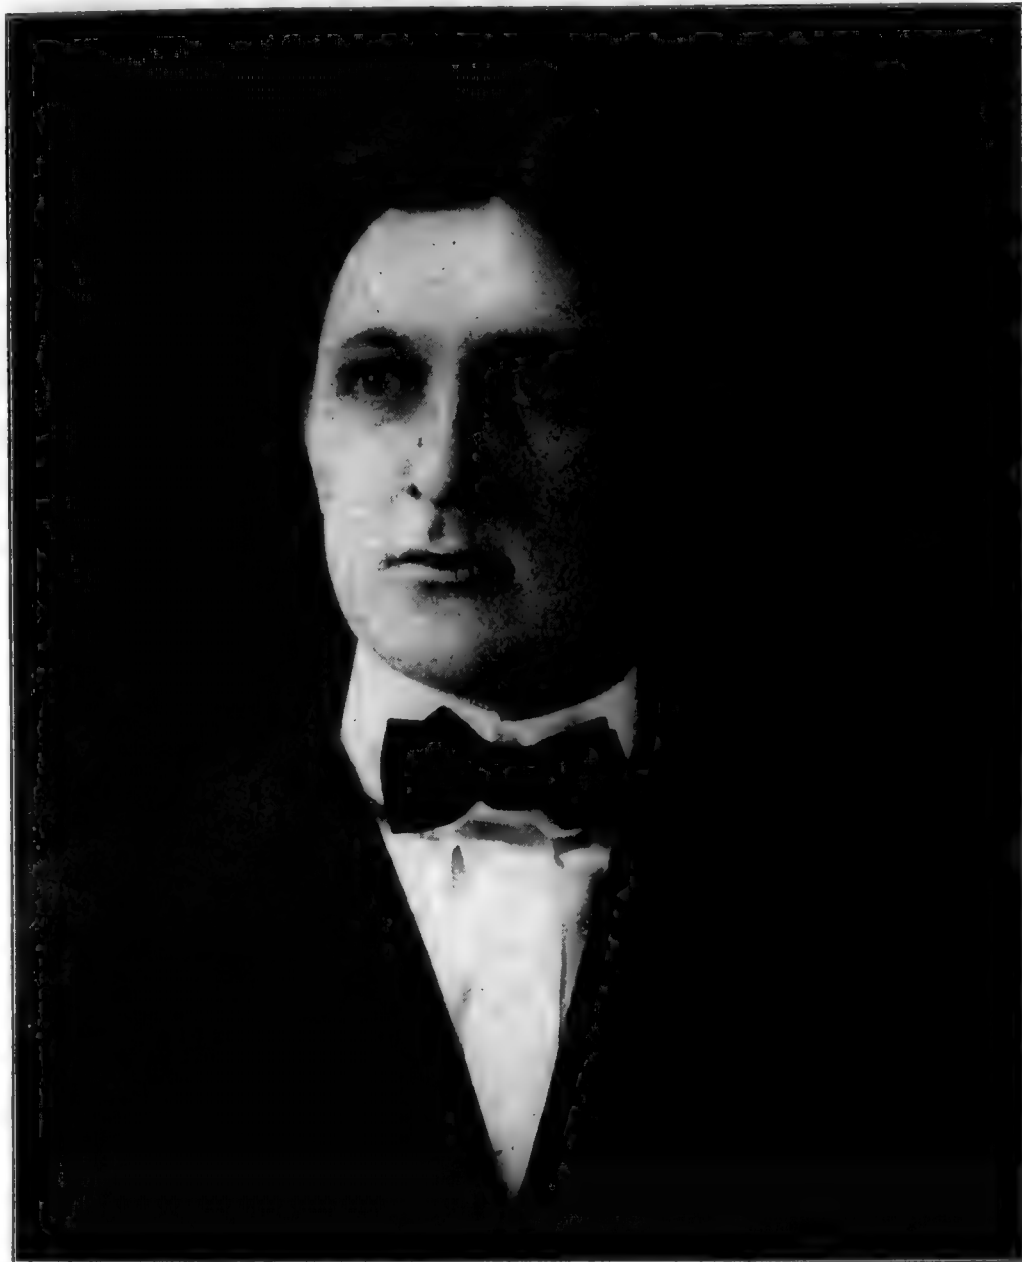

English Ivy.

Where the stock of English ivy is low, the present is a good time to put in a good-sized batch of cuttings. Any ordinary propagating bench will root them. These can be grown into nice, salable little plants for late spring sales. While it is a hardy plant in some states, it scorches badly if unprotected in the more northerly states, and any stock left in the field should receive a covering of straw or leaves when the ground freezes.

He is also the senior partner in the Avondale Floral Co., of Cincinnati.

Mr. Rusconi is married and has a bright and interesting family of five children, who, with Mrs. Rusconi, are now on a pleasure trip to sunny Italy.

GEORGE B. WINDLER.

George B. Windler, the new president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, is the son of the late George H. Windler, and is 30 years old. He is conducting the business which was originally established by Benedict Windler, his grandfather. Mr. Windler became proprietor in the spring of 1903, and makes a specialty of growing plants for the wholesale and retail trade, at 4059 Delore avenue.

Mr. Windler has been a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club for many years and has seldom missed a meeting. He is also a life member of the St. Louis Horticultural Society and is at present a member of its executive board. He has also been vice-president of the Florists' Club, serving from August, 1902, to August, 1903.

Mr. Windler has a host of friends in the trade, who say that the members made no mistake in electing him as presiding officer of the St. Louis Florists' Club. He is the twenty-fourth president since the club was organized, in the year 1887.

ASTER BEETLES.

How can we exterminate aster beetles? We had an exceptionally fine supply of asters until last week, when the beetles came and destroyed the entire stock, also the buds. We have been bothered with them for the last two or three years.

H. & P.

Aster beetles have been unusually destructive this season and you are not by any means the only grower who has had his crop of flowers destroyed. The most effective remedy I have tried is one small tablespoonful of Paris green to five gallons of water, applied through an auto or knapsack sprayer having a fine spray nozzle. By adding a little air-slaked lime any likelihood of injuring the foliage is reduced to a minimum. If you grow asters on a large scale, I would use one pound of Paris green to 200 gallons of water. I have found that one application cleaned out the beetles in short order. It has never injured flowers or foliage and leaves no marks whatever on the blooms. Whoever applies the Paris green should keep it well shaken, to prevent the poison settling at the bottom of the sprayers.

DELIVERY WAGONS.

A first-class delivery outfit is a prime necessity for any retail florist who makes a pretense of being up-to-date. "The apparel oft bespeaks the man," was the way one of the much quoted gentlemen of old once put it, and a retailer is judged a thousand times by appearances for once that his work is appraised by the public. A fine wagon and accouterments, next to a well dressed show window, is one of the best advertisements a retailer can have.

Wholesale florists, as a rule, make few deliveries, and those unostentatiously, but Wm. H. Kuebler, who does business in Brooklyn, says it isn't a bad plan for a wholesaler to do well anything that is worth doing at all. So he had Fitzgibbon & Crisp, of Trenton, N. J., build him a special wagon, just like the retailers', at a cost of some $600, and between the shafts he put $300 more. He considers the turnout a good investment, even for a wholesaler.

OBITUARY.

John Kinnier.

John Kinnier, formerly a florist and horticulturist of Germantown, Pa., died recently at his home, 4609 Germantown avenue, Philadelphia. He retired from active life ten years ago, when he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Clara Coultier.

E. O. Graham.

Edward Oliver Graham, head of the Graham Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., died at his home in Cazenovia, N. Y., September 6. He was born in the town of Whitby, Ont., April 24, 1858, and when still young taught school in various but in the disastrous fire which visited that colony nearly a year ago all three of his cottages were destroyed and he disposed of the property as it stood.

Failing health was the cause of his removal from Rochester. Over a year ago he purchased a farm of 150 acres near the village of Cazenovia, for the purpose of recuperating, at the same time keeping in touch with his business. Last winter he became interested in the development of a slate quarry in Virginia, and was treasurer of the company at the time of his death.

Mr. Graham was a Mason, a member of the Masonic Club, Knights of Pythias and Woodmen of the World, and for several years was treasurer of the Rochester Yacht Club, and a member of its executive committee.

A. W. Morgan.

Aaron W. Morgan, formerly in the greenhouse business at Danville, Ill., who removed to Chicago last spring, was found dead in his bed at 347 East Forty-fourth street on the morning of September 10. The discovery was made by Bonnie Clifford, who is employed in Mr. Morgan's flower store, and A. J. Raymond, a neighbor. A gas hose used for connecting a stove with the gas jet was detached, accidentally, it is believed. Mr. Morgan was 71 years of age. He moved from Danville to Chicago, having purchased the flower store of A. Iralsen, at 588 East Forty-third street. September 2 he was elected to membership in the Chicago Florists' Club. A daughter at Danville survives.

Charles Flury.

Charles Flury, of Stockbridge, Mass., died September 7, in the home of James Flury, at the age of 76 years. He was born in Ireland and had lived in Stock-

Kittanning. The men were acquainted and Carroll was invited to get into Mr. Brady's rig and take a ride out the road with him. When an automobile approached Brady remarked to Carroll that his horse was afraid of automobiles, but told him to remain seated. When the automobile came up close to their rig the horse commenced prancing and Carroll jumped out of the buggy and ran to its head. The automobile whizzed past and when it was all over Carroll was lying in the road. An ambulance was sent out to bring the injured man to the hospital. In the meantime Carroll had lapsed into unconsciousness and just as the ambulance reached the hospital his death occurred. The body was taken to Kline's morgue, and on examination by physicians it was found that besides the fractured leg his chest was also crushed.

Mr. Carroll, who was aged about 60 years, had no known relatives, and the remains were taken in charge by J. W. Glenn, his former employer. Funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. Glenn and the interment was in the Kittanning cemetery.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather continues fine, and there is little change in the market conditions. The funeral of E. H. Harriman used up the available supply of valley and orchids from far and near and boosted their values to winter quotations for a day. In fact, at the close of the demand there were no more of either available, and other markets within a radius of 100 miles were depleted also. The number of floral emblems sent to Arden would have filled several cars. C. A. Dards had the family order, including a magnificent pall of orchids and valley. Alex. McConnell, David Clarke's Sons, M. A. Bowe, Messrs. Myer, Smythe, Young and Thorley all had a share in the work, and some of the wreaths were especially artistic and beautiful. The church was literally banked with flowers where the final services were held.

This week valley has returned to its normal value at this season, and gradually the supply of orchids is increasing and the sources of supply growing in number. The Beauty market shows the first signs of the slowly returning busy season. Prices are hardening and advancing as the length of stem and quality improve. Few perfect Bride, Maid or Killarney are arriving, but of short-stemmed stock there is so much that in the growers' original boxes they go out at an average of 25 cents per hundred. Many thousands of these are received daily by the leading wholesalers, and fortunately the street men are back. The Greeks are enterprising, the department stores are liberal and everything goes at some price, even the asters, which now are at the flood. The best of the white asters bring good figures; so do the finest gladioli in, say, half a dozen varieties. But of the great balance of each, it is well to cast over them the mantle of silence. Good prices prevail for selected White Killarney and My Maryland, of course, and a few better-stemmed carnations begin to make their appearance and command fair prices. Another week or two will put the carnation back upon its pedestal.

The rubrum, auratum and tigrinum lilies are abundant. Rochester, as usual, is much in evidence with late, large asters.

The inflow of chrysanthemums has begun. From now on they will begin to dominate the market. The prophecy is, no high prices for them this season.

The street is beginning to talk violets. Some of the wholesale nabobs are visiting a score of their growers by auto in a day, where formerly a week was considered none too short a time for the annual missionary work. There will be much striving for supremacy this year. There seems to be a prospect of the survival of the fittest. Things are seething here in wholesaledom, and plans and methods and farsightedness are worthy of a Hariman. It may be years before we shall see such conditions again. It needs a steady hand to guide the ships this year into smooth waters.

Plant Growers' Outing.

The second annual clam bake of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, at Whitestone Landing September 9, was a great success. There were handsome prizes for bowling, shooting and a new pot game for the ladies. The prize winners among the thirty-five ladies who rolled five frames were:

Mrs. Aichmann	71
Mrs. Brodsky	65
Mrs. Bruhn	60

The thirty-eight men bowled ten frames and the three winners were:

Mr. Smith	161
H. B. Siebrecht	160
C. K. Drury	147

The shooting contest resulted as follows:

F. Marquardt	70
J. Miesem	68
C. K. Drury	63

In the pot game Mrs. A. L. Miller, Mrs. H. C. Steinhoff and Mrs. W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., were the winners.

A. L. Miller was chairman of the committee that arranged the outing. Miss Mills was chairman of the ladies' committee. H. Scholzel was floor manager, Louis Schmutz sergeant-at-arms, Miesem and Zeller had charge of the men's bowling, Dressel and Scholzel of the ladies' bowling, Roehrs and Siebrecht of the shooting, and Steinhoff and Wagner of the ladies' flower pot game.

Attendance was by invitation. Among those present were:

Messrs. and Mesdames: A. L. Miller, Frederick Marquardt, Anton Schultheis, William Pankok, John Miesem, Bruhn, Brodsky, Herman Maenner, Herman Scholzel, Alfred L. Zeller, John Birnie, Frederick H. Dressel, Louis Dupuy, Louis Schmutz, Peter Wagner, Herman Schmidt, J. H. Fiesser, Julius Roehrs, Jr., William H. Siebrecht, Jr., Herman C. Steinhoff, J. H. Kempner and Wittmann.

Messrs: Anton Schultheis, Jr., J. Austin Shaw, William J. Stewart, Frank Manker, Louis Dupuy, Jr., Gerard Dreyer, Schumacher, Charles K. Drury, J. G. Whildin, Smith, Henry B. Siebrecht, David Mackenzie, Otto V. Zangen, Henry Dailedouze, Oscar Boehler, William Elliott, Frank Traendly, Kreeker and Briggs.

Mesdames: Aichmann and H. H. Lorenz.

Misses: Schultheis, Maenner, Scholzel, Zeller, Dupuy, Elizabeth Mills and Steinhoff.

The Schwaben Volksfest Show.

The floral exhibition of the Schwaben Volksfest celebrated its thirty-third anniversary at the new Coliseum park, Brooklyn, last week, concluding its work Sunday evening, September 12, with an attendance of over 10,000, as many attending also on Labor day and the preceding Sunday. The famous fruit and flower tower was erected at a cost of $400 by Fred Marquardt, of Middle Village. Since 1894 August F. Schrader, of Elmhurst, has been superintendent. The show was under the auspices of the Schwaben Sangerbund, and is similar to the harvest festivals in Germany. The next exhibition of the society will be November 7. The following were the prize winners, and their artistic groupings were the best features of the exhibition:

A. F. Schrader, of Elmhurst, was first for bed of golden privet and bed of sedum.

Charles Koch, of Flatbush, was first for bed of cannas and bed of salvia and second for foliage plants and bed of begonias.

Herman Maenner, of Maspeth, was first for bed of coleus.

Fred Marquardt, of Middle Village, was first for beds of heliotropes, ficus, begonias, and geraniums, and second for a bed of cannas and also received a special prize for a carpet design, lyre.

John Dreyer, of Middle Village, was first for group of conifers and miniature landscape and third and fourth for carpet bedding.

John Baumann, of Middle Village, was first for carpet bedding, bed of foliage plants, and bed of salmon geraniums, and second for carpet bedding, bed of scarlet geraniums and bed of white geraniums.

DELIVERY WAGONS.

A first-class delivery outfit is a prime necessity for any retail florist who makes a pretense of being up-to-date. "The apparel oft bespeaks the man," was the way one of the much quoted gentlemen of old once put it, and a retailer is judged a thousand times by appearances for once that his work is appraised by the public. A fine wagon and accouterments, next to a well dressed show window, is one of the best advertisements a retailer can have.

Wholesale florists, as a rule, make few deliveries, and those unostentatiously, but Wm. H. Kuebler, who does business in Brooklyn, says it isn't a bad plan for a wholesaler to do well anything that is worth doing at all. So he had Fitzgibbon & Crisp, of Trenton, N. J., build him a special wagon, just like the retailers', at a cost of some $600, and between the shafts he put $300 more. He considers the turnout a good investment, even for a wholesaler.

OBITUARY.

John Kinnier.

John Kinnier, formerly a florist and horticulturist of Germantown, Pa., died recently at his home, 4609 Germantown avenue, Philadelphia. He retired from active life ten years ago, when he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Clara Coultier.

E. O. Graham.

Edward Oliver Graham, head of the Graham Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., died at his home in Cazenovia, N. Y., September 6. He was born in the town of Whitby, Ont., April 24, 1858, and when still young taught school in various but in the disastrous fire which visited that colony nearly a year ago all three of his cottages were destroyed and he disposed of the property as it stood.

Failing health was the cause of his removal from Rochester. Over a year ago he purchased a farm of 150 acres near the village of Cazenovia, for the purpose of recuperating, at the same time keeping in touch with his business. Last winter he became interested in the development of a slate quarry in Virginia, and was treasurer of the company at the time of his death.

Mr. Graham was a Mason, a member of the Masonic Club, Knights of Pythias and Woodmen of the World, and for several years was treasurer of the Rochester Yacht Club, and a member of its executive committee.

A. W. Morgan.

Aaron W. Morgan, formerly in the greenhouse business at Danville, Ill., who removed to Chicago last spring, was found dead in his bed at 347 East Forty-fourth street on the morning of September 10. The discovery was made by Bonnie Clifford, who is employed in Mr. Morgan's flower store, and A. J. Raymond, a neighbor. A gas hose used for connecting a stove with the gas jet was detached, accidentally, it is believed. Mr. Morgan was 71 years of age. He moved from Danville to Chicago, having purchased the flower store of A. Iralson, at 588 East Forty-third street. September 2 he was elected to membership in the Chicago Florists' Club. A daughter at Danville survives.

Charles Flury.

Charles Flury, of Stockbridge, Mass., died September 7, in the home of James Flury, at the age of 76 years. He was born in Ireland and had lived in Stock-

Kittanning. The men were acquainted and Carroll was invited to get into Mr. Brady's rig and take a ride out the road with him. When an automobile approached Brady remarked to Carroll that his horse was afraid of automobiles, but told him to remain seated. When the automobile came up close to their rig the horse commenced prancing and Carroll jumped out of the buggy and ran to its head. The automobile whizzed past and when it was all over Carroll was lying in the road. An ambulance was sent out to bring the injured man to the hospital. In the meantime Carroll had lapsed into unconsciousness and just as the ambulance reached the hospital his death occurred. The body was taken to Kline's morgue, and on examination by physicians it was found that besides the fractured leg his chest was also crushed.

Mr. Carroll, who was aged about 60 years, had no known relatives, and the remains were taken in charge by J. W. Glenn, his former employer. Funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. Glenn and the interment was in the Kittanning cemetery.

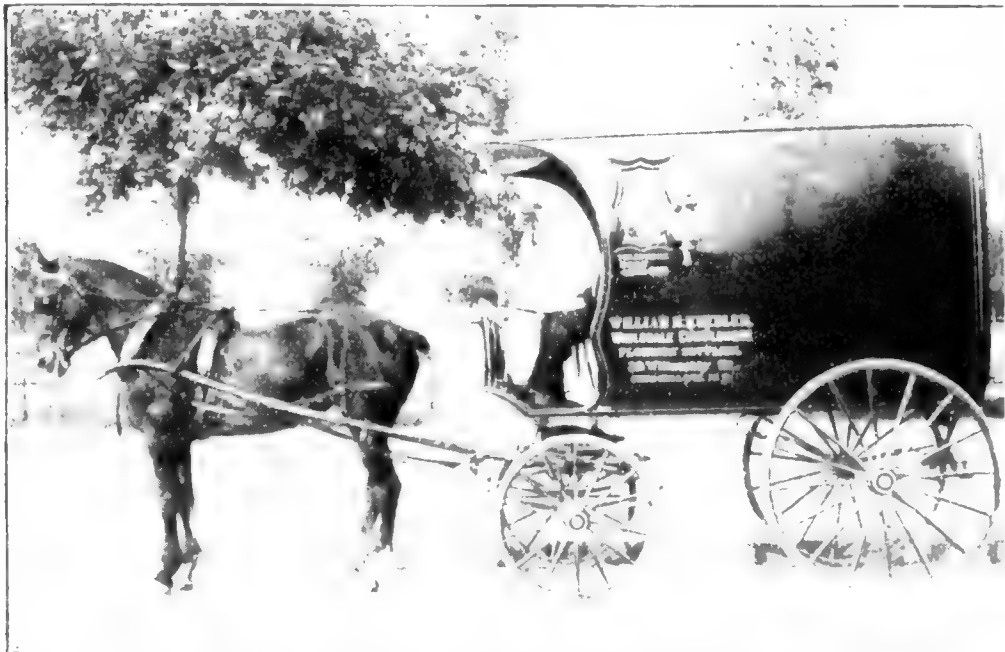

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather continues fine, and there is little change in the market conditions. The funeral of E. H. Harriman used up the available supply of valley and orchids from far and near and boosted their values to winter quotations for a day. In fact, at the close of the demand there were no more of either available, and other markets within a radius of 100 miles were depleted also. The number of floral emblems sent to Arden would have filled several cars. C. A. Dards had the family order, including a magnificent pall of orchids and valley. Alex. McConnell, David Clarke's Sons, M. A. Bowe, Messrs. Myer, Smythe, Young and Thorley all had a share in the work, and some of the wreaths were especially artistic and beautiful. The church was literally banked with flowers where the final services were held.

This week valley has returned to its normal value at this season, and gradually the supply of orchids is increasing and the sources of supply growing in number. The Beauty market shows the first signs of the slowly returning busy season. Prices are hardening and advancing as the length of stem and quality improve. Few perfect Bride, Maid or Killarney are arriving, but of short-stemmed stock there is so much that in the growers' original boxes they go out at an average of 25 cents per hundred. Many thousands of these are received daily by the leading wholesalers, and fortunately the street men are back. The Greeks are enterprising, the department stores are liberal and everything goes at some price, even the asters, which now are at the flood. The best of the white asters bring good figures; so do the finest gladioli in, say, half a dozen varieties. But of the great balance of each, it is well to cast over them the mantle of silence. Good prices prevail for selected White Killarney and My Maryland, of course, and a few better-stemmed carnations begin to make their appearance and command fair prices. Another week or two will put the carnation back upon its pedestal.

The rubrum, auratum and tigrinum lilies are abundant. Rochester, as usual, is much in evidence with late, large asters.

parts of Canada. He removed to Rochester shortly after his marriage, attracted there by the promising condition of the nursery business, and immediately set about to learn the details of the industry. He began as an office man for Chase Bros. more than twenty years ago. By dint of hard work and close application to business he soon made himself valuable as a handler of out-of-town agents, and eventually established his own enterprise, which he had successfully managed for the last fifteen years.

For a number of years Mr. Graham had his summer home at Windsor Beach, bridge forty years, following his trade of gardener. His last employer was President Mellen, of the New Haven railroad. He leaves one brother.

Michael Carroll.

Michael Carroll, who had been in the employ of J. W. Glenn, at Kittanning, Pa., for a number of years, met with a fatal accident while riding out the Freeport road with a Mr. Brady August 29, about 8 o'clock. From what can be learned Carroll started over the river for a walk, and met a Mr. Brady, who is employed on the Ellermeyer farm back of West

Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson,
Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick,
Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg,
Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August
16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.

THE REVIEW brings results.

For the printing of this issue of the REVIEW, 5,555 pounds of white paper were required.

THE lily and the sweet pea, once flowers of a fleeting season, are now all-the-year-around stocks of steadily increasing importance in the wholesale markets.

FROM all over the country comes the optimistic report that from all appearances the trade stands at the opening of a more prosperous season than any yet recorded.

THE florists' trade is weakest in the matter of business methods, especially in credits and collections. The industry would advance much faster if payments were more prompt.

SOME of the leading firms do not accept orders at trade prices from those who have no printed letter-heads, at least until evidence of connection with the trade has been obtained.

THE American Association of Nurserymen has a committee on National Council of Horticulture, of which C. L. Watrous is chairman, but made no appropriation for the use of the council's press bureau.

At the new place to be started by the Joseph Heacock Co., near Philadelphia, the first house to go up will be 55x600, nearly an acre of ground under one roof, following closely the style of construction that has given such excellent satisfaction to the F. R. Pierson Co., the Cottage Gardens Co., and many other large growers of cut flowers for the New York market.

IN the vicinity of New Orleans much success is being made with the growing of outdoor flowers on raised benches, from the fact that a good drainage is obtained, weeds are easily kept out, and stock in hot weather does not burn so easily. Chas. Eble says roses, asters, chrysanthemums, carnations, asparagus and much other stock has done exceptionally well in this way.

THE CROPS.

According to the statistical bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, crop conditions in the United States, in the aggregate, declined during August, 1909, about 6.9 per cent, which compares with a decline in August last year of 4 per cent, and an average decline in August of the past ten years of about 3.2 per cent. September 1 general crop conditions (including crops harvested before August 1, with their condition at time of harvest) were about 2.6 per cent lower than September 1, 1908, and 2.9 per cent lower than the average condition September 1 of the past ten years.
As a consequence of the unfavorable August, general prospects were changed from above average August 1 to below average September 1. Compared with the ten-year average condition, which is represented by 100, the condition September 1 of important crops was: Spring wheat, 115; oats and grapes, 105; flaxseed, 103; rye and potatoes, 101; hops, 100; hay, 99; tobacco, 97; barley, 96;

rice, sweet potatoes and sugar cane, 95;
buckwheat, 94; corn, 93; sorghum, 90;
cotton, 87; apples and peaches, 80.

The following tabulation is a summary for the United States of crop conditions
September 1, with comparisons:

WILD SMILAX.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, Chicago, has been canvassing the situation in wild smilax and in response to his inquiries has received uniformly good reports from the wild smilax shippers in the south. They all report that the season has been an excellent one, with plenty of rain, affording a good supply and better average quality than for some years past.

Wild smilax is an important item with many wholesale florists, and without it the retail firms that execute the big decorations would be greatly handicapped. Some of the larger decorating concerns use wild smilax so extensively that they buy it by the carload, about eighty cases constituting a car.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Following a fortnight during which light overcoats were decidedly comfortable in the evening, midsummer returned September 11; September 13 the official temperature was 89 degrees, and unofficial thermometers put it well above that.
Under the circumstances there could be but one result; the market loosened up all along the line. Receipts were largely increased and the demand fell off, with a consequent accumulation of stock, in spite of the best efforts of the whole-salers. Average prices, which had been excellent for a fortnight or more, became of the hot weather variety. The market has received a bad setback, but the weather man now is predicting seasonable temperature again, and when it comes another change may be expected.

The increase in supply since last report is particularly noticeable in roses.
All varieties are now received in much greater quantity than at any time before this season. While the hot weather has made the stock open quickly, the quality

Beauties

Are in Demand—We Have Them

Don't hesitate to take orders for Beauties—we can fill your orders for any length and any quantity—splendid stock, fine large buds of good color, strong stems, perfect foliage.

All this summer we have had the largest supply and the best Beauties on this market. Season after season we have had a steady supply of uniformly high grade stock. Buyers will make no mistake in making this house their regular source of supply on Beauties.

Killarney

We have so added to our supply of this rose that it is a strong specialty for the season of 1909-10. Cuts are rapidly increasing and the quality now is excellent in all lengths. Order Killarney of us.

Chrysanthemums

Golden Glow, yellow, and October Frost, white, are now in daily supply. Excellent flowers on strong stems with good foliage. Can supply any quantity, at least if given time to get the stock in from the greenhouses. Shipments will be heavy in a few days.

Kaiserin—Maryland

There are no better white roses in market than our Kaiserin, and for pink our My Maryland are coming stronger every day. Our supply of Summer Roses is better than ever before—sure to please—and we want to hear from all the buyers who want the best stock and best service.

Asters

We still are sending out excellent Asters—good clean stock that pleases the buyers.

CARNATIONS are beginning to contest with Asters. Order either of us.

Green Goods

The best Ferns in the market, in unlimited quantity. Asparagus bunches, Smilax, Farleyense, Adiantum and all other greens in quantity. Asparagus strings are scarce. New crop Leucothoe ready.

generally is excellent. Beauties have come in heavily and are fine, but there has been a drop in prices to the ordinary midsummer level of $3 for the long stock. The growers who pinched back instead of cutting the first short crop are now cutting roses with good stems. There are excellent Killarney, fine Maryland, Jardine and Richmond. White Killarney also is received with longer stems and is whitening out in color. The flowers are of good size. Kaiserin, however, is in good supply and of splendid quality, so that White Killarney has not yet felt the full demand. Maid and Bride no longer occupy places in the lead; they are not in so large supply nor of so good quality. There are some splendid Mrs. Jardine, and also Maryland of exceptional quality; several growers are cutting Jardine with 24-inch stems, and Maryland is to be had with 36-inch stems. It is a matter of much comment that the supply of pink roses promises to be far heavier this season than the supply of white. Between Killarney, Maryland, Maid, Jardine and Field, it looks as though there will be a good market for the grower who has put in Bride and White Killarney, for Kaiserin will drop out when cold weather comes.

There is an increase in the supply of carnations, but it is not so great as in other lines. Most of the stock now received is from indoors, and every day marks an improvement in quality, especially in length of stem. The burst of summer weather has brought in the asters in great quantities. There are some really good flowers, but most of the stock is poor. While prices run up to 4 cents, it takes a really good aster to bring more than half that sum, and by far the larger part are sold at from 5 cents to 10 cents per bunch. Gladioli also have come in heavily, but are extremely poor sale.

Many growers have notified their wholesale houses that they can supply chrysanthemums whenever called on, and will be ready to make regular shipments before many days. The market for mums, which had been strengthening, suffered a relapse when the hot weather struck. Both Golden Glow and October Frost are now offered of better quality than any heretofore seen. Another harbinger of autumn arrived last week, the Hudson river violet. Receipts are extremely light, and the demand even lighter. This is not violet weather.

Last week's stringency in valley was quickly relieved, and there also are more lilies, but not enough to meet the demand. There has been considerable complaint from outside buyers because they were charged $2 for lilies last week, but the fact is lilies often were not to be had, even where price cut no figure. However, many buyers stop ordering lilies when they know they are likely to cost over $1.50 per dozen.

There is a good demand for greens, especially asparagus and smilax, to be used for fall opening decorations. The supply of greens on this market gives indications of being lighter this year than for several seasons, one of the largest growers having been compelled to give up this crop because of an insect pest in his soil.

The New Wholesale Houses.

The two new wholesale houses in the Atlas block announce their opening for Monday, September 20. For some time Hoerber Bros. (pronounced Herber, as though there were no "o" in it) have been sending their cut to the Benthely-Coatsworth Co., but their new store will be completed by the end of this week, and Monday morning they will begin selling for themselves. Kyle & Foerster also have made such progress in fitting up their new store that they will be all ready for business by September 20.

These two new stores will make an important addition to the market's facilities. Occupying the large rooms at the north end of the hall on the second floor of the Atlas block, they have fitted up excellently equipped places. Each firm has put in an Orr & Lockett ice-box, that of Kyle & Foerster being one of the largest in the market. Each store has excellent light and everything required to do business with. With the opening of these two stores next Monday, there will be nine wholesale establishments on that floor of the Atlas block, and five in the basement, making fourteen under one roof.

Ned Washburn to Wed.

Invitations shortly will be issued for the wedding of E. B. Washburn, son of C. L. Washburn and grandson of O. P. Bassett, and Miss Belle Story, of Riverside. The wedding will take place October 27. Mr. Washburn recently returned from New York, where he went to meet Miss Story on her return from Europe. Referring to the event, the society column of the Tribune has the following:

"The announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Story, of Riverside, of the betrothal of their elder daughter, Miss Belle Story, to Edgar Washburn, of Hinsdale. Except in the nearness of the wedding date—the service will be a late October celebration—the announcement will not bring surprise to the friends of the two young folk, who have known for some time that the bit of news was imminent. Mr. and Mrs. Story and the Misses Story returned on Tuesday from some months abroad. Their return brought the news that on August 22 the entire family were in an automobile wreck near Paris, which necessitated their remaining at a hospital in the French city for more than a week. Their injuries, however, were not serious."

league, to have four teams named after leading flowers and to bowl each Thursday evening at Bensinger's. Another meeting will be held at Zech & Mann's September 21 to choose the teams, it having been considered impracticable to organize a league with teams representing the different business houses. Bowling will begin September 30.

Growers' Baseball Teams.

The baseball team composed of employees of Bassett & Washburn, at Hinsdale, Ill., visited Morton Grove September 12 for a game with the team of employees of Poehlmann Bros. Co. Practically all the Bassett & Washburn employees accompanied their team. C. L. Washburn and the superintendent, Andrew Benson, went over in Mr. Washburn's automobile. After the game, which resulted in a victory of eleven to three for Poehlmann, August Poehlmann and his force escorted the visitors through the establishment. Refreshments were served. Mr. Washburn believes that such visits are highly valuable in promoting good fellowship and interest among the staffs of the several large establishments in this market.

Various Notes.

W. C. Johnson, one of E. H. Hunt's travelers, is having a successful trip to the coast.

A. W. Morgan, who recently bought Iralsen's store on Forty-third street, was found dead in bed September 10. Only eight days before he had been elected a member of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Several of the vegetable growers north of town recently organized the Greenhouse Vegetable Co., and opened a commission house at 142 South Water street.

The new La Salle hotel, which was opened last week, continues to use large quantities of flowers in the lobby and in the dining-room. O. J. Friedman has the work.

Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, says he thinks Mrs. Jardine rose will be a fine seller in winter. The Budlong establishment is now coming into crop, the plants having been disbudded earlier, as they find it does not pay to cut short roses, unless they are white.

Weiland & Risch are cutting a nice crop of My Maryland, but John P. Risch says Killarney still holds its own in their estimation, and that they do not believe Maryland will prove a strong competitor.

When J. H. Miller, the carnation grower, was seen at Vaughan & Sperry's one day this week he was carrying his right arm with much care because of the rheumatism; he was downtown to take an electrical treatment for it.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is reflooring and redecorating its store.

The George Wittbold Co. will put up some big decorations on State street this week and next.

Percy Jones reports that John Breede, at Oakley and Berteau avenues, has leased a stand in the Flower Growers' market from October 1, and will sell his own stock there.

The Jensen & Dekema greenhouses have been rented to a firm of vegetable growers. The owner of the place, Theo.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We announce to the trade the opening of our New Wholesale House at 51 Wabash Avenue, Chicago,
Monday, September 20, 1909

We have built this season a range of ten houses, each 27x300, planted to Roses and Carnations. It is our intention to add to this glass area as rapidly as required, and we shall conduct our wholesale house with the object of building up a large and permanent

Shipping and Local Trade

We shall be pleased to hear from all buyers, and hope to have them call and inspect our new store, and also our greenhouses at Des Plaines. The store, we think, will compare favorably as to facilities with any in the market, and the stock in the greenhouses will be found to be in splendid shape.

Our supply for the present will consist of Killarney, White Killarney, Maid, Bride and Richmond, with White Perfection, White Enchantress, Enchantress, Beacon, Victory, Afterglow, and other leading varieties of carnations—seven houses of roses, three of carnations.

Kron, has a nice lot of carnation plants in the field that he will therefore sell.

J. H. Willson, formerly a traveler for the Leonard Seed Co., has gone on the road for the A. L. Randall Co. The first violets of the season reached Randall's September 8.

Leonard Kill and A. C. Spencer will be among those present at the reception to Taft at the west side ball park this afternoon. For themselves and their friends they secured twenty-five reserved seats.

John Michelsen, of E. C. Amling's, has returned from a trip to New York city and Rhinebeck. He looks after the violet department at Amling's, and his purpose was to get a line on the prospects for the current season. After visiting some of the leading handlers of violets in New York city, he spent several days with the growers. He says he found them all in cheerful mood, although there are some whose stock is better than others, and most of them were interested in the western market.

At Peter Reinberg's the wish is that the crop of golden wedding celebrations were larger, for Perle is in exceptionally heavy crop with them.

Red, the expressman who gained fame by winning the pie-eating contest at the picnic, lost a brother by death at Kansas City this week. Many of the wholesale houses showed their sympathy by sending flowers.

Bassett & Washburn say that their present crop of Beauties is larger than they ever before had at this season.

Fred Struvy is planning to sell out his flower business and real estate in Chicago and remove to Napa, Cal., where he recently bought thirty-five acres of land.

Frank Pasternick resumed duty at E.

Wienhoeber's September 13, after a month's vacation. Following the Cincinnati convention, he visited in Pittsburg.

F. B. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, and Mrs. Dickinson have returned from their vacation at Pelican lake.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is finishing up a number of additions to the mechanical equipment of its boiler plant, made with the purpose of saving the handling of coal. The fuel will be dumped, instead of shoveled, from the cars, and a conveyor will displace hand labor in carrying it to the boilers.

The Eatons have closed their flower store at 73 Jackson boulevard. The store at 273 Dearborn was closed some months ago.

Wietor Bros. are cutting Mrs. Jardine rose, and say they still think as highly of it as they did last year. It is a free bloomer on stems of good length, and quite distinct among the several good pink roses now in the market.

John Kruchten reports that his father, Nick Kruchten, is this week installing an electric pump, to take the place of steam.

C. W. McKellar says Cattleya labiata is now beginning to arrive, and he looks for a good supply of orchids soon.

Among the week's visitors were: F. P. Myers and Mrs. Myers, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., on their way home from a tour of Yellowstone Park; H. A. Bunyard, with Arthur T. Boddington, New York; F. Schmeling and Mrs. Schmeling, Wauwatosa, Wis.; J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; C. M. Buskirk, Big Rapids, Mich.

CHARLESTOWN, MASS.—Herbert L. Wolff was made happy, August 21, by the arrival of a little son.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business of last week did not show any improvement. The weather has again become hot, and it will take some cooler weather to improve the business and stock.

Most of the retailers report a good deal of funeral work, but there is little doing in other lines.

At the wholesale houses there seems to be plenty of stock coming in, and white stock sells readily. Asters are coming in more plentifully in all colors, and a good rain last week made all outdoor stock look much better. There are quite a few of all grades of American Beauties in, and Brides, Maids, Richmonds and Killarneys are longer and of better color. The same is true of carnations; in these the white sorts sell well at present. Quite a few yellow mums are in the market, of good quality. Some extra good valley is shipped in. Everything in greens is in the market, and plenty of it.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club took place on the grounds of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., Thursday afternoon, September 9. The attendance was large, as it always is at outdoor meetings. This meeting was known as the installation meeting, as all the officers for the ensuing year were installed. Two large wagons, which were in waiting at the end of the car line, conveyed the members to the grounds, one and a half miles distant. On arriving there, we were met by Frank Weber, who escorted us on an inspection trip over the grounds, where everything is kept that is needed to make up a first-class nursery plant.

The first stop was made at the large concrete cold storage house, in course of erection by twenty-five of the employees. It is 80x120 and will store fifteen carloads. After a tramp through the nursery, the rose and carnation houses interested the growers. In carnations they grow only White and Pink Enchantress, and in roses, Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay, Bride and Maid. Everything was looking its best. They are in charge of Walter Weber.

The members then were called into the big potting shed, where the meeting was opened by President W. C. Young, with all the officers and thirty-five members present. The regular routine business being disposed of, the chair appointed Messrs. Ammann and Sanders to install the new officers, namely: George Windler, president; John Connon, vice-president; J. J. Beneke, secretary; W. C. Smith, treasurer; A. J. Bentzen, a three-year-term trustee. The new president, on taking the chair, made an opening speech which greatly impressed the members.

W. C. Smith reported that the old trustees could arrange for a meeting hall in the Odd Fellows' building and secure the old quarters where the club met for fourteen years. The trustees were instructed to engage the old hall. Joseph Hauser, of Webster Groves, was elected to membership. The question box, as usual, brought out a good discussion.

Trustee Bentzen's first duty was to hold an auction sale of the club show paraphernalia, which has been in storage for the last four years. They were bought in by W. C. Smith.

The meeting then adjourned, when refreshments of all kinds were served, with plenty of good cigars. Two large wag-

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard

Co., Chicago, spent a day in the city last week, in company with the head of the firm, W. W. Barnard. They left for a trip south.

Arthur Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., was with us last week on his way home from the coast. Mr. Zirkman says he had a most successful business trip and that the trade out west was prosperous.

D. Bova, manager of the Red Bud Floral Co., on Franklin avenue, will be married Sunday, September 19. Mr. Bova has the best wishes of his many friends in the trade.

Henry Ostertag spent a few days in Chicago last week, buying decorative stock, as his firm has quite a lot of decorating to do during centennial week.

George Waldbart sends pictorial postals to his friends in the trade weekly. The last one said, "Enjoying the sights of gay Paris."

Belleville, Ill., was not represented at the club meeting last week. E. W. Guy, Henry Emunds and A. S. Halstead must have all had a busy day, as they seldom miss all at one time.

Henry Felter, the Lexington avenue florist, will have a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums for the local trade this fall.

C. Young & Sons Co. will, as usual, issue a fall catalogue. Their large importations of bulbs have arrived, in which they do a big business.

Emil Schray and Jule Schray, of the firm of William Schray & Sons, were out visiting the growers in the county recently in their new automobile, and found things in splendid shape at all the places they visited.

nard, until recently with the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., died Friday, September 10. Mr. Barnard took her to Denver a month ago, where he was employed by the Park Floral Co., her health being so poor that he wished to return home to her parents. The executive board of the St. Louis Horticultural Society met Tuesday, September 7, at the new home of C. C. Sanders, on Henly road. The meeting was to perfect arrangements for the fall show of the society, which will be held in the new Coliseum. There were eight members present—C. C. Sanders, Emil Schray, R. DETROIT.

The Market.

"Always something to do" is perhaps the best way to describe the business of the last two weeks, and the beauty of it all is that there was fairly good stock to do it with. Roses are especially fine, with carnations coming along nicely.

Asters are good, bad and worse, with honors about equally divided.

Trip to Greenfield and Redford.

A trip to Greenfield last week found George Browne at work preparing his carnations for planting. During his spare moments our vice-president-elect is drawing plans for the machines which are to make the American carnation stake. Mr. Browne says his stake will be on the market surely next season.

Thomas Browne had just commenced planting his carnations, or rather he was figuring how long it would take to set the 30,000 plants his houses will hold. He has land, land, and still some more land, and about 100,000 carnation plants try hard to cover it by growing large and strong. A goodly share of the land is devoted to Lawson, which Mr. Browne says is hard to excel as a bread winner.

mums are also coming along nicely. The Skinner system of watering was here seen in operation. Both in the houses and in the field the system has proven most satisfactory.

Various Notes.

The infant daughter of H. V. Pierce died last week. The child was but a few months old, and being delicate from the start, had but little chance to survive the hot summer weather.

F. Becker, of Hupprich's, spent several days at Fair Haven fishing last week, leaving those Red Standard pots to shift for themselves.

W. B. Brown has a very "classy" delivery rig, and was awarded a premium at the horse show during state fair week.

The annual judging of the school children's exhibit was scheduled for September 14 and 15. The judges were J. F. Sullivan, M. Bloy, Albert Pochelon, H. Knope and Hugo Schroeter.

Painters have been busy in and outside at Schroeter's.

These are strenuous days for the baseball fans, and many places are vacant in the greenhouses and stores while their occupants are cheering the Tigers to victory.

The annual fair of the M. A. S. was a grand success in every way, except the florists' way. Thousands of strangers were in the city, but little of their change was left with the florists to help with this winter's coal bill. Neither were the exhibits by professionals much to talk about. Frank Holznagle received first premium on a large wreath; outside of this there was little in our line excepting flowers by some amateurs. Not many years ago many of Detroit's leading florists had exhibits at the fair, but, owing to various reasons, these have dwindled down so that this year the management had to rent probably fifty palms to fill up space.

The Bomb Floral Co. has been busy all the week with two fair-sized wedding jobs. Albert Pochelon just enjoys this kind of work, and does about everything but tie the knot and kiss the bride.

S. S. Skidelsky passed the better part of one week in Detroit and found business entirely to his liking. H. S.

RENO, NEV.—Fred J. Fischer will open a store in connection with his greenhouses on Washoe street. He recently made a business trip to California.

Finest Stock of the Season

Note what last week's Review said of our display at the big Annual North End Flower Show, attended by all the growers of that great greenhouse district. Here it is:

"The most notable feature possibly was the vase of Mrs. Jardine rose in the exhibit of Wietor Bros. The judges awarded Wietor Bros. five firsts on roses, Beauties, Richmond, Bride, White Killarney and Mrs. Jardine, and second on Kaiserin. On carnations they won first on Victory, Winsor, White Perfection, Enchantress and White Lawson."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Asters were a veritable glut upon the market last week, but the majority were not of the first quality. In this respect a noticeable feature was that amateur growers appeared to make more of a success than the professionals. Some of the finest blooms brought into the local market were from persons cultivating a small home garden, who offered their surplus for sale.

Funeral work keeps up, but it is admitted that until a good destructive frost cuts off the outdoor blooms, business will experience but little acceleration.

Coming Shows.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society will hold its September exhibition of dahlias, asters and other flowers in Columbia hall, 248 Weybosset street, September 29 and 30. Efforts are being made to secure a larger exhibit than has been the case during the last few years. The monthly meeting of the society will be held September 15, in the lecture room of the Public Library, and will be called an experience meeting, at which the experience of each member in the garden and field, and in the outings since the last meeting, will be narrated.

The annual fall exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society will be held in Masonic hall, September 18 to 20, and already the list of entries insures a successful exhibition. The liberality in prizes and the efficiency of management are plainly manifest in this connection.

W. H. Tarbox, the "dahlia king," of East Greenwich, is exhibiting several thousand asters and dahlias at the Danbury, Conn., fair, and will have a similar showing at the thirty-fifth annual fair of the Washington County Fair Association, at West Kingston.

Various Notes.

Among the foreign importations received through the Providence custom house last week were nineteen packages of bulbs from Rotterdam, Holland.

John F. Wood has had an attractive white tile flooring put in the show window of his store on Westminster street. He had the table decorations at Narragansett hotel for the banquet to the officers of the Italian cruiser Etruria, September 6. He also made a large floral crown and shield in the national colors for the same event.

Annie F. Peckham reports having had the best season's business this summer of any since she opened her store.

O. P. Chapman, Jr., is making a fine display of dahlias at the Hillcrest Dahlia Gardens, 65 Granite street, Watch Hill.

Johnston Bros. furnished the floral casket spread for the Armington funeral September 5. It was of asparagus and lily of the valley. This is one of the first of the casket robes used here.

N. D. Pierce, of Norwood, reports a big business in fancy shrubs, having taken some large orders for fine bay trees for delivery to estates in the south county.

Ed Brooks, of T. J. Johnston & Co., reports the best summer business in his whole experience, and not confined to funeral work, either.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, are sending up some exceptionally fine Golden Glow mums, which are finding ready sale at $3 per dozen, retail.

Robert Johnston, with Johnston Bros., has taken the local agency for the sale of dahlia bulbs for the Mayfield Gardens, J. Vose, proprietor, at Pontiac.

Ruth I. French has entered suit in the Superior Court against John F. Wood for breach of promise to marry.

E. E. Balcomb, formerly director of agriculture and industrial education in Oklahoma and Nebraska, has been appointed to the department of school gardening, chemistry and geography at the Rhode Island State Normal School, in place of L. R. Allen, who has accepted a position as principal of the Johnson Normal School, in Vermont. Mr. Balcomb is a graduate of the Kansas Normal School and the Leland Stanford University. He has had a wide experience and is expected to prove of great value in the work here, especially in the development of school gardening and agricultural education.

The Market.

Cooler weather and the return of the elite to their city homes have resulted in an increased business for the florists. Dry weather and light frosts have cut short the supply of outdoor flowers, so that the florists' stock is now in better demand. Weddings and funerals are both plentiful, and the demand is principally for those occasions. Roses are improving in quality and carnations in quantity. Golden Glow mums are becoming quite common, and the first early whites are already in.

Various Notes.

The state fair was held last week. The space for floral exhibits was small and poor, so that not many exhibits were shown. Holm & Olson, of this city, and J. Vasatka, of Minneapolis, had the plant exhibits; Souden & Desmond, R. A. Latham and J. Vasatka the table decorations. The weather was quite warm, and bouquets and decorations wilted quickly.

The Greeks have opened a flower department in a new department store here.

O. J. Olson and G. A. Clausen have been fishing and hunting the last fortnight, bringing in plenty of fish and ducks. Carl Haugen and E. F. Lemke were hunting also, many birds falling before their guns.

The following called during the week: R. Lutey, of Ironwood, Mich.; Edw. Reid, of Philadelphia; J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia; E. J. Fancourt, representing Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; and A. N. Kinsman, of Austin.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, September 8, at S. N. Peck's store, the chrysanthemum committee handed in a report, which was accepted. Mr. Peck gave the club an interesting talk on his last trip to Chicago, especially about his visit to Peter Reinberg's and to the Chicago flower market. He also told of an experience he had with a piece of funeral work. Some railroad men ordered a 30-inch gates ajar from him for a dead fellow worker, which he made up and sent with a card from the railroad men—and also with the lettering, "Our Comrade," at the base. A relative of the dead railroader had also ordered a 20-inch gates from some other florist, so when she received the two at the house she changed the cards but did not change the lettering. When the railroad men's committee called she drew their attention to the nice design she sent and the small one that they sent. Next day, enter Messrs. Railroad Men at Peck's, badly disappointed. It was the first time they had dealt with him. Exit to the cemetery, where the change in design is detected. Mr. Peck is cleared, but we don't know yet about the relative.

The club has two meetings a month now, on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. The next meeting is September 22, at Kuhnke's greenhouses.

Niessen's News Column

In the fall of the year, when in certain lines at times there is more than a good supply, we can often make you very interesting quotations when a quantity of material is wanted. If you have any large orders in view, and want to know in what direction the Philadelphia market can offer you the best value, we will gladly give you the benefit of our information and quote you prices. We can assure you of prompt and reliable replies to your inquiries.

Killarney

We are now getting both white and pink, the latter in large quantities. Stems as yet a trifle short, 8 in. to 15 in. in length, good, clean foliage and fair flowers. According to the grade, $2.00 to $6.00 per 100.

My Maryland

This rose we can furnish in any quantity, and the best of them are exceedingly fine. We can furnish them with 20-in. stems. Short grades (good value) as low as $2.00 and $3.00 per 100; and the best of them, $8.00 per 100.

Dahlias

$2.00 to $3.00 per 100. Some of the new and choice varieties, $4.00 per 100. In handling dahlias we aim particularly for quality and not so much for quantity, and our growers are guided accordingly.

Carnations

$1.50 to $2.00 per 100. The quality is as good as you can expect to buy them at this season of the year.

Wild Smilax

$6.00 per case. Shipment on receipt of your order.

Decorative Flowers

Now that the people are coming home from the summer resorts you will need the most decorative fall flowers for special occasions, flowers that are choice, showy and not too expensive. We especially recommend the Dahlia.

Dahlias have never been finer than this season. The fancy varieties in orange, yellow, bright pink, soft pink, crimson, scarlet and white are obtainable in large quantities and on long stems. These flowers are especially adapted for fall decorations and give extraordinary value.

Easter Lilies Very choice stock in any quantity. $1.50 per dozen.

Cosmos Fancy red, white and pink; large flowers, long stems.

WILD SMILAX for the decorator.

We can furnish all varieties of seasonable flowers from our splendid stock. The best service guaranteed.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The tone of the cut flower market is decidedly more cheerful. Faces absent during the summer are seen in the commission houses and on the streets leading thereto, the sound of hammer is heard more frequently, and there is a general air of an awakening activity.

The choicer flowers, Beauties, cattleyas, valley, etc., are all unequal to the demand. Gardenias are obtainable. Perhaps it would be clearer to say that at last week's low quotations on Beauties and valley, prices were advanced to enable the available stock to go around, while cattleyas are so scarce that winter prices have been maintained for some weeks. The increase in the supply of orchids, promised so often, seems nearer fulfillment this week.

There is an immense supply of asters despite the fact that everybody agrees the height of the season is past. Brown, Jones and Robinson are none of them sending as good flowers to this market as they have been, while B., J. and R. are cutting so many that asters are the ruling flower today. Purple and soft pink are most in evidence, white and lavender being more nearly even with the demand.

The dahlia has made its appearance in force. While sales are cheap, the buyers take kindly to this autumn flower. The principal varieties seen in quantity in the wholesale market are Arabella and Mrs. Clifford W. Bruton, yellow; Red Hussar and Lyndhurst, red; A. D. Livoni, rose pink, some disbudded stock of this variety being exceptionally fine; Sylvia, soft pink; Flora, white, and Kriemhilde and Perle d'Or. The singles most in evidence are Twentieth Century, Big Chief, Gladys and Wild Fire. Jack Rose and Delice lead the fancies obtainable in moderate quantities and at higher prices.

Carnations are increasing in number. Winsor bids fair to be the most important bright pink. Enchantress still leads in the soft pink. Beacon is coming more to the fore in scarlet, while a number of good whites are in the market. The stems are short in many cases.

Pink roses are overdone, as usual in September. The preponderance of poor stock in pink is more noticeable than any other color and more difficult to move. One good rose is worth more than four poor ones.

Lilies, which have been hanging fire for some time, are selling better; prices fell away but are now advancing. Tuberose have made their appearance, quite a number being sold during the past season. Hydrangeas have colored nicely. The first pansies are in, with regular shipments promised in two weeks. Adiantum and asparagus are more in demand, while the sales of smilax are irregular.

In the Palm Range.

In the visit to Riverton so much time had been occupied in discussing matters of general interest and in viewing the rose garden, that only a few minutes remained to see the immense palm range. Harry C. Sim kindly undertook to act as guide in the rapid walk that followed. A fact that came out strongly during that walk is that the Dreers believe in cedar tubs for large kentias; they ship them tub and all and know that the roots will not be damaged in transit. A splendid stock of big kentias, filling a large range, are grown in these tubs. A second fact of import is the progress made in the growing of Cocos Weddelliana—progress that is shown most clearly in the fine condition of the specimen plants, whose number has increased tenfold during the last couple of years. These specimen cocos in large sizes typify grace and strength as clearly as the tiny cocos typify grace and delicacy.

A Commercial Probability.

Another feature of more than usual interest at Riverton is the appearance in the propagating bed of a quantity of beautifully colored cuttings of the variegated pineapple, Ananassa sativa variegata, the true variegated type, not the pretender. To the thoughtful mind this means that there is a strong possibility, nay, a probability, that variegated pineapples can be had at a reasonable price in the not far distant future.

Opening of the Dahlia Season

The Dahlia has come rapidly to the front as a cut flower of late years and is now indispensable in every well conducted flower store. Many new and beautiful varieties have been introduced recently, most of which we have tried out for cut flower purposes, and our experience in that connection is one of value. We recommend only such as are of

- 1st, superior lasting quality,
- 2d, of good form,
- 3d, good stem, and
- 4th, good clear color.

We represent the principal growers of Atco and Hammonton and others in this vicinity and can offer unexcelled service.

The earlier varieties are now arriving in fine condition and we will have a regular supply of the later sorts as the season advances.

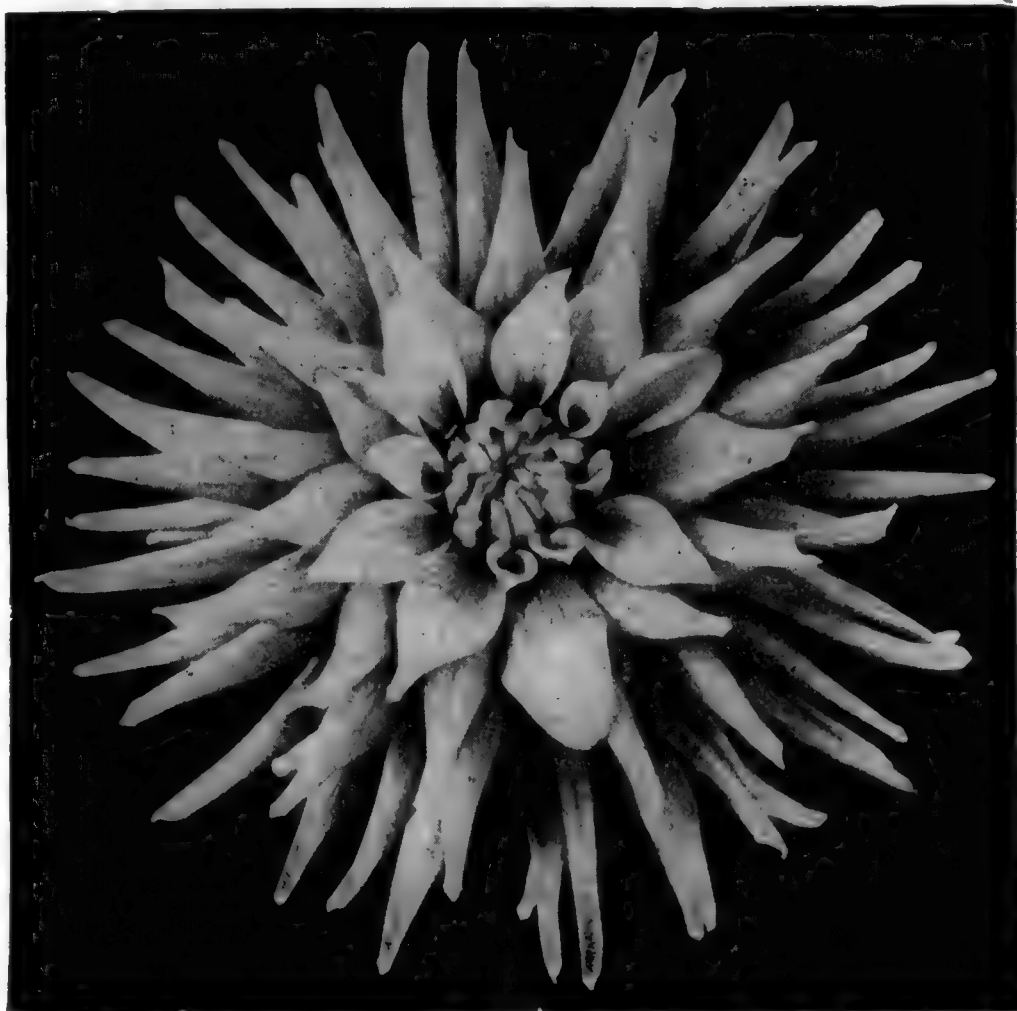

We offer for this season

Storm King, Perle d'Or and Snowclad, among the whites; Livoni and Sylvia, pink; Agnew, Lyndhurst and Red Hussar, crimson; Arabella and Bruton, yellow; Nymphaea, white and colored Century, Kriemhilde, Von Berlin. $2.00 and $2.50 per 100.

We will also have a limited supply of Jack Rose, the brilliant new crimson, and Delice, the beautiful new pink decorative, the greatest keeper of them all, which we can furnish at $4.00 per 100.

NOTE:—As the supply of the last two varieties is very limited, orders should be placed as much in advance as possible.

The Market.

The heavy supplies of asters, gladioli, cosmos, dahlias and other outdoor flowers are still the dominating factor in the market. The supply of these should gradually decline after the present week, but at present the output is unwieldy. A killing frost, if it comes during September, will cause a sharp advance in prices. Asters are selling at much the same prices as a week ago, but best quality flowers are making rather more money. Gladioli are holding out remarkably well; light shades continue in the best demand.

Dahlias do not sell well. Cosmos has an irregular call.

American Beauty roses are steadily improving and the best grades are higher in price. Both Killarney and White Killarney are arriving, of much improved quality, the latter being specially good. Kaiserin continues good and sells well. Bride and Maid are as yet rather small. Carnations are not plentiful and such as arrive are easily disposed of. Valley shows a hardening tendency. The catleya scarcity will soon be relieved, the first labiatae being already to hand. Golden Glow continues to be the only chrysanthemum seen, but other sorts are promised in a few days, while violet specialists say they will have a first picking of singles in a few days. Lilies are abundant, but a slow sale; so are tuberoses. The latter flower is not popular nowadays here. Green stock of all kinds is of excellent quality.

Club Field Day.

Heavy showers on the morning of September 11 somewhat affected the attendance at the field day held by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington. By noon, however, the clouds broke away and the day proved delightful. About sixty were on hand at 1:20 at North Abington, including a dozen ladies. Dinner was served immediately on arrival, following which a number of automobiles and tallyho coaches were boarded and a tour of the several nurseries made. The previous night's rain had made everything look fresh and beautiful and the big blocks of deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs

Various Notes.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, September 21. There will be much business of general interest, in addition to the talk by J. W. Duncan on "Some Facts About the West."

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, September 8, an invitation was extended to the American Peony Society and the Chrysanthemum Society of America to hold their 1910 exhibitions in Boston.

With the additional space which will be afforded by the excavations under the street on Park street, it is now unlikely that the Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association will move from its present location at 6 Park street.

At Horticultural hall, September 11, R. & J. Farquhar & Co. entirely filled the loggia with a beautifully arranged display of gladioli, dahlias, lilies and other seasonable flowers. This part of the building was never before so tastefully decorated. E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener, showed a new seedling orchid, Cattleya bicolor x Laelio-Cattleya luminosa, The Mikado. Thomas L. Watt showed Tournefortia heliotropioides with heliotrope-like flowers, the leaves scented like those of lantanas.

At William W. Edgar Co., Waverley, Herman H. Bartsch, the manager, has a fine stock of flowering stock coming along for Christmas, such as Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, etc. Lilies and azaleas are also specialties with this firm; a good many of the latter will be forced for Christmas.

In the rose house Richmond, Chateaufort and Golden Gate looked particularly well. In the carnation house Enchantress, Beacon, Bay State, Winsor and other good kinds are grown. There are divisions devoted to chrysanthemums, grapes, tomatoes, melons, orchids and other plants and a splendid mushroom house. The vegetable and fruit garden here is one of the best to be seen in Massachusetts.

Henry Terry, at Miss Abby Bradley's, has his roses in fine shape; two divisions are devoted to them. The carnations were extra strong and vigorous. One house contained a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums; another is devoted to mums grown for sprays, which are preferred to single blooms. Everything here, both outside and under glass, showed that a skillful man had charge.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club September 13 was well attended. The exhibits consisted of Golden Glow and a white seedling chrysanthemum from C. H. Totty, Kaiserin and Maman Cochet roses, outdoor grown, from A. L. Miller, and a vase of sweet peas and scarlet carnations from A. C. Zvolanek, for which the awards committee gave each exhibitor a vote of thanks.

The committee on the plant market project reported progress. John B. Nugent, Jr., sent his resignation as chairman of the house committee, because of serious illness in his family, which was accepted with regret. J. S. Fenrich was made chairman of the committee and A. M. Henshaw was appointed to fill the vacancy. Douglas P. Roy, Charles Peters and William Peters were elected members of the club. John Birnie nominated David McKenzie, Joseph Fenrich nominated J. B. McArdle and J. A. Shaw nominated M. A. Ordóñez for membership.

W. A. Marshall moved amendments to the club's by-laws, making the section providing for nominations of officers read as follows:

The president shall appoint, at the September meeting, a committee of seven members, to be known as the Nominating Committee. Said committee shall prepare a list of candidates for officers of the club for the ensuing year. Not less than two nominees to be named for each office, said nominees to be announced at the November meeting and balloted for at the December meeting. Nominations may be made from the floor at the November meeting, after the nominees have been announced by the nominating committee. Nominations from the floor must be placed on an official ballot along with the nominations announced by the nominating committee. A majority of the votes cast shall be necessary to elect. Due notice of nominations shall be sent to all members in good standing.

A letter was read from S. S. Butterfield, from Atoka, Okla., resigning active membership and thanking the club for the farewell dinner and presentation. At his request the club made him an associate member.

A letter from H. A. Bunyard, who is in the west, was read, thanking the club members for their loyal support in his contest for the secretaryship of the S. A. F., and announcing a good surplus as a result of the club's summer outing.

After the house committee had entertained the club with the usual inspirations, the president-elect of the S. A. F. was called upon for an address. Mr. Pierson said New York was the best represented state at the convention, which he characterized as one of the most successful ever held, giving much of the credit to President Valentine. He asked the support of the New York Florists' Club in his work and predicted the convention at Rochester would be the banner one of the society's history. Mr. Pierson is the sixth member of this club to be elected president of the national society. He pleaded for the affiliation and binding together of all the organizations, to be cemented in one great union. The psychological moment, he thought, is here; the time for concentration ripe and some practical way must be devised for amalgamation. The society, he said, had a charter to be proud of and that it should do more for the trade in general. He spoke of the social value of the annual meetings and the friendships formed as sufficient justification for its existence, apart from the business help it materialized. He thought it wise to hold an exhibition at the time of the convention and so interest the general public. A big plant show was suggested, with the offer of premiums, etc. He welcomed practical suggestions from all and pledged himself to an active year, asserting that in the multitude of counselors there is wisdom.

It was a stirring address, ringing with ambition and sincerity.

F. H. Traendly referred to the honor that had come to the club in Mr. Pierson's election and regretted the secretaryship of the society had escaped New York. He spoke of the national flower show to be held in Boston in the spring of 1911 and hoped for its success and the amalgamation of the various societies, suggesting that the rose and carnation societies take the initiative and hold a joint meeting in the early spring of 1910.

Patrick O'Mara was also intensely gratified because of Mr. Pierson's election and said if it had not been for his innate modesty and diffidence he would have been elected years before. He spoke of Mr. Pierson's ripening for the position during his twenty-five years of membership and of the task before him in the unifying of the societies, no one being better fitted for the work, the time being ripe for the S. A. F. and the separate societies to get together. He suggested various ways of making the sessions of the S. A. F. better attended and so putting it on a better foundation, avoiding the discouragement of small audiences and anything tending to lessen the general interest. There were 275 voters, he said, at the election, and yet often a dozen or two only could be held at the sessions of the society. The great problem is how to secure a better attendance and hold it.

W. J. Stewart gave an interesting resume of his observations and said the great problem to solve is that of larger attendance at the business sessions. John Young spoke of the delightful social advantages of Cincinnati and said he had a magnificent time. Captain Berry made a humorous address and said he had joined the society six times and that those who failed to go to Cincinnati did not know what they had missed. Mr. Manda said it was his eighteenth convention and his most enjoyable one.

F. R. Pierson spoke again in behalf of the big exhibition this fall in the Museum of Natural History, of the premium list of over $1,500 and the handsome building placed at their disposal without price. Mr. Marshall and C. H. Totty addressed the club in a similar vein and both spoke hopefully of the great success that now seems likely of accomplishment. President Turner referred to the necessity of early decisions and awards.

The bowlers adjourned at the close for a friendly game and the Friday bowling will continue indefinitely.

Various Notes.

H. C. Steinhoff and his confreres among the plant growers were busy Monday, September 13, with the city officials, arranging for a plant market this fall on the site of the spring market, where especially palms and plants for the retail florists will be displayed until cold weather and the winter storms interfere. This, in addition to the various auctions which commence immediately, will signalize the opening of the fall retail trade and start the wheels moving in earnest for the phenomenal season so universally predicted.

Samuel C. Moon, of Morrisville, Pa., was in the city Monday, September 13, after an 11,000-mile trip with his daughter to Seattle, Alaska and Yellowstone. His reminiscences are interesting, and the Philadelphia club should enjoy a most instructive lecture this winter by the veteran traveler.

Friday, September 17, the big smoker of the New York Retail Florists' Association comes off at Reisenweber's. An attendance of 200 is estimated.

G. E. Talmadge, at Madison, is rapidly completing the equipment of a factory for the manufacture of Aphine.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

RADISHES AND LETTUCE.

We have two greenhouses, each 30x150 feet, arranged with raised benches containing six inches of extra rich, well-manured soil, with 1¼-inch steam pipes underneath. We should like to grow in one house radishes, and in the other house lettuce. What time should we plant the seed to have both houses ready for market by Thanksgiving and the holidays? What varieties of radishes should we plant, and what varieties of lettuce, one-half of head lettuce and the other half of the loose-leaved varieties? What temperatures should we carry in each house? Would it be well to add some extra rich fertilizer to the soil before planting? Our houses are even-span, running north and south, and we can regulate the temperature to any degree up to 75 degrees.

A. J. B.

Radishes mature in from four to six weeks in winter from the day of planting the seed, depending upon weather, variety and the grower. I would say, plant your radish seeds October 15 to 18, and they will be ready to market a few days before Thanksgiving; then if the beds are all pulled and spaded up promptly and replanted without loss of a day you may get a second crop for New Year's. Selected stock Scarlet Globe Forcing is the best variety, in the opinion of most growers. If the soil is good now you do not need any more fertilizer at present. Plant in rows four inches apart and about nine or ten radishes to the lineal foot of row. If too thick, they come too slowly, and are of poorer quality.

Lettuce requires ten to twelve weeks from date of planting the seed. Head lettuce is about two weeks slower than the leaf lettuce. Seed planted soon now should make salable lettuce for Thanksgiving. More seed should be started

THE NEW MANVILLE TOMATO.

A. A. Harper, of Pine Bluff, Ark., has sent to the REVIEW some photographs of a new tomato which he is testing, and which has been named the Manville, in honor of the originator, Rev. M. W. Manville. One of the photographs is here reproduced, and shows, says Mr. Harper, "several samples of the fruit, weighing from two to two and one-half pounds apiece." Mr. Harper states that he has grown the tomato this year and finds it better than the originator claims it to be. The originator's notes on the variety are as follows:

"There appeared among my tomatoes twenty years ago one that seemed to be a knot of depressions and elevations. I began to select with a view to increase the size and smoothness. Under ordinary garden culture these objects are being attained, but there is much yet to be done to attain the full end I have in view. I am working along four lines—color; thickness of skin, so as to prevent 'scalding'; size, and fruitfulness.

later, so as to be ready to transplant into the beds as soon as the first crop is cut and the beds spaded over. Rawson's Hot-house head lettuce and Grand Rapids loose leaf lettuce are satisfactory varieties. Leaf lettuce pays the best in most markets, but some markets demand the head lettuce.

The same temperatures suit both lettuce and radishes, 45 to 50 degrees at night and about 60 degrees on bright

Three shapes have been secured—irregular, fluted with dim divisions like a cantaloupe, and smooth. It keeps its flavor till frost, is attractive in color and of a flavor that commands the local market. It is the tomato for the Southland. Seed from the different types are mixed, in the hope that others will carry development beyond the point attained by one who has not the trained horticultural skill to produce the highest results. verdict of all who have tested it is that tomato lovers have just cause to rejoice."

Mr. Harper says that he considers the foregoing description quite modest in its praise. He says that he intends to sell a few plants of the new variety next season, but that the stock will be limited for some years, on account of the fact that there are so few seeds in each tomato.

CUCUMBERS IN ENGLAND.

As an English grower and a subscriber to the REVIEW, I should like to ask what is the cause of cucumbers turning yellow when about three inches long. H. Y.

As to cucumbers turning yellow and falling off, I would say that if they did so with us it would show that the blooms had not been pollinated. I believe, however, that H. Y. grows only Telegraph types, which do not require pollinating, and I am not well informed on them, as we grow only Improved White Spine on this side. The English or Telegraph types are only a curiosity here, as they will not sell in our markets. H. G.

CUCUMBER promises to be one of the interesting items this fall.

THE boat from Bermuda last week brought five more cases of bulbs.

CHRIS OLSEN, seed grower at Odense, Denmark, says the crop of cabbage has been practically a failure this year.

CHARLES M. JACKMAN, of Woking, England, son of the raiser of Clematis Jackmani, is now with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., at their trial grounds and seed farm at Doylestown, Pa.

THE SMITH Bros. Seed Co. has been incorporated at Auburn, N. Y., with a capital of $40,000. The incorporators are Harry C. Smith, Sanford H. Smith and George H. Smith.

THIS year is quite a different year from last year in the matter of lily bulbs, and also valley pips, in cold storage. Whereas last year there was a surplus, this season it was early apparent that there would be a shortage.

O. S. JONES, of Madison, S. D., says the early frost did little damage in the territory in which his firm operates, except to late buckwheat and beans. "We will have the best crop of seed we ever had, and about three-quarters of a potato crop," he writes.

H. W. FISHER, recently with the Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., and previously manager of the seed department of Montgomery Ward & Co., is again in Chicago and is reported to be promoting the organization of a new mail order seed house, to operate at Chicago.

S. M. ISBELL & Co., Jackson, Mich., said September 9: "We do not think any great damage has been done, by the early frost, to seed crops in Jackson county. Occasionally some tender vines, such as melons and cucumbers, were touched, but only slightly; not enough to injure the quality or reduce the quantity of seed."

THE stock and fixtures of the Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., were sold September 10 by John S. Farrington, trustee, to W. H. Ross, of Springfield, who was formerly a stockholder in the concern. The consideration was $2,100. It is reported the liabilities approximate $13,000. Among the assets are book accounts of $8,005, appraised at $5,354.

ENGLISH wholesale seed houses are quoting peas to American buyers at such prices as $6 to $7 per bushel for Gradus.

THE houses that have a big volume of business booked months before the harvest of 1909 seed crops are wondering where they are going to get the stock for delivery.

ACCORDING to the government crop report for September 1, the condition of corn in Nebraska was 68, compared to 93 a month before and 80 as a ten-year average for September 1.

THE special souvenir number of the Dahlia News, published by the New England Dahlia Society, Maurice Fuld, secretary, 5 Union street, Boston, contains a list of the members of the organization.

HOLLAND SEED CROPS.

That seed crops in Holland are about as in other parts of the world is shown by the report just to hand from Sluis & Groot, of Enkhuizen. All biennial crops suffered severely during winter and the weather during the growing season has been unfavorable for many of the annuals.

Cabbage, turnip and beet suffered especially and will be extremely poor crops. Parsley was nearly all destroyed. Winter radish was largely devastated, but the remainder looks good; summer radish is promising. Cauliflower gives fair promise. Parsnip will be less than an average crop. Corn-salad is a quarter crop. Spinach has had a hard season and is estimated at half a crop. Peas have suffered by rains and beans will be a small crop.

Flower seeds made a good start, but later unfavorable weather did much harm. No more than average crops are to be expected of anything, and some varieties will yield decidedly under the average, as verbena, centaurea, dianthus, myosotis, phlox and wallflower. The plantation of nasturtium is small, but looks satisfactory. Petunia is an average crop, as is lobelia. Mignonette is not unpromising and antirrhinum, eschscholtzia and papaver are rather good.

THE CROPS.

The September crop report promulgated by the Department of Agriculture about fulfilled expectations. The corn indication was reduced to 2,648,846,000 bushels, comparing with 2,954,660,000 bushels a month ago. The average condition of corn September 1 was 74.6, as compared with 84.4 last month, 79.4 September 1, 1908, 80.2 September 1, 1907, and 80.6, the ten-year average for September 1.

CAUSE OF DISEASES IN LILIES.

The following letter has been received from Frank H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York, who is at present on a visit to Japan, investigating the lily bulb business, from which we quote as follows:

"Lilium Formosum, multiflorums, and particularly giganteums, as a rule are dug much too green, or before the bulbs have thoroughly ripened down. Really, it is a shame to dig and ship multiflorums before September 15 from Yokohama, and to get good bulbs that are mature and full of vitality in giganteums they should not be dug before October 1 at the best.

"I know this would mean September to October delivery for all Formosums, October 15 to November 1 for multiflorums, and November 1 to December 1 for giganteums, but I fully believe the bulbs would flower in the greenhouses just as early as if they had been shipped a month sooner from Japan, and I am also convinced that the seedsmen would have no such claims for disease and curly-top plants as they now have. There is not over five per cent curly-tops noticeable in the multiflorum fields, and practically no disease at all in the giganteum districts, and I think the kicks one has from the florists, on multiflorums and giganteums being diseased, are entirely due to the fact that the bulbs are dug and shipped too green. I know the later deliveries of Formosums, multiflorums and giganteums will give flowers just as early as the first shipments, and not contain anywhere near as many causes for kicks on disease from the florists who purchase these bulbs from the seedsmen."

THE WORLD'S SEED SITUATION.

"A factor of prime importance, generally overlooked in the seed trade, is that the world's acreage under seed crops has been gradually decreasing for a number of years, while the world's population, and the consequent demand for seeds, has kept right on growing."

The speaker was E. J. Deal, general manager of W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England, now on a visit to the trade in the United States, his first for six years.

"As for the current season," continued Mr. Deal, "in all my thirty-two years in the seed trade I never have known such a great shortage of seeds, the world over, as is the case this year, nor such an eagerness on the part of seed merchants to buy seeds, especially of the new crop. The condition of warehouses is identical in all countries; stocks are depleted to a point without precedent since the business began to approximate its present breadth, and it generally is recognized that crops the world over are so short that in many important lines they will not meet the season's requirements, to say nothing of affording a surplus to go toward replenishing the world's reserve supply. As a consequence, prices already have advanced to no small degree and will without question go much higher before January.

"Turnip, beet, radish and peas are cases in point among vegetables and all biennials among flower seeds, the winter loss having been severe in all biennial crops. There is practically no radish in France and early peas the world over are an extremely short crop. Quite a few varieties of turnip, radish and beet are already sold out.

"The result is not only a strong demand for any offerings of 1909 crop, but a willingness that amounts almost to eagerness to place contracts for the 1910 crops.

"Looking into the future, it seems probable that the next five years, possibly the whole decade, will see gradually advancing prices. This condition will be practically certain in case the prices of the great food crops hold up to the present levels, as farmers will not grow seed crops, entailing all that they do, while the same or even more money is to be realized from the cereals.

"Another factor is the stock seeds, as of peas. The high prices consequent on recurring short crops have so tempted growers that the stock seeds were not equal to the acreage called for last season, and with the present bad year the difficulty is likely only to be intensified this season. Not until there are two or more consecutive seasons of large returns for the seed planted will the question of stock seeds cease to be a controlling factor."

Mr. Deal's last trip to the United States was in 1903. He said that the trade in general has made notable progress since then, a growth possibly more

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from the middle of August to the end of September is the best time. The seedlings should be grown on to the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool, the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue (new). A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.00; 1000, $7.50.

Collection of the above nine selected varieties, one pkt. of each, for $4.00.

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, 75c; 1000 seeds, $6.00.

PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen. Color, pink, with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25.

SALMON QUEEN. Undoubtedly one of the most distinct and beautiful salmon colors found in Cyclamen. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum Salmonium splendens. The finest salmon-pink variety. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.75.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Rocco, Mixed Colors. The beautifully fringed flowers measure 5 inches in diameter. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.75.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Bush Hill Pioneer. A beautiful new feathered Cyclamen in various colors. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $2.00.

Six Grand Novelty Cyclamens

Peach Blossom. An exceptionally handsome variety of an intense rose color. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.75.

Purple King. The best of all crimson varieties, and strikingly beautiful. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.75.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced. Trade pkt., 50c.

Rose of Marienthal. Soft shell pink; a very pretty variety. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.25.

Salmon King. Rich color. One of the very best of this beautiful shade. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Trade pkt., 50c.

ful country between Chicago and Denver. Great as has been the development of the business in other sections, the growth is yet more pronounced in the west—the middle west, you call it—and the trade there, it seems to me, is only on the threshold of its expansion, though the demand appears already to have grown faster than it can be coped with under present conditions.

"But, taking the country by and large, I have noted that, while this is not the busy season, there appears to be a good volume of business passing in all sections, and on all sides I hear of a lack of competent assistants; several houses have stated that they could largely increase their business were it possible to procure competent help short of the long process of training it.

"Just a word on the tariff. The new specific rates of duty appear to be greatly appreciated as affording relief from many vexations and delays and the changes in rates will have little if any effect upon the quantities of seeds imported."

Mr. Deal, while he now directs the affairs of a nonagenarian firm with world-wide connections, began picking up his knowledge of the business while he, as a boy of 11, also picked up nasturtium seeds at the munificent wage of 36 cents a week. For sixteen years he was with Suttons, at Reading, and for ten years has been in charge of Johnson & Son's affairs. His present trip was undertaken with an eye to the future—"you don't have to travel to sell seeds this year," he said; "in fact, the slower you are about selling the higher the profits rise"—but he has on it booked some excellent business and while at Chicago appointed Vaughan's Seed Store as American agents for two new Spencer sweet peas to be distributed this season: E. J. Deal, white, and Colleen, or Blanche Ferry Spencer, the latter being considered a specially good thing for cut flower purposes.

DEW PONDS.

In parts of Europe where rainfall is not prevalent, water in quantity is obtained by the condensation of atmospheric vapor, in what are called dew ponds, not only for domestic use, but for agricultural purposes.

These methods are by no means a new discovery, as large quantities of water were procured by such efforts thousands of years ago, especially on the crests of the South Downs of England, and to indicate the entire practicability of dew ponds will refer to the atmospheric condensation plant erected by the British government at Gibraltar, high up on the rock, with the satisfactory results of a large supply of absolutely pure water.

These results of nocturnal radiation are no more astonishing than the making at Calcutta, India, in the open night air of tons of ice for domestic use.

One authority in England in a scientific paper has lately stated that in his dew ponds on a foggy night in January he has gathered two inches of water in a single night, and that in five nights he has collected eight inches, while in summer he has collected as much as three and one-half inches in five nights. These quantities may be better appreciated when it is considered that one inch of water equals 100 tons per acre.

To most Americans this process may be a new one, but not so to scientific people and to some observant travelers. Kipling, for instance, has written:

We have no water to delight
Our broad and brookless vales,
Only the dew-pond on the heights,
Unfed, that never fails.

Would it not be better if the United States Department of Agriculture, instead of expending $300,000 entirely in the purchase and distribution of the commonest of seeds, should apply that money to instructing American citizens residing in appropriate sections how to construct dew ponds? BURNET LANDRETH.

A Chain of Years Suggested Above Conveys This Idea:

That customers once gained are not lost, that new customers are added year after year until the grand total makes a business of many years' standing with a host of satisfied patrons.

Most of our customers started with small orders--just a tryout--to see whether Wittbold gave better value. Some of them ordered stock without specifying the price, and when the bill came in they found that the price was right. Others found that if anything was wrong, all they had to do was to write Wittbold and he made it right.

Now, it was on just such a policy as this that we forged this chain of successful years. They were successful years simply because our patrons were perfectly satisfied.

We want you to start with a small order--just a tryout to see what we can do.

You'll find in time that you don't even have to specify the price.

You'll also find that we will do what is right if anything goes wrong.

This is our policy of dealing with our customers and, no doubt, this is the way you would like to be dealt by.

Start with the small order today.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade conditions continue the same as far as present business is concerned. However, the stores report orders booked far ahead of last season, and most of their best customers still away. Flowers of all kinds are more than plentiful. Valley was scarce a couple of days, but the last of the week it was more than plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. is cutting Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland good enough for winter stock. A few good carnations are reaching the market.

The club met at the store of the McCallum Co. Tuesday evening, September 7, where those who attended the S. A. F. convention had a good opportunity to say a word for the Cincinnati florists. They report the convention as fine and the entertainment by the Cincinnatians as the best ever. The members are becoming enthusiastic about the carnation convention, and the committee is being stirred up and instructed to have a report at the next meeting. The club has made arrangements to hold its meetings in the future at the Fort Pitt hotel, which is to be the headquarters of the carnation convention.

George R. Elliott, who was injured a week ago, is at the Mercy hospital and improving as well as expected.

Charles Eisner, who left a week ago for the west, was in the accident to the B. & O. flier. He was found under a car, but when gotten out was not seriously injured, and continued his journey. Hoo-Hoo.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business shows a decided improvement, and it will not be long before we are going at our usual gait. Good flowers are still scarce. Carnations are short-stemmed. Bride and Maid are small. Some fine Killarney is to be had. Some good dahlias are coming in, but are not in heavy demand. The florists in the flower market say business is not what it should be, but a few weeks more and a little cool weather will cause things to open up.

Exhibition at State Fair.

Last week witnessed one of the best exhibitions of flowers that has been seen at the state fair for a number of years. The premium list was revised by the State Florists' Association of Indiana this year, and, by the untiring efforts of Secretary A. F. J. Baur, the entries were more than double last year. The management of the fair was so well pleased that they promised the entire Horticultural tural building for the exhibition next year, as the space was inadequate for the favorable showing of the cut flowers and plants. The State Florists' Association is going to make an effort to have about $500 added to the premium list next year, and this, with additional space, ought to have the desired results. The following is the list of awards:

Various Notes.

The State Florists' Association had its regular monthly meeting at the State house Friday, September 10, with a large attendance. The question of a spring show was taken up and a committee composed of H. Junge, Fred Hukriede, E. Rieman, Charles Pahud, A. F. J. Baur and H. L. Wiegand was appointed to formulate a premium list and ways and means for the show. It is intended to give a show on a much larger scale than heretofore. It was also decided to ask the State Board of Agriculture for an increase in the premium list of the state fair and a florist to be superintendent of the hall next year.

H. L. Wiegand has returned from a week's auto and duck-hunting trip in the northern part of the state.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, was a visitor in the city this week, attending the state fair.

Fred Dorner, of Lafayette, spent the week in the city. Mr. Dorner was the judge in the flower department of the state fair, and his decisions met with the approval of all.

Peter Weiland and W. W. Coles were in the city this week, exhibiting cut flowers for the state fair and visiting with the local florists.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wiegand will return this week from a three months' trip through Europe.

Among the visitors was Ed. J. Brown, of Shelbyville.

Bert Stanley came up last week to attend the State Florists' Association meeting.

WASHINGTON.

Club Meeting.

A crab feast that will be memorable among the annals of the epicures of the Washington Florists' Club was provided September 7 by Edward S. Schmid. The feast came at the close of a meeting of the club at Eagles' hall. The crustacean was served in every style known to the culinary art, and with accompaniments that made a merry evening for those who catered to the "soul beautiful," as Robert Montague described it in an address replete with eloquence. In the course of the feast Robert Griffith gave some clever imitations, and Prof. Victor regaled the company with laughable stories. Afterward, in the hall above, there was a vaudeville entertainment.

At the business meeting of the club, at which President F. H. Kramer presided, W. F. Gude made an address in which he explained the position of the automobile floral parade committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce with reference to the exclusive use of natural flowers in decorations for the parade. Mr. Gude also announced that Philip Breitmeyer, mayor of Detroit, had accepted the invitation to act as judge of the parade, and with Mrs. Breitmeyer would be present when it occurred.

Reference was made to the annual invitation of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. to visit the dahlia farms at White Marsh, Md., a treat which the club will be obliged to forego this year because of the floral parade.

President Kramer announced the appointment of a committee to cooperate with the general committee in the floral pageant, and also to make the necessary arrangements for the fall exhibition of the club, which will be held from November 7 to 14 of this year, as follows: George H. Cooke, superintendent; W. F. Gude, press; George C. Shaffer, program; E. C. Maybury, entertainment; Edward S. Schmid, publicity; F. H. Kramer, advertising; J. R. Freeman, inside decoration of hall for the exhibition; W. Marche, outside decorations; Peter Bisset, solicitor; John Robertson, reception, and Secretary O. A. C. Oehmler, as secretary.

It was decided to have the club represented in the floral parade by a large touring car, appropriately decorated.

Among the guests were Charles Beveridge, past president of the Eagles' Club; Jacob W. Collins, chief operator of the Western Union Telegraph Co.; Dr. Theodore Moore, of the weather bureau; Col. Samuel Melton, who has explored much in the far north, and the following florists: George C. Shaffer, Frank H. Kramer, William F. Gude, William Marche, G. G. Hammer, B. Winkler, W. F. Lacey, James Talbert, Frank Slye, Adolf Minder, Peter Bisset, George H. Cooke, J. L. Carberry, N. S. Hammer, Harry Loy and G. E. Anderson.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

Horticultural Society.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting in Pembroke hall on Wednesday, September 8. President Everett occupied the chair.

Drawing up the schedule for the fall show was the principal business of this meeting. The schedule is a lengthy one. Good prizes are offered, which augurs well for its success.

The dahlia show, which is to be held October 14, promises to be a success. Among the many other prizes, H. Metz offered $5 for four vases of four standard varieties of dahlias. Mr. Metz also offered $5 for a vase of carnations and $5 for a vase of single violets at the fall show. The society unanimously awarded Mr. Metz a vote of thanks for his generosity.

The secretary read communications from Mrs. H. L. Pratt and E. Underhill, offering a silver cup and $10, respectively, for the fall.

The points competition is still keenly contested. P. Reul is now leading by a good margin. The awards this month were as follows: P. Reul, gladiolus, 9½; H. Gant, gladiolus, 91; G. Wilson, aster, Vick's Branching, 87½; V. Cleres,

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN RAFAEL, CAL.—Richard Lohrmann has resigned his position as head gardener for A. W. Foster, and is now in business as a florist and nurseryman.

CHICO, CAL.—Miss Josie Robbie, who has for a number of years conducted a florists' business in this city, with greenhouses at Second and Normal avenue, has rented the store in the Nichols building, and is having the same equipped for an uptown flower store.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions during the last fortnight were exceptionally good for the summer season, with an occasional period of dullness. The call for floral offerings has been unusually heavy, and everyone had a slice.

Choice stock moves well and always cleans up. The calls for bridal bouquets are numerous, which utilizes the best grades of roses. Valley is almost out of the question, and the quality is only fair. Carnations are scarce, short in stem and below grade. Asters are the best flowers obtainable for all purposes, and realize fair returns. Sweet peas are not overplentiful. Cosmos are to be had, but are ahead of their usefulness. Chrysanthemums are coming in nicely, but somehow the public interest in them is slow in being aroused. The unusually dry season has been disastrous to outdoor stock, and has caused a great deal of additional expense to keep life in them. Ferns and palms are in demand, especially in the medium sizes.

Various Notes.

Martin & Forbes' well-arranged window is the comment of Washington street. It is arranged in rubrums, auratums and decorative plants.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Clarke have returned from an extended trip to Seattle and British Columbia.

The Portland Seed Co. reports summer business up to the standard and, from indications, the coming season will be in advance of former years.

P. F. Rosaia, of Seattle, was over for a few days. He reports business good, but says there is a scarcity of rose stock.

W. L. Weiss, of Los Angeles, took advantage of a stop-over to acquaint himself with the trade here. He reports conditions favorable in his home city.

A. H. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., was enthusiastic over the west and the quality of flowers produced. He will attend the A. Y. P. E. before returning home.

W. C. Johnson, of E. H. Hunt's, dropped in unheralded with an extensive line of samples, on his initiative trip. He reports that business exceeds expectation.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., is touring the western states, and is well pleased with this section. He found time to discuss the orchid situation, and he says it is up to the florist to educate the flower-loving public to its value.

Miss Anna Meyer, of the Capital City Greenhouse Co., of Madison, Wis., took advantage of the stop-over privilege and called on the trade.

Edward Hauck, of the Columbine Floral Co., Denver, Colo., was also a week-end caller.

Baron Shibusawa and his party of business men of Japan were lavishly banqueted at the Commercial Club. The club house was artistically decorated by Clarke Bros. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

For the first time since the spring crop of flowers commenced, the retailers have had to hustle to keep themselves supplied with stock. The changing of houses by the growers has finally had the effect of limiting the output so much that carnations and roses have been at a premium for the last ten days. Asters are waning and chrysanthemums are not yet in abundant supply. Carnations that could be bought at $1 per hundred all summer have advanced to about double that price, and even more for some fancy stock. Roses of the best quality are scarcer than carnations, and from 50 cents to $1 per dozen is asked for only fair quality blooms.

It will be several weeks, even under the most favorable conditions, before the supply will approximate the demand. Sweet peas are quite out of the race for the season. A few violets are seen, but the weather is much too warm for them to be offered in quantity, and a shower or two of rain will have to intervene before they become plentiful. All kinds of Japanese lilies are moving well and at fair prices. Valley has not sold as well as it should, considering the scarceness of white stock. Late flowered amaryllises have superseded the early sorts, and the public takes to them kindly. Other kinds of outdoor flowers, such as dahlias, coreopsis and gaillardias, move well.

The larger part of the gladiolus crop has been garnered and, while the prices were low on a few occasions, they have proven to be money makers for the growers. This has been especially true with the newer sorts.

Over in Oakland the retailers complain of the shortage of stock, and all agree that business is much better than at any time this summer, with prospects of large increases in the near future.

Various Notes.

C. C. Morse & Co. were the only local firm to make a horticultural exhibit at the state fair at Sacramento during the first week in September.

The government has decided to plant conifers on the bay islands during the coming season.

The Thorsted Floral Co. opened its new store in the Phelan building, on Market street, September 1.

A. Uphill, of Elmhurst, has sold his entire stock of roses, consisting of over 35,000 plants, to E. Gill, of West Berkeley.

Domoto Bros. have 50,000 chrysanthemums under glass, of the earlier varieties. Their stock is looking remarkably well.

Fred Ghirogone is with Podesta & Baldocchi on Grant avenue.

John Hutchison, one of the oldest florists in California, has retired from active labors. He had been in the employ of H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, for over twenty-five years. G.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

First among the matters of last week of interest to the trade can be placed the shortening of the carnation stock, which has not only been felt, but has been rather a hardship, coming so suddenly. However, asters of fine quality in all colors are now arriving in quantities, and are certainly filling in nicely. Some of them, especially in white and purple, are exceptionally fine, many of them being as large as mums, with fine, long, stiff stems.

Several varieties of gladioli are now on hand, and of course the lighter colors help out quite considerably in the absence of carnations and roses. However, all so far shown are soft, lasting only a day or so. Consequently they are not very profitable this season, even when bought in small quantities, as medium stock of this kind brings as high as 50 cents a dozen.

Gypsophila, which has been a standby in the way of green, is now scarce. So once more the "green" bill increases. Quantities of Golden Glow can be had for the asking, and while it is not a large seller, it is useful in filling up and decorating the stores and windows, and no one regrets its presence, especially since the shortage in stock of all kinds except asters and cactus dahlias. Speaking of the dahlias, they, being the exposition flowers, were quite in demand all last week, as many of them were used on the grounds during the last few days.

Various Notes.

The new Majestic theater held its official opening last week. Masses of fancy arrangements banked the stage and lobby. Conspicuous among the fancy baskets were several large arrangements by Graff's Flower Shop, which attracted quite a bit of attention.

The Rainer Floral Co. is making extensive improvements and no doubt will be in fine condition to handle fall trade. One of the railroads has laid tracks up into their place and Mr. Jochimsen is well pleased.

Otto Uhlmann is cutting some splendid asters in purple and white at his Brighton Beach place.

Mrs. Darby, one of the chief violet growers of California, was in town the greater part of the week. She was delighted with Seattle and its prospects and expects to ship most of her stock here this fall. She returned by way of Tacoma and Portland.

W. C. Johnson, of E. H. Hunt's, Chicago, also called upon the trade last week.

Rosia Bros., formerly of Tacoma, report a good business in their new store. They have purchased a wagon for delivery purposes.

Mrs. McCoy is quite enthused over the prospect of her new store on Third avenue, which they expect to open sometime in the fall. This will no doubt be a good move, for they are rather cramped in their present store.

Mr. Pritchard, manager of Graff's Flower Shop, returned September 6, after an exciting trip to the Olympic mountains. He started out after bears, but as he came back whole, we don't know what he did. I. G. C.

THE CREGO ASTER IN OREGON.

We note from recent numbers of the REVIEW that asters are unusually poor all over the country this season. While this condition obtains generally here in Oregon also, we would call attention to one notable exception—the Crego aster—which we have been growing in considerable quantities for the Portland market, both last year and this. We find them better than ever. The stems are long, flowers large and finely developed, many of the blossoms exceeding five inches in diameter, and the average is more than

THE business in perennials now is an important item in many up-to-date nurseries.

It is the consensus of opinion that the nursery business this fall and next spring will be all that the trade will be able to handle.

THE death of E. O. Graham, head of the Graham Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., says fall business is opening well, especially in the herbaceous department, and that stock throughout that section of the country is looking exceptionally well.

THE Georgia Pecan Groves Co. has been incorporated in Chicago, Ill., with a capital of $2,500, for the purpose of engaging in a general nursery and fruit business. The incorporators are Geo. C. Martin, C. D. Fuller and A. Stubblefield.

PETERSON IS KNIGHTED.

The king of Sweden has created William A. Peterson a knight of the Order of Vasa, in recognition of his high standing among the Swedish people of America. The decoration was presented to Mr. Peterson September 10 by the Swedish consul at Chicago. Mr. Peterson is the proprietor of the Peterson Nursery, a director in the State Bank of Chicago, a trustee of Beloit College and of McCormick Theological Seminary. He is 42 years of age and was born on the nursery grounds where he now makes his home and where his father located in 1855. Ever since attaining manhood he has been identified with the religious and other uplift organizations of the city, and has rendered invaluable service for the community. It was said of the late P. S. Peterson that he was the richest Scandinavian in America, and the Swedes of Chicago looked to him for leadership. Mr. Peterson did much in the service of his countrymen and since his death his place has been taken by his son.

HARDINESS OF PRIVET.

Will you kindly tell me whether privet will stand winters in the southeastern part of Kansas without protection? About 10 to 14 degrees below zero is the coldest temperature in the average season, and only for perhaps three or four nights during the winter, but we have hard winds and it is generally dry. Should it be planted in the fall or spring? L. C. B.

I would not advise you to plant the California privet, Ligustrum ovalifolium. It grows quickly and makes a pretty hedge, but is the most tender of the genus. I would recommend you to use either L. Ibotia (new Japanese privet), or L. Regelianum. The former has large, glossy, distinct foliage; the latter is an excellent, dense, horizontal growing shrub. Both these varieties will withstand your climate much better than the California privet, and either one will make an excellent hedge. Spring planting is to be preferred to fall for all privets. C. to St. Louis in the summer I spend hours in Shaw's beautiful garden. I have felt that Kansas City ought to have a great public conservatory, and I hope to see the day when some public-spirited man with wealth enough to do it will give us one.

"I am able to build a public garden only on a modest scale. I am going to maintain it. I am doing it, not for advertising purposes, because we do not grow or sell outdoor flowers or shrubs, but because I believe that such a public garden will have an influence upon the city in educating people to make their home grounds more beautiful."

NORTH TEXAS.

The florists' dependence for flowers at present is the vinca, outside roses and Mexican tuberose. Business is quiet, but improving a little.

There is no abatement of the drought in this vicinity. There has been no rain to mention since May 19. It is a little cooler, however. For eight weeks the thermometer ranged from 70 to 110 degrees, and the mean average was over 86 degrees. The florists, with others, have suffered. Adiantums, smilax and begonias were almost completely burnt up. Yet the florists are enlarging their plants.

The Munson greenhouses, of Denison, have all been torn down and rebuilt in more modern style. They are still leased by C. E. Majors.

J. W. Goree, of Whitewright, has moved his small plant to Paris, Tex., and is building three larger houses, 22x150 feet each, besides some lean-to houses and coldframes.

The Market.

There is quite a noticeable improvement in business over last week, and no doubt it will continue to improve as the days of autumn draw nearer. Roses are about equal to the demand, with a special call for whites and Beauties. Carnations are gradually improving in quality, and are moving well. The same can be said of asters. The supply of gladioli is away ahead of the demand, and it is not an unusual thing to still have some on hand after the hours of business are past. The green goods market is well supplied, with the exception of smilax, which is a scarce article.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. says that orders for bulbs are coming along finely, and they are quite satisfied with business in general thus far.

A. Groth, of North Milwaukee, has torn down his old boiler-shed and packing-room and is now building one large shed to cover the entire west end of his greenhouses. This will give him ample room for a large office and storage room.

Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., is an optimist, for she says that the way business is now and the manner in which people do their buying is a sure sign of the coming season being the best yet. They have a good deal of transient trade, so that sounds good.

William Zimmerman says that he has had abundant wedding work the last fortnight. He will attend a convention at Omaha, Neb., the middle of this week.

H. V. Hunkel, chairman of the executive committee of the Milwaukee flower show, says that the premium list contains about $3,000 for prize money. They intend to mail the regular premium list and application blanks in about two weeks. Preliminary lists can now be had for the asking.

The store of Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., which has always appeared in a light shade, is now painted dark green, which is rather odd and catches the eye at once.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. say they have a brisk demand for all the Beauties they are cutting these days, which speaks well, for they are cutting heavily.

W. E. Macklin, of Stevens Point, Wis., stopped off here on his way home from Canada, where he has been to visit his former home. Other visitors were: Christ. Lund, of Wausau, Wis.; J. F. Johnson, of Ft. Smith, Ark.; E. J. Fancourt, with Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

M. P. Vallier, late secretary of the Florists' Club, spent Sunday, September 12, in Chicago. E. O.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business is fair just now. Funeral work is good, using up lots of stock. Asters are plentiful; 35 cents per dozen, retail, is the general price. Carnations are just beginning to come in; they are of fair quality and bring 35 cents per dozen, retail. Roses are not much called for; $1, $1.50 and as high as $2 per dozen, retail, are asked. Some nice Maryland are coming here; this is a lovely color.

Outdoor flowers are quite plentiful just now. Gladioli are getting scarce now; $1 per dozen, retail, is asked.

Sunday, September 12, was Flower day here. There was a light demand for flowers, plenty of people having gardens of their own.

Prizes From Dahlia Society.

Many prizes came to this city from the second annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, held in Horticultural hall, Boston. W. F. Turner & Co. have nineteen to their credit, while W. H. Richardson has five.

The exhibition was more successful than last year, and there were many beautiful specimens of dahlias shown. Great interest was manifested in the display, which closed on Sunday evening, September 12. W. F. Turner & Co. were awarded the Dobbie medal for the most successful exhibit, this being the second time this firm has won that medal, which is a silver prize. W. H. Richardson won the Rawson bronze medal for the best seedling.

Mrs. H. A. Jahn and William Keith, gardener to J. S. Stetson, were among the many visitors from this city to the show.

Various Notes.

Julius Rositzsky, manager for Wm. P. Peirce, is back from a two weeks' vacation, spent in New York.

R. H. Woodhouse reports funeral work as good. He is cutting some nice late asters, which he retails at 50 cents per dozen. His mum stock is in fine shape.

Business is good with Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, Mass., just across the river from here. W. L.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The recent warm weather in this locality has increased the supply of all cut flowers. Roses are coming in freely, but the demand for them is unsteady. Enough carnations are being received to fill nearly all orders. Dahlias are to be had in quantity. Asters have seen their day, and not many are being sent in now. Japan and giganteum lilies have sold well. There was an unlimited call for valley last week, and there were not enough to supply the demand. There are some mums to be had, but the buyers are not anxious to get them.

Various Notes.

Miss F. L. Evans, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., is spending a week visiting old acquaintances, both in and out of town.

An automobile party consisting of Herman Knoble, John Kirchner, Charles Bramley, Frank Williams and George Bate spent a pleasant afternoon calling on the growers west of the city one day last week. At A. M. Coe's place, in North Olmsted, stock of all kinds looked fine, giving evidence of being well kept. Chas. Bartells has his carnations all planted and looking fine. His mum houses are also in the best of shape.

Herman Knoble has returned from a month's stay on the lake shore, and seems to be in good condition for the coming season's rush.

Mr. Smith, formerly of Albrecht & Smith, on Prospect avenue, is now with G. M. Naumann.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is making large shipments of fancy asters to Kansas City, Mo.

Jones & Russell are fitting up their store for the opening, October 1. The store promises to be second to none in this locality. B.

WICHITA, KAN.—Work on the new greenhouses and storage plant of the Charles P. Mueller Co., at 145 North Main street, is progressing, and when done they will make a fine downtown adjunct to the East Ninth street greenhouses. The city plant will be used for emergency and hurry-up orders, and will carry a full line of stock.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

During the last two weeks we have had some cool weather, which was gladly welcomed. It seemed to fill people with a stronger disposition toward entertaining, and many vacationists who were enjoying the cool breezes of Michigan were glad to return to a warmer climate. These things, together with funeral orders, have stimulated business to a certain degree.

There has been an exceptionally good supply of stock. Roses, such as Beauty, Bride, Maid, Richmond, Killarney and My Maryland, have been plentiful enough to compete with the demand, but none have been allowed to spoil. My Maryland is fast becoming a favorite with the Dayton florists, as it has good color and foliage and keeps much better than Killarney, although Killarney is used a great deal in decorating and funeral work. There has also been a good supply of carnations, asters and giganteums, there being no trouble to dispose of the latter. The weather at present is warming up again and a slight decrease in trade is noticeable.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bartholomew and daughters, Elsie and Bessie, recently returned from a two weeks' trip to Chicago, Lily Lake and Sycamore, Ill., Muskegon and Grand Rapids, Mich. They report a most enjoyable time, but while in Michigan they found the weather chilly.

Miss Katheryne Young spent September 11 and 12 with friends at West Baltimore, O.

Arthur Carey left September 12 for a visit to friends in Columbus, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. N. Hodgins, of Richmond, Ind., were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bartholomew September 12.

E. G. Hill, Joseph Hill and Mr. Dent, of Richmond, Ind., visited the Miami Floral Co. last week.

The Wholesale and Retail Florists

both depend upon their refrigerators to determine whether their stock shall sell or stay in the store. McCray Refrigerators keep stock in such perfect, fresh and fragrant condition that it cannot help selling, and the McCray uses less ice than any other. It virtually pays for itself. The patented system of air circulation which cools all parts evenly, thoroughly, and with fresh, cold, dry air, is one of the features of

McCray Refrigerators

They are made in the most beautiful finish and substantial construction. They are lined with white enamel, or if you wish, you may have tile, opal glass, mirrors or marble.

There is a wide range of regular sizes of McCray Refrigerators for immediate shipment, although we build them to order for any requirement.

You should have our Catalog No. 71, which describes the detail of these successful and economical refrigerators for the florist.

HYDE PARK, MASS.—Leslie Fellows recently received an order from New York to place a floral emblem at the base of the oak-tree monument which marks the grave of the actor, Edgar L. Davenport, in Forest Hill cemetery.

BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—Hans Tobler reports the pleasant item of news that he "was surprised, August 31, by the arrival of twins, a boy and a girl, at his house, and all are doing well."

COHASSET, MASS.—At F. G. Bolles' beautiful estate Donald McNaughton has a nice house of single-stemmed chrysanthemums. Another is devoted to carnations, while English melons were just finishing in a third. A grape house will be built shortly. The heating here is by steam.

GLASTONBURY, CONN.—J. R. Morgan & Son, who have conducted a large business here for years, have now been incorporated, with a capital of $30,000. The incorporators are Oliver R. Morgan and Samuel J. Stevens, both of this city, and Harrison B. Freeman, Jr., of Hartford.

WEBB CITY, MO.—The florists throughout this section are through replanting their houses and everything is in nice shape for fall. Hall, of Midway; Finn and Hyde, of Carthage, and Mrs. Kathryn Brenneman, of this city, have each installed new boilers. Tees and Poundstone, of Joplin, are building new houses.

ATLANTA, GA.—Labor day here was a success. Florists were represented in the parade by only one float, that of V. E. Lambert, proprietor of the Capital City Nursery, which, however, was said to be the handsomest float on view. The florists here expect that business will be much benefited by the horse show in October, and also by the auto races, which occur in the first week of November. The speedway will soon be completed and will be one of the finest in the country.

BEATRICE, NEB.—The Dole Floral Co. had a fine exhibit of plants, cut flowers and floral emblems at the state fair, in Lincoln. E. W. Dole, of this firm, was one of the most active "boosters" of this county's interests at the fair, and it was largely through his initiative that placards bearing the following words were placed conspicuously over the county's exhibits: "This exhibit is from Beatrice, Gage county, Nebraska, the county that sends more than half of the exhibits of Nebraska manufacture shown at this fair."

WIZARD BRAND MANURES

Dried, screened and packed in bags of 100 lbs. each.

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE PURE - UNIFORM - RELIABLE

A strong and quick acting manure, highly recommended for carnations and chrysanthemums.

SHREDDED CATTLE MANURE Easy to Handle and Apply

Stronger and better in every way than rough manure. Lasts much longer on the benches. Unequaled for mulching and feeding roses, liquid manuring and mixing with bench and potting soil. Used by all the largest growers.

Ask your supply man or write us for circulars and prices.

Greenhouse Heating.

RADIATION FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 18x32, which runs east and west. The north wall is seven feet high, with double boards and paper between, protected by a house. The south wall is three feet high, with twenty inches of glass, and also the east and west end glass with a sloped roof. We have an old thrashing-machine boiler, ten feet long and thirty inches wide. The fire box is three feet long and twenty-six inches wide, with thirty-two 2-inch flues five feet long. I want to heat the greenhouse with low pressure steam. The boiler is in the basement of our residence, four feet below the greenhouse; I have to run a pipe underground, ten feet from our basement to the greenhouse. Will you please tell me what size, and how much pipe is required for the above sizes? We have solid beds. How high must the pipes be from the beds? Will pipes be sufficient around the side walls, or is it necessary to run them through the center of the greenhouse?
C. H.

Use a 2-inch flow pipe from the boiler and 1½-inch returns. Three 1½-inch pipes on each side wall and one line through the center of the house will do. The pipes may be placed above or at the same level as the beds, as desired.

G. T. E.

THREE CONNECTED HOUSES.

Please give me instructions how to install with hot water and a Kroeschell No. 6 boiler the radiation for three connected houses, each 28x100 and seven feet high. A general line will be planted and about two-thirds of it to lettuce and radishes. We have some zero weather and lower. The boiler-house will be on the north and 16x50 feet. The houses run north and south. I wish to hang the piping on the posts and purlin supports, and as there will be mostly solid beds, wish to plan to have them out of the way as much as possible. I can get a lot of 2-inch and 3-inch pipe and prefer to use this size.
J. E. H.

It will take twelve runs of 3-inch pipe in each house. This will be six flows and six returns in each house. Run a main flow pipe across the end of the houses, and a main return to the boiler under it, with about two feet space between. Put the tees in the flow and return opposite the posts in the houses and that will keep the pipes well out of the way. Put a flow and return under each gutter and an extra circulation on the outside walls.

PARTITIONING A GREENHOUSE.

We have a house seventeen feet wide and ten feet to the ridge, of which we want to partition off fifty feet, to carry a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. There is a 4-inch flow, with four 3-inch returns and one 1½-inch return, in the house. How many more returns, off a 3-inch flow, will it require to heat to 65 degrees in this Iowa climate? We pipe from the boiler-shed to a residence for heating. Will you kindly inform me of the cheapest effective way of covering to conserve heat?

G. J. B.

The best and cheapest covering for our pipe is the following: A course of asbestos about as thick as thin cardboard. Then wrap on about fifty thicknesses of newspaper. Then put on burp or bagging. Sew this on with strong string and last put on a coat of thick whitewash. You can use your fertilizer bags for covering by taking out the sewing.

burned so economically in the furnaces of boilers in its original state as when in the form of briquettes. Briquettes made exclusively with anthracite coal burn too slowly, and it is advisable to mix a certain proportion of bituminous coal to overcome this objection. Up to the present, no kind of agglomerating material other than pitch or resin, or a mixture of these, has given satisfactory results. Briquettes made with resin alone become soft and lose their shape in the fire; those having a mixture of four per cent of pitch and one and one-half per cent of resin give better results. It is of interest to note that the total output of briquettes in the United Kingdom in 1906 amounted to 1,513,220 tons, while Germany produced 14,500,851 tons of this fuel in the same year. At an English works making 102¼ tons of briquettes per day of ten hours, the total cost, including labor, materials, fuel and stores, interest and depreciation, works out to $2.31 per ton.

The State Fair.

The display of greenhouse products at the state fair, which closed September 10, was without exception the best that has been staged at Nebraska's fair for years. Five carloads of palms, ferns, decorative and blooming plants were shown, coming from Simanton & Pence, Falls City; Dole Floral Co., Beatrice; Edward Williams, Grand Island; L. Henderson, Omaha, and C. H. Green, Fremont.

The judging was done by I. M. Roman, superintendent of the Joslyn Conservatories, Omaha, and was done to the satisfaction of all the exhibitors.

The diploma, the most coveted prize offered, was captured by C. H. Green, who took eleven firsts, one second and one fourth, out of a possible thirteen. Henderson and Williams were next in both quality and quantity, each having entries for the entire class and good enough to have won at any of our past fairs.

The Dole Floral Co. exhibit, while not quite so good, was well grown and very creditable. Simanton & Pence made their first exhibit, and put up an exceedingly well-grown lot of stock. They said they did not expect to get anything but experience, but nevertheless they did nicely and, with more experience, they will make the old-timers look to their laurels.

C. H. Green did not show in the cut flower class, and among the other four exhibitors the honors were pretty well divided. The diploma in this class went to Henderson on four firsts, two seconds and one third, out of a possible seven.

The privilege of selling plants throughout the week was in force, but did not cause much of an increase over the amounts sold in former years, when sales were permitted only on the last day. However, sales were good, and all the firms were well patronized. Medium-sized Boston and Whitman had the call, and were carried away by the hundred.

By now, we mean now. Just as sure as you put off ordering until the last of September or the first of October you will be caught in the fall rush at a time when the railroads are generally "chuck up" and there is no telling when they will deliver your boiler. Any delay will not be because we can't supply promptly enough, but because we have looked after our end of it all right. Last year one of our Colorado customers had a Burnham sent by express just because he couldn't take the chances with freight delays. The express cost him as much as the boiler, but that only shows how much he thought of the Burnham as a greenhouse boiler. Being a Burnham friend as you are, just take our friendly advice to a friend and order your Burnham now.

In designs, Henderson had a large clock. He tried to keep the hands set at 11 o'clock, being an Elk, but the boys insisted that 8 o'clock was best, on account of the 8 o'clock closing law, and they managed to keep it at that hour most of the time.

Simanton & Pence made a cornucopia inscribed "Nebraska," with all sorts of fruits and flowers rolling forth.

Williams' design was a lyre. It was a beautiful piece, but not as popular as the ones before mentioned.

Dole showed an open book inscribed "Matt. 6, 28-30," which all florists will know at once: "Consider the lilies," etc.

A good social time was enjoyed throughout the week, and on Friday evening President Green acted as host at a downtown cafe, and gave the boys one of those stag suppers that florists know so well how to enjoy.

This was followed by a bowling match, at which some fearful and wonderful scores were made. C. H. GREEN.

THE CYPRESS MARKET.

From New Orleans comes the report of advances that range from 50 cents to $1 on 2-inch tank, all first and second clears, 1½-inch and 2-inch selects, 1-inch and 2-inch shop grades of cypress. On most of the items mentioned, the advances take the shape, it is understood, of reducing concessions. The demand is called fairly active. Mill stocks are badly broken, one or two items of No. 1 common, 1½-inch ship and 1½-inch tank being mentioned as especially scarce right now. The grade used for greenhouse work is tank cypress, usually 1½-inch. The longer lengths of this are said to be in strong demand. Most of the mills in the Louisiana belt are having trouble with shipments, caused by a pronounced car shortage. Requisitions for rolling stock on both the Southern Pacific and Texas & Pacific, fail with increasing regularity to produce the necessary cars and complaints on this score are as vigorous as they are frequent.

The weather is extremely hot and is especially hard on stock at this season of the year. Each day brings more carnations and roses, which are improving in quality. Asters and gladioli are still the main feature. Up to date we have not seen a dahlia in the store windows.

The discovery of the north pole by Cook and Peary again brought out the artistic taste of the decorators. Suggestive and appropriate windows were arranged. Palmer & Son displayed a large globe representing the earth. This was made of galax and neatly arranged on this were North and South America in white asters. Small men, representing Cook and Peary, were placed on the top, figuring out who was the rightful owner. S. A. Anderson, who is always forward on special occasions, gave the spectators a neat arrangement for the same cause. Tag day for the District Nurses' Association was held on Saturday last. Anderson placed a large cross of white asters in his window for this occasion.

Word has been issued by L. H. Neubeck that the bowlers, or rather all interested in bowling, will meet at Sandman's alleys, 1033 Main street, Monday, September 20. There will be ample room for everybody, so don't say you can't come. As a special added attraction J. Weise, who has just returned from Europe, will give us a talk on how they bowl over there.

Ed Spielman has resigned his position with L. H. Neubeck and gone to Rochester, with Wilson of that city.

Chas. Holser, late of the Lenox Flower Shop, has taken a position with the Wm. Scott Co. as a storeman. R. A. S.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL.

Tri-cities Gossip.

At the regular meeting of the Tri-Cities Florists' Club at the residence of John Staack, September 9, Wm. Knees, of Moline, who had just returned from a three months' vacation trip to Germany, gave an interesting talk. J. T. Temple told of his trip to the convention at Cincinnati and also of the Iowa state fair at Des Moines, which was also of interest. Mr. Temple always has a new story to tell.

Henry Gaethje, Jr., celebrated the first anniversary of his marriage September 9 and a good time was had. Mr. Gaethje is now in his father's store in the absence of Miss Jones, who is in California.

The drought in this section has been broken, but not until a great deal of damage to plant life was done. Asters suffered severely and are now nearly gone.

Business in the three cities of Moline, Davenport and Rock Island has been quiet, owing to the dry spell, but shows signs of improvement as autumn approaches. Carnations are scarce. Roses are of fair quality and in moderate demand.

Harry Bills, of the Bills Floral Co., Davenport, is finishing glazing the houses shattered by hail this summer. He has also torn down some old houses and re-built them.

Ewoldt Bros., of Davenport, have made some extensive repairs this summer. They have cut some early mums that were fine.

The government bridge between Rock Island and Davenport is closed for three weeks for repairs, making it necessary for all traffic to cross on the ferry. This is expensive and inconvenient for all florists, as well as others.

Ludwig Stapp has a fine new Haines auto.

The next meeting of the Tri-Cities Florists' Club will be held at the residence of Henry Gaethje, Sr., South Rock Island, October 14. The topic for discussion on that evening will be "Fuel."

H. M.

ROANOKE, VA.—Arrangements were recently made for the sale and removal of the McGehee greenhouses, so as to make room for the erection of a depot.

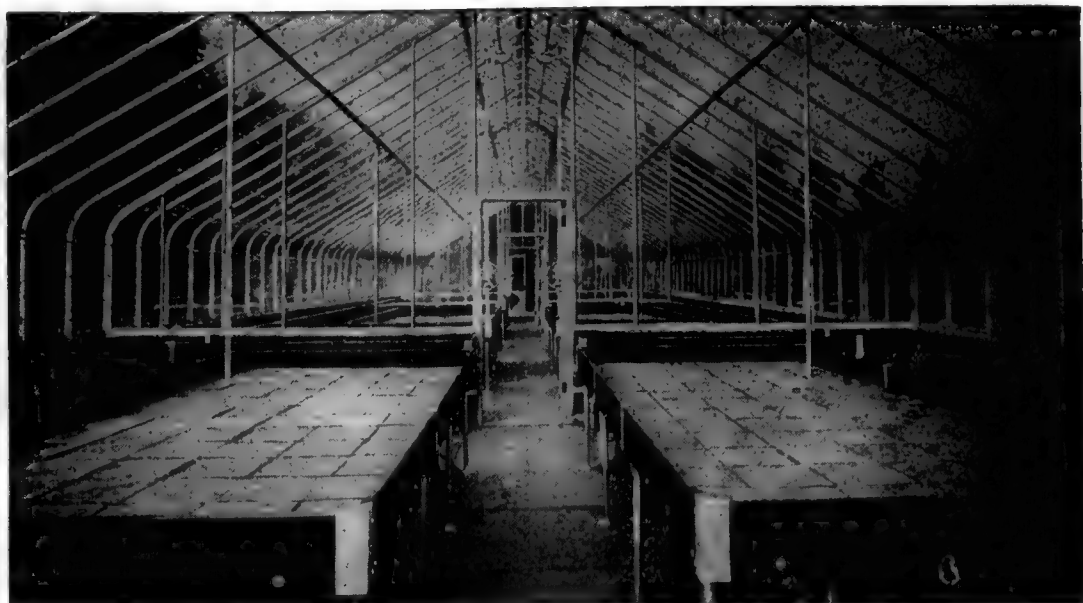

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.—Philip Lunden, who introduced something new in the line of pets a few weeks ago, is mourning his loss. Its name was "Ziz" and it was a twelve-inch rattlesnake, which Mr. Lunden had caught on West mountain. It had refused to eat since its capture. Mr. Lunden is a member of the firm of Olson & Lunden, the much alive and strictly up-to-date florists of this city and Plantsville.

You can't form any conception of what a U-Bar is by seeing it from the outside.

It is the inside that shows up the bubble-like U-Bar construction. At first you may wonder how so light a construction can be so durable and so rigid. It is because of the steel casing of the roof bar, which gives both strength to the frame and a perfect protection to the bar. No house is as free from exposed parts of wood, none so thoroughly takes care of all condensation. To cap the climax, there is no house that can equal it for growing.

Don't take our say so about it, ask any gardener who has worked or is working in a U-Bar house.

What are your losses under the single glass sash?

One man wrote us—"I have had three successive crops under double glass sash, have had zero weather and not a plant was affected."

Another—"Not a plant in my thirty beds was affected by zero weather." In each case, no boards or other coverings were used.

The man who grows to sell should test the Sunlight Sash. It is too profitable to overlook.

There is no covering or uncovering even in zero weather. This reduces the breakage of glass to a minimum, and the same number of hands can handle twice the number of beds.

Get earlier, hardier plants.

The dry air between the two layers of glass is the best non-conductor there is, better than boards or mats. It keeps in the heat, keeps out the cold.

It makes your plants grow in zero weather as vigorously as in the open air in May. It has been tested in every climate. Try it. It will give you such remarkable results compared with the single glass sash that you will double your beds.

It pays for itself in a single season.

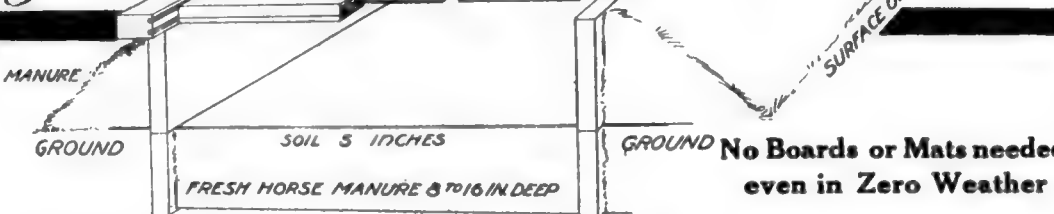

Write for Catalogue and our freight prepaid proposition. Order early to insure prompt shipment. Fast freight, safe delivery guaranteed.

Write today. Now is the time to prepare for cold frames.

WREATH ON BASE.

At the Iowa State Fair, held a few days ago, Lozier's, Inc., of Des Moines, was successful in capturing the first prize in the class open to any floral design. It was a wreath made by H. E. Lozier, and John T. Temple, who was the judge, gave it high praise when he said that no finer piece of work has ever been exhibited at the Iowa State Fair. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the piece. Yellow roses, lily of the valley, croton leaves and Adiantum Farleyense were the materials used.

CYCLAMENS AS CUT FLOWERS.

Their Uniqueness in Design Work.

As to the character of the cyclamen flower itself, it is the quiet comet of the floral world; as to the plant alone, it is as prim and quaint as could be imagined. In the normal development the cyclamen could be called neither a flaring, showy flower like a poinsettia, nor a drooper like a fuchsia, nor a sky-scraper like a gladiolus. Neither is it a very dainty creation as a violet is dainty. Cyclamens have a corner all their own in the universe of form. They are more graceful than a gloxinia, more dignified than a daffodil—in short, are strikingly quaint and individual.

Seeing the original character of the plant and flower, shall that character be emphasized or subdued by the setting and by the additional foliage and flowers used in combination with it?

In the discussion of this question, it must be dealt with under the same general principle as governs other flowers which have decided characteristics of their own. Do we give them a setting which partakes more or less of their own style, or do we give them a setting which is foreign to their character and which tones down color and form? No flower or plant of itself is ugly or awkward. It may be made so by human interference or improper setting. One would have a long way to go in developing the special individuality of a plant or flower before he would reach a fantastic extreme. He is more imminently in danger of detracting from its natural beauty than of overemphasizing it. The sight of chrysanthemums in a squatty vase, or of sweet peas in a tall jug, or a gladiolus in a bowl with *adiantum*s, is about as reasonable as a cyclamen with an ordinary setting.

Bringing Out Their Peculiar Beauty.

It is rather difficult to find just what the cyclamens need to effectively bring out their beauty. Some familiarity with their habit of growth, shape of leaf, inflorescence, and governing colors, and some acquaintance with their appearance as a whole, are the first requisites to their proper placing.

Well, what about all these things, then? The habit of growth is of low, densely set foliage, with flower stems rising in thick clusters of erect, fleshy stems. The leaves are dark, purplish green, with dull white blotches; they are heart-shaped and thick. The flowers appear one on a stem and range through the heliotrope purples to the white. The general appearance of the flower is that of an acutely pointed object, but the rear points of the petals are obtuse, resembling the tips of the leaves. Problem: Now find a setting, a receptacle, a color, which will intensify the cyclamen's beauty.

This is a difficult task with the ordinary stock of supplies. Fancy, rather than reason, suggests celluloid baskets rather than twig baskets for the plants, but these fancies must be more or less our guiding stars. Odd and unusual bits of glazed pottery in dull greens or grays are good developers. The plants are effective banked in the base of a rather heavy, low-hanging design. They make

Prize-Winning Standing Wreath.

In the discussion of this question, it must be dealt with under the same general principle as governs other flowers which have decided characteristics of their own. Do we give them a setting which partakes more or less of their own type, or do we give them a setting which is foreign to their character and which does down color and form? No flower or plant of itself is ugly or awkward.

It may be made so by human interference or improper setting. One would have a long way to go in developing the peculiar individuality of a plant or flower before he would reach a fantastic extreme. He is more imminently in danger of detracting from its natural beauty than of overemphasizing it. The setting of chrysanthemums in a squatly jar, or of sweet peas in a tall jug, or a cyclamen in a bowl with adiantums, is not as reasonable as a cyclamen with ordinary setting.

Bringing Out Their Peculiar Beauty.

It is rather difficult to find just what cyclamens need to effectively bring out their beauty. Some familiarity with their habit of growth, shape of leaf, inflorescence, and governing colors, and acquaintance with their appearance as a whole, are the first requisites to their proper placing.

Prize-Winning Standing Wreath.

a good trim in clusters about the bases of the arch of a gates ajar, or something which may have overhanging showers or trailing garlands.

Set in table plateaus, we may have whole plants in bloom, using inconspicuous dark green to cover the moss and adding trailers of English ivy to extend over the table.

The Cut Flowers in Centerpieces.

But to our subject proper: Cyclamens as cut flowers are valuable artistically and practically in point of keeping qualities. The stems should be well filled the flowers. There is no reason why an entire bride's bouquet of white cyclamen, with shower of the same or swainsona or peas, should not be both beautiful and acceptable on account of its rarity, while with the white flowers a touch of the orchid tints of the cyclamen might often supply a touch of color when desired.

Through all the many tints and shades of cyclamen flowers, there are few that do not look well together, while the waxy white is a welcome touch to a violet corsage, or to the base of a piece. As an entire casket bouquet they would not be so happily placed as they would flower. With the red tendency of violet and heliotrope colors under artificial light, color changes must be reckoned with.

Heart-shaped baskets, such as are shown for valentine decorations, are good receptacles for cyclamen in small table decorations. Their easy outlines and smooth angles are just the thing to combine with the heart-shaped leaves and petals. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

A PRIZE DESIGN.

H. G. Dillemath, of Toronto, sends the photograph from which the accompanying illustration is reproduced, showing the old oaken bucket, which was the first prize original design at a recent Toronto exhibition. The base of Mr. Dillemath's design was of galax, with adiantum for fancy green, Pandanus Veitchii for variegated foliage, and large decorative type dahlias. On this a frame filled in with asters was erected, the shelter at the top being made of cycas leaves. Cattleyas and adiantum were used in the wall surrounding the well. It was a real bucket, instead of a floral one, as might have been. The rope was the chenille used at weddings.

LINDACHER'S PRIZE AUTO.

The photograph here reproduced was taken in front of Charles Lindacher's store in Canton, O., and shows the decorated auto with which he captured first premium in a Labor day parade.

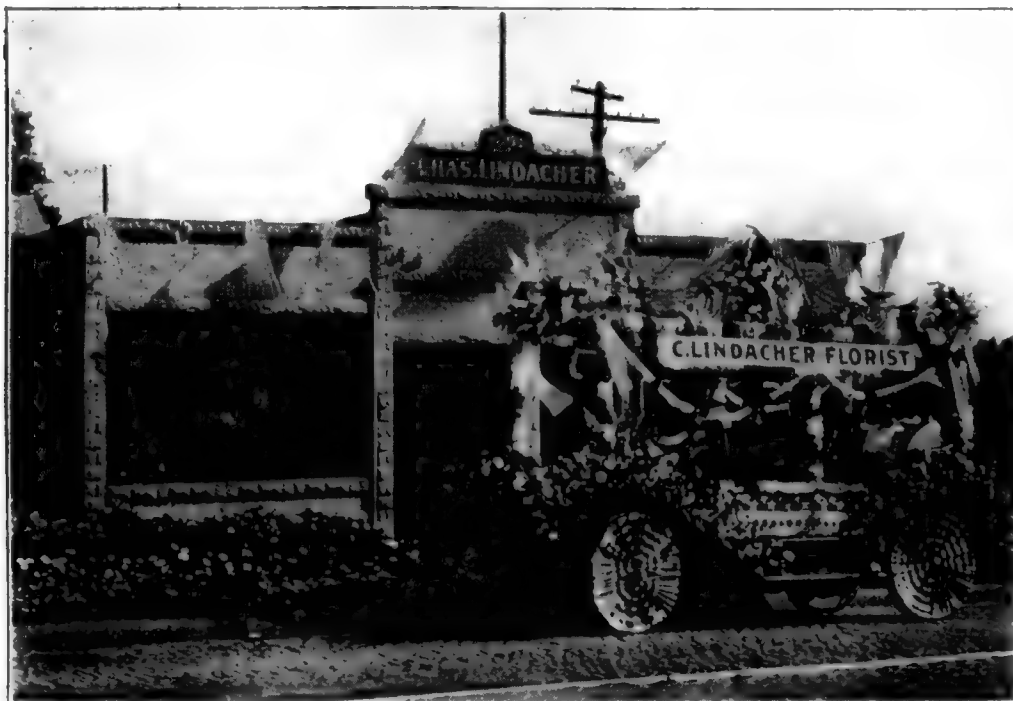

"The baskets on top," says Mr. Lindacher, "were filled with white and pink carnations and trimmed with chiffon. A dove was perched on each basket. Over the front wheels were white and pink asters; over the rear wheels, purple and white asters. Inside was a cigar-shaped balloon, with a boat attached, and these were kept constantly in motion."

DOUBLE TULIPS.

Name three or four especially fine double tulips for permanent beds.

A few excellent bedding varieties are: Murillo, blush white, shaded rose; Im-with water by means of several hours' soaking, as in the case of most other cut flowers.

The flowers alone then have a peculiar and attractive style and may be used in centerpieces with their own foliage in the same way as described above, where the plants are mentioned. They should be stemmed separately and the leaves arranged around as they are found in the plant. This will form a group resembling the plant, and several groups will make the centerpiece. Or use all the cut flowers in an immense center cluster and the leaves as a border, to resemble one large plant. This would do for a circular or square centerpiece. In a case of this kind, their own foliage will be much the best setting, as any fine-cut foliage detracts rather than adds to the effect. The notion that thick, heavy foliage must always be softened by fine-cut, dainty foliage is absurd and savors of the effeminate. Develop rather than soften the effect of foliage found growing with its own type of flower.

As to other flowers to use with cyclamen, they are not a few. White cyclamen in wedding bouquets, with valley, is second only to orchids and gardenias. With sweet peas and violets, nothing is lovelier either in brides' bouquets or corsages. It blends well with snapdragon also, in casket bunches. Small, bulbous flowers, like alliums and freesias, are charming with cyclamen.

In Wedding Bouquets.

In the case of the wedding bouquet, as it is eminently proper to use a noticeable touch of valley foliage with the flowers, so is it proper to use some cyclamen foliage. It should be placed near in a casket panel with violets, valley or peas, but Easter lilies as the main spray and cyclamen as the stemmed cluster, with the tie, are excellent. With white cyclamen flowers, heliotrope or violet in other flowers is acceptable coloring, while yellow in flowers and yellow green in foliage should be avoided. For instance, Boston ferns and Sprengeri, which are so useful with many flowers, are no combination for this touchy

NEW YORK'S SHOW HALL.

The Horticultural Society of New York is now entering upon a new era in its history, dating from the successful exhibition held last November, and it is hoped that a greatly increased membership will result, and hence a greater usefulness of the society to the cause of horticulture. Other cities have flourishing societies of this kind (those of Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago being conspicuous in this respect), and it is certainly desirable that horticulture in New York should attain as prominent a position as it holds elsewhere.

The Horticultural Society of New York is working toward this end, and it regards successful exhibitions of plants and flowers as of especial value in this work. Previous to last fall the society had not at its disposal in the lower part of the city a suitable place of easy access in which to hold its exhibitions. This want has now been filled, for an arrangement has been made whereby the society may hold its exhibitions and meetings at the American Museum of Natural History. This institution occupies the area lying between Seventy-seventh street, on which is located the main entrance, and Eighty-first street, on the south and north, and Eighth and Ninth avenues, a site readily accessible by subway, elevated and surface lines. It is the finest and largest building devoted to natural history in this country, and one of the greatest in the world. It is supplied with large and small lecture rooms, where societies may meet and conduct their proceedings, and there are spacious, well-lighted halls which lend themselves admirably to the purposes of an exhibition. Such an institution, it is needless to say, by its location and equipment, furnishes excellent facilities for the conduct of an exhibition, and the Horticultural Society of New York is to be congratulated upon securing such facilities for its exhibition, and upon the welcome extended to it by the officers of the institution. The location of the institution in the center of one of the finest residential sections of the city insures an attendance quite out of the ordinary. Invitations to the approaching exhibition will be sent to all members of the affiliated societies and to the large membership of the museum itself.

The "affiliated societies" have been referred to above, and a word of explanation is necessary. A number of the leading natural history societies of the city have affiliated themselves with the New York Academy of Sciences, and this affiliation has the use of a room at the American Museum of Natural History. The members of each society receive the weekly bulletins of the Academy, issued between the months of October and May, announcing the meetings of all the societies. Members of any society are welcome to attend the meetings of all of the others. In the early part of the present year this society was received as a member of this affiliation, and the Horticultural Society now enjoys equal privileges with the seven other societies. This entitles it to the use of the Academy room at the American Museum of Natural History. This room is equipped with a lantern, so that illustrated lectures may be given. Facilities are also placed at the disposal of the society for holding small flower shows at its monthly meetings, if so desired. This affiliation is a most important step in the history of the Horticultural Society.

The exhibition given last fall at the American Museum of Natural History attracted a large attendance. It was highly successful, and it is hoped to make the coming exhibition in November larger and better. That this hope may be realized all interested are urged to enter into the competition. A schedule, carrying with it over $1,600 in prizes, has been arranged, and the secretary will gladly send a copy of this to any one on application. To advance the cause of horticulture in this city it is necessary that all interested do their share for its development, and one of the best means to accomplish this is by making the exhibitions of the society large and eminently successful.

The exhibition committee consists of F. R. Pierson, chairman; George V. Nash, secretary; Leonard Barron, J. A. Manda, Peter Duff, P. O'Mara, J. E. Lager, F. H. Traendly and John Young.

A friend of the society, much interested in the Oncocylus or Regelia irises, which include the well-known Iris Susiana, the mourning iris, has offered a special prize of $25 for these flowers, to be awarded at the exhibition next spring or early summer. The prize is for the best collection of cut flowers, from plants growing out of doors, not less than ten species or hybrids, or both. Announcement is made of this prize now, so that those who may desire to compete for it shall have opportunity to secure the plants, as it is necessary to plant them this fall. These flowers are little cultivated, and it is hoped that this prize may stimulate an interest in their cultivation. GEO. V. NASH, Sec'y.

CALLAS FOR EASTER BLOOMING.

When should callas be potted for Easter blooming? S. K.

Pot your calla bulbs without delay. They will give you flowers long before Easter, but you can get a good crop of fine spathes at that time by keeping the plants well watered and affording plenty of liquid manure. C. W.

BUGS ON ASTERS.

There is some sort of bug on our asters. It is in the midst of a slimy substance, and apparently does not do any harm. Can you tell us what it is, and does it ever get so troublesome as to require attention? F. J. K.

I am not acquainted with the bug in question, but dusting with lime, or spraying with salt water, one ounce to two gallons of water, will likely fix him. A. F. J. B.

CLEMATIS DAVIDIANA.

Will Clematis Davidiana winter over, transplanted the first part of September? Is it strictly a biennial or perennial? My location is Nebraska. G. H. P.

a good time in clusters about the bases of the arch of a gate ajar, or something which may have overhanging showers or trailing garlands.

Set on table plateaus, we may have whole plants in bloom, using inconspicuous dark green to cover the moss and adding trailers of English ivy to extend over the table.

The Cut Flower in Centerpieces.

But to our subject proper: Cyclamens as cut flowers are valuable artistically and practically in point of keeping qualities. The stems should be well filled the flowers. There is no reason why an entire bride's bouquet of white cyclamen, with shower of the same or swainsona or peas, should not be both beautiful and acceptable on account of its rarity, while with the white flowers a touch of the orchid tints of the cyclamen might often supply a touch of color when desired.

Through all the many tints and shades of cyclamen flowers, there are few that do not look well together, while the waxy white is a welcome touch to a violet corsage, or to the base of a piece. As an entire casket bouquet they would not be so happily placed as they would flower. With the red tendency of violet and heliotrope colors under artificial light, color changes must be reckoned with.

Heart-shaped baskets, such as are shown for valentine decorations, are good receptacles for cyclamen in small table decorations. Their easy outline and smooth angles are just the thing to combine with the heart-shaped leaves and petals. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

A PRIZE DESIGN.

H. G. Dilleuth, of Toronto, sends the photograph from which the accompanying illustration is reproduced, showing the old oaken bucket, which was the first prize original design at a recent Toronto exhibition. The base of Mr. Dilleuth's design was of galax, with adiantum for fancy green, Pandanus Veitchii for variegated foliage, and large decorative type dahlias. On this a frame filled with asters was erected, the shelter at the top being made of cycas leaves. Carnations and adiantum were used in the wall surrounding the well. It was a real bucket, instead of a floral one, as might have been. The rope was the chenille used at weddings.

LINDACHER'S PRIZE AUTO.

The photograph here reproduced was taken in front of Charles Lindacher's store in Canton, O., and shows the decorated auto with which he captured first premium in a Labor day parade.

with water by means of several hours' soaking, as in the case of most other cut flowers.

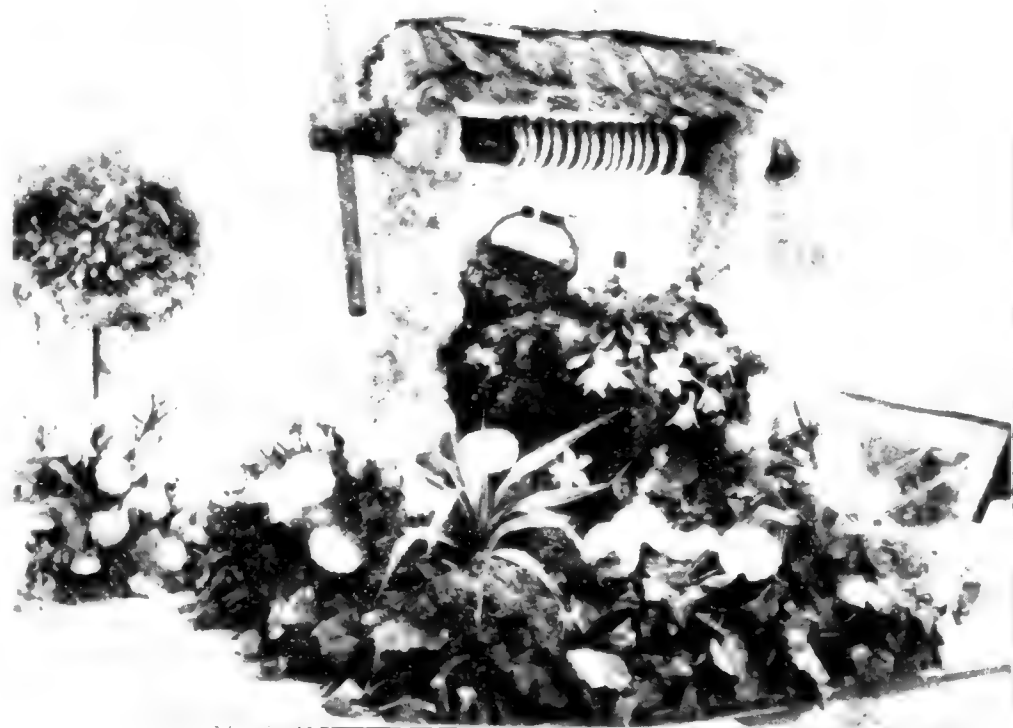

The flowers alone then have a peculiar and attractive style and may be used in centerpieces with their own foliage in the same way as described above, where the plants are mentioned. They should be stemmed separately and the leaves arranged around as they are found in the plant. This will form a group resembling the plant, and several groups will make the centerpiece. Or use all the cut flowers in an immense center cluster and the leaves as a border, to resemble one large plant. This would do for a circular or square centerpiece. In a case of this kind their own foliage will be much the best setting, as any fine cut foliage detracts rather than adds to the effect. The notion that thick, heavy foliage must always be softened by fine cut, dainty foliage is absurd and savors of the effeminate. Develop rather than soften the effect of foliage round growing plants, any type of flower.

As to other flowers to use with cyclamen, they are not a few. With cyclamen, no color goes better, white, yellow, is so, and of white, carnations, anemones. With stem flowers, white, nothing is lovelier, white, carnations, anemones, or carnations. Carnations, well with snapdragons also, in basket ranches. Small, bulbous flowers, like ranunculus, anemones, are charming with cyclamen.

In Wedding Bouquets.

As to use in the wedding bouquet, as it is essentially proper to use a noticeable touch of white foliage with the flowers, so it is proper to use some cyclamen foliage. It should be placed near in a casket panel with violets, valley or peas, but Easter lilies as the main spray and cyclamen as the stemmed cluster, with the tie, are excellent. With white cyclamen flowers, heliotrope or violet in other flowers is acceptable coloring, while yellow in flowers and yellow green in foliage should be avoided. For instance, Boston ferns and Sprenger, which are so useful with many flowers, are no combination for this touchy

NEW YORK'S SHOW HALL.

The Horticultural Society of New York is now entering upon a new era in its history, dating from the successful exhibition held last November, and it is expected that a greatly increased membership will result, and hence a greater usefulness of the society to the cause of horticulture. Other cities have flourishing societies of this kind (those of Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago being conspicuous in this respect), and it is certainly reasonable that horticulture in New York should attain as prominent a position as it occupies elsewhere.

The Horticultural Society of New York is working toward this end, and it gives successful exhibitions of plants and flowers as of especial value in this city. Previous to last fall the society met at its disposal in the lower part of the city a suitable place of easy access, and to hold its exhibitions. This place has now been filled, for an arrangement has been made whereby the society holds its exhibitions and meetings at the American Museum of Natural History. This institution occupies the area between Seventy-seventh street, on the west, the main entrance, and Sixty-first street, on the south, and Sixth, Eighth and Ninth avenues, a block accessible by subway, elevator and surface lines. It is the finest

GERANIUM RED WING.

In Geranium Red Wing F. H. De Witt & Co., of Wooster, O., consider they have a variety which is as good a bedder as S. A. Nutt and which will outsell the old favorite as a pot plant. The variety originated on their place. The color is described as deep cardinal red, with a soft velvety sheen. The flower is semi-double and of good substance. It is floriferous and the trusses of good size. De Witt & Co. have found the variety to be a robust grower and to stand the sun well. With them it has been a more salable and popular variety than any other in the large list of sorts they grow.

SOAP ON FERN FRONDS.

Enclosed you will find two fern leaves with the edges dried up. Can you tell me what causes them to dry up in this manner? I use Fir Tree Oil soap to keep the scale off them. Is this good for that purpose? For some reason I do not have extra good luck with my ferns. I have not been in the business very long. Had I got a copy of the REVIEW when I started, I would have been better off today. J. E. S.

The most likely cause of the injury to these fern fronds is the use of Fir Tree Oil, the insecticide hanging on the tips of the leaflets longer than on the remainder of the fronds. This is not a safe remedy to use on ferns, unless used in quite a weak solution, and in the latter case it is not of much use against the scale.

A solution of extract of tobacco, used in the proportion of one part of extract to fifty parts of water, is less likely to injure the foliage than the Fir Tree Oil, and will be quite as good as a preventive. W. H. T.

TROUBLE WITH BOSTON FERNS.

I am sending a tip from a leaf of a Boston fern, showing what is happening to a fine lot of plants. The new growths come up healthy, but instead of properly developing, the tips dried up. Something else also seems wrong with them, because after taking the plants from the greenhouse and leaving them in the retail store for a few days, instead of retaining their natural dark green color, they turned a rather grayish green and were difficult to dispose of as healthy plants. What is the remedy? E. W. C.

You do not state how the ferns in question have been treated, but the condition of the specimen indicates that the plants have had a check, either from too low a temperature or from lack of water at some time; or if the plants have been lifted from a bench, the check may have occurred then. The grayish green color that the plants show after having been in the store for a few days is due to the fact that they are not well rooted, and would appear to show that they are bench-grown plants that have been put in the store before they were well established in the pots. It pays better to get the plants thoroughly rooted in pots or pans before offering them for sale, for a pot-bound plant will wear much better in a dwelling and consequently give greater satisfaction. W. H. T.

HYACINTHS AND PAPER WHITES

When is the proper time to plant Gertrude, miniature, and Pinnocense, miniature, hyacinths to come in for Christmas? What kind of soil do they want and what treatment? Also Paper White narcissi; how should they be planted and how can they be held until wanted inside? A. L. & S.

Paper White narcissi if placed in flats now can be kept in a cellar, frame or pit; later they can be stood for convenience under a greenhouse bench. They are easily flowered for Christmas. Allow a month from the time you house them until they are wanted in bloom. You can easily retard them in a pit or cold greenhouse. The flats do not require covering with soil or ashes, as in the case of the majority of bulbous plants.

Hyacinths, other than Romans, are not easy to flower for Christmas. These latter if started now will be in ample time. In a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees these and the Paper Whites will be in flower in three or four weeks, provided they are about three inches high when housed. The miniature hyacinths referred to should be planted right away, well soaked with water and stood in a dark cellar or pit until they have the flats full of roots and have growths two or three inches long. When housing them keep in a warm, dark place for a few days to draw them up. W. C.

LILIUM HARRISII.

Our Easter lilies, Harrisii, are up about two inches above the pots out in a frame. We leveled the pots off with sand after filling the pots within an inch and a half from the top when the bulb was inserted. Should they be brought out when about four inches above the sand and will they be too soon for Easter in a temperature of about 50 degrees when the cold weather starts in? A. L. & S.

A good many Lilium Harrisii will be used next Easter, owing to the early date on which it falls. In a temperature of 50 degrees at night it is probable that a good many will flower before Easter. Endeavor to hold them back so that the flower buds do not show before the middle of February. You can do this with a good many, if you keep them in a frame for another month and then give them a house kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night, increasing the temperature for any which appear late and giving all more heat early in February. They want about forty days from the time the buds show till flowers open in a night temperature of 60 degrees. C. W.

WINTERING ECHEVERIAS.

How shall I keep echeveria (hen and chickens) over winter? G. H. P.

Keep the plants in flats of sandy soil in a cool house and afford little or no water. Do not syringe them overhead. A little moisture during the winter months will start decay. They want a dry atmosphere. A shelf well up to the glass would be an ideal location. C. W.

DAHLIA CUTTINGS.

Will you please tell me when to take dahlia cuttings? L. A. M. K.

We presume you wish to know when to take cuttings so as to form pot roots or tubers suitable for carrying over the winter. It is now much too late to take any cuttings. June and July are the most suitable months. As soon as rooted in the cutting bench, pot off into 3-inch pots and plunge in a frame where they can root through into some old, well decayed manure. In such a location they will thrive amazingly and make nice solid tubers, which practically fill the pots. These are excellent for shipping purposes and winter better than the large ground roots.

If you referred to propagation of cuttings for plants to be grown outdoors, this work is best performed in March and April, giving the cuttings a good bottom heat. C. W.

CHRISTMAS SWEET PEAS.

Please state what are the best white and best pink sweet peas to plant after Christmas, good strong flowers on long stems. G. M. C.

In the REVIEW of September 9 it was stated, under the head "Sweet Peas for Market," that one should "sow about September 10 to be sure of having some flowers for Christmas, in a temperature at night of 46 to 50 degrees. Suitable sorts are Christmas Pink, pink; Mont Blanc, Florence Denzer and Watchung, white, and Mrs. Alex. Wallace, lavender. Seed can be sown either in small pots, two or three to a pot, or, as some large growers prefer, in flats of sand, transplanting directly from the flats to the beds where they are to flower. Allow the individual plants three to four inches apart in the row and they will give you much finer spikes than if planted more thickly."

HOFFMAN'S HOUSES.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs made at Cambridge, Mass., and serve to give an idea of the improvements made by Sydney Hoffman during the present season. In addition to his store at Massachusetts and Commonwealth avenues, in Boston, Mr. Hoffman conducts the store and range of glass shown in the illustrations. The exterior view shows only the front house of the several which have been added to the range this season and previously since he took it over. The interior view shows this front house as it appears from the entrance from the store.

It is interesting to note that these photographs were made exactly six years from the date Mr. Hoffman started in business. He has taken the property at Cambridge for a term of twenty years, and with his increased facilities there will continue to grow a special line of pot plants for the Boston store.

PLANTS FOR HANGING BASKETS.

Please give a list of plants most suitable for hanging baskets. C. E. G.

A few good plants for hanging baskets are: Asparagus Sprengeri, variegated vinca, Lobelia gracilis, achimenes, ivy-leaved geraniums, petunias, oxalis, mimulus, hederia (English ivy), glechoma, lysimachia, Broyallia speciosa major, Abutilon vexillarium, Senecio scandens (German ivy), Maurandia Barclaiana, Ficus repens. There are several begonias, and one or two fuchsias of a trailing nature, which make fine basket plants. The foregoing is only an abbreviated list of some of the better known varieties. C. W.

growers prefer, in flats of sand, transplanting directly from the flats to the beds where they are to flower. Allow the individual plants three to four inches apart in the row and they will give you much finer spikes than if planted more thickly."

HOFFMAN'S HOUSES.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs made at Cambridge, Mass., and serve to give an idea of the improvements made by Sidney Hoffman during the present season. In addition to his store at Massachusetts and Commonwealth avenues, in Boston, Mr. Hoffman conducts the store and range of glass shown in the illustrations. The exterior view shows only the front house of the several which have been added to the range this season and previously since he took it over. The interior view shows this front house as it appears from the entrance from the store.

It is interesting to note that these photographs were made exactly six years from the date Mr. Hoffman started in business. He has taken the property at Cambridge for a term of twenty years, and with his increased facilities there will continue to grow a special line of pot plants for the Boston store.

PLANTS FOR HANGING BASKETS.

Please give a list of plants most suitable for hanging baskets. C. E. G.

A few good plants for hanging baskets are: Asparagus Sprengeri, variegated vinca, Lobelia gracilis, achimenes, ivy-leaved geraniums, petunias, oxalis, mimulus, hederia (English ivy), glechoma, lysimachia, Broyallia speciosa major, Abutilon vexillarium, Senecio scandens (German ivy), Maurandia Barelaiana, Ficus repens. There are several begonias, and one or two fuchsias of a trailing nature, which make fine basket plants. The foregoing is only an abbreviated list of some of the better known varieties.

ALFRED BURTON.

Alfred Burton, who will be elected vice-president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club at its meeting Tuesday, October 5, is well known, not only in the trade in his vicinity, but throughout the country, as an exceptionally successful grower of American Beauty roses. He is the son of John Burton, whom everyone knows and likes, and in a trade way is following in the footsteps of his father.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Azaleas.

Any left-over azaleas which have been planted outdoors should now be lifted and potted. It is a mistaken idea that good azaleas cannot be grown outdoors in America. The fact is that, if they are within convenient reach of the hose and have been planted in a suitable compost, they will grow and form flower buds more abundantly than in Belgium. It is a mistaken notion to continue to plant these in heavy shade. In the full sun they will set buds far better, and if they have been kept well syringed there should be no signs of thrips or other pests on them.

It will be but a short time before the imported plants begin to arrive. Growers who do not import directly usually depend upon securing their supplies from some of the large specialists. Orders should be placed now to insure prompt delivery. The balls are liable to become quite dry in some cases where they have been kept in too close proximity to the boilers, and it is always well to soak them thoroughly in tubs of water before potting. Be sure to pot firmly and do not forget to leave an ample margin for water. Hard-wooded plants have fine, hair-like roots, as a rule, and when they are watered one filling should suffice to soak the ball. If they get dry, it is more satisfactory to stand the pots in a pail or tub of water, to be sure the roots are thoroughly wetted. There is no immediate hurry about housing azaleas, so long as frost keeps away. A light freezing will not hurt them, but it is better to be on the safe side and place them in a cold house or pit before any frost comes at all.

Calceolarias.

The progress made by calceolarias is always discouraging until the cool fall nights arrive. They grow more in one week in September than during the whole of July. This is not at all surprising, as few greenhouse flowering plants love cooler treatment. Do not place the plants in the greenhouses for some weeks yet. Let them have the night dews by throwing the sashes of the coldframes off, unless frost seems imminent. Never allow aphids to get any start on these. If fumigated once a week, they will be clean. You cannot apply any nicotine liquid solutions and reach the lower sides of the leaves properly, as they lie so close to the soil.

Keep them potted along and always allow plenty of rather rough leaf-mold in compost. Let any manure be old and such as will crumble up in the hand. For the later pottings we like to have the compost rather lumpy, so that water will pass quickly through it, but in the earlier stages one-half loam and one-half leaf-mold, with a little rotted manure and sand added, seems to suit them nicely.

Cuttings of Calceolaria rugosa, taken now, will make fine plants for spring sales, the yellow varieties being the most desirable. The cuttings will root in four weeks in a cool house and should be carried over winter in a cold house, 40 to 45 degrees at night being warm enough. The spikes are much tougher on these than on herbaceous varieties and the plants commercially are far superior, as they last well in water and are useful in bouquets. It is surprising that so few florists have yet found out their value.

Gladiolus Colvillei* Alba.

Among the earliest of the bulb arrivals, which demand attention immediately after arrival, are the small bulbed, early flowering gladioli. The best known of these is the one commonly known as Gladiolus The Bride, the pure white flowers of which are extremely useful in almost any kind of floral work. These succeed capitally in flats four inches deep, standing them in a cellar or pit until growth starts, when they can be given a lighter location. The popular varieties of G. nanus, such as Blushing Bride, Ackermanni, Peach Blossom and other sorts, can be similarly treated. They are among the most useful of all bulbous plants for cutting, keeping also remarkably well in water. Peach Blossom is a little higher priced than some other varieties, but it is of that delicate peach-pink shade which always sells on sight. These gladioli, when received, are often found to be making numerous roots and have the growths well advanced. Be sure, therefore, to open the bags or boxes and spread them out, getting them into the soil with as little delay as possible.

Cyclamens.

Potting of all plants intended for Christmas or later winter blooming should be completed as soon as possible, in order that they may become well rooted before really cold weather gets here. The growth the cyclamens are now making cheers the heart of the patient cultivator. The circles of handsome leaves lying close to the rims of the pots are, or should be, tough and free from all blemishes. If nicotine sprayings or light fumigations have been carefully attended to, there should be no imperfect leaves. Any sick looking plants should be thrown away. They only spoil the appearance of a block of otherwise thrifty stock.

Christmas is the season when nice cyclamens sell well, and to have them in season at that time the plants should be now moved into a light house, where they can be shielded from the full rays of the sun and where they can have an abundance of fresh air. Any coddling will result in drawn plants, such as will never hold up the leaves properly, to say nothing of the flowers. Any staking or supporting of cyclamens should be frowned upon. Well grown plants will hold their leaves and flowers erect. These will always sell, which drawn, attenuated looking ones will not do. Begin to apply liquid manure in weak doses as soon as the pots are getting well filled. Constant applications of manure water produce rather flabby plants. Alternate top-dressings with some reliable chemical fertilizer make the growth harder and seem to promote floriferousness. This applies to all soft-wooded and bulbous plants, which do much better with a change of stimulants.

Propagating Bedding Plants.

Frosts may now come at any time, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed. Where cuttings of such tender plants as coleus, achyranthes, alternantheras, heliotropes, acalyphas, etc., have not yet been taken, a batch should be gotten into the propagating bench without further delay. Cuttings are preferable to old plants. These latter are better harbors for mealy bug in many cases, and, unless one is short of stock, there would seem to be no special use in lifting them.

Verbenas are sometimes propagated from cuttings; a still better plan is to raise seedlings, which possess greater vigor. The same is true of petunias, which are not worth carrying over, unless of some specially good variety. In the case of lobelia, where the compacta type is grown for bedding, cuttings are to be preferred to seedlings and some old plants can be cut back and carried over in boxes. These, if placed on a shelf, will furnish an abundant crop of cuttings in winter and they are not special marks for pests, as are some other sorts.

Geranium cuttings, as we have previously stated, root all the better by being left on the plants as long as frost keeps away. If cold comes on suddenly, pull up the stock plants and lay them thinly on a shed floor. If away from fire-heat, they will not harm for a day or two if not propagated right away. Never mind if the cuttings show signs of wilting before going into the sand. Drying up of the superabundance of moisture in them is a good thing, and lower cuttings will be liable to rot than when they are inserted while soft and plump.

Shading.

While we may get some hot days still, the length of sunlight will steadily decline for the next three months and it will be necessary, now that really torrid weather has passed, to reduce the shading on some plants. Ferns of all kinds will still require protection from the sun's rays, but it can be materially reduced, especially in the case of nephrolepis. Adiantums, especially Farleyense, will, of course, want to be fairly well shaded yet. On palms the advantage of more light is well understood, but this should not mean clear glass in any case, or scalding of the foliage is more than probable. Pale foliage is also a result of too sudden removal of shading. Crotons and many warm house plants prefer a little cloudy covering on the glass, even in winter. Orchids of all kinds want more light and a considerably reduced shade. Cyclamens, calceolarias, cinerarias and primulas want protection during the hottest part of the day.

ROGER H. MURPHEY.

Roger H. Murphey, of Urbana, O., president-elect of the Springfield Florists' Club, is a native of Urbana and the son of Charles Murphey, deceased. The father was engaged in growing shrubbery when Roger was a boy, but the latter always had an ambition to work under glass.

As a result of this ambition, in his early manhood he obtained the aid of a brother, and together they let his trunk down by a rope, through a window of his upstairs bedroom, and off he went into the world to seek fame and fortune. Dayton, O., was his first stopping point, where he went to work for a Mr. Mumma, nurseryman and florist. One day, while he was standing in market engaged in the sale of plants, to his great surprise his father appeared on the scene, and after some consultation induced Roger to return home. Later, with the parental consent, he worked for Frank Pentland, of Lockland, O., near Cincinnati.

Something like thirty-five years ago, greenhouses were erected by the father at Urbana, and were jointly operated by father and son until the death of the former, when they were taken in charge by Roger and conducted in the growing of a general line of stock for the local trade and throughout the surrounding country, much of the selling in those days being done from a wagon.

Mr. Murphey served his town as postmaster during the McKinley and first Roosevelt administrations, to the full satisfaction of his fellow townsmen, and had their backing for a third term, but the game of politics was worked so strongly as to make the opposing applicant victorious.

For about eight years past, rose plant growing has been followed almost exclusively, a market for the greater portion of the product being found among the numerous florists of Springfield.

The present style of the firm is R. H. Murphey's Sons, Charles R., Frank and Wm. M. being now associated with their father in the business, and the latter states that, in the event of his demise, the business is theirs and may go right ahead under the same style.

In addition to the florists' business, Mr. Murphey is interested in a canning factory and a coffee roasting enterprise in his town.

The members of the Springfield Florists' Club anticipate a pleasurable occasion on the evening of October 11, when they expect to partake of the hospitality of Roger Murphey and his sons.

STORING HARDY CUT FERNS.

Will you please advise me through the REVIEW how to keep hardy cut ferns through the winter? H. B.

Probably there is no one question that is asked oftener than the above, and it is a question to which it is impossible to give a categorical answer without the danger that the results will disprove the accuracy of the directions. The fact is, no one really knows how to keep ferns in cold storage, for the oldest and most experienced handlers sometimes meet with severe losses. About all that can be said is that they must be stored in a temperature below freezing. Large dealers have tried using a temperature just below freezing and also as great a degree of cold as the cold storage warehouses afford, with excellent results some seasons and a large waste in others, under circumstances exactly similar. No matter whether the ferns are stored at 28 to 30 degrees, or at a lower temperature, it should be steady; freeze them down and keep them frozen, then thaw out gradually.

The ferns should be put up in cases or 5,000 to 10,000, with auger holes bored in the sides, but the box should be lined with moss, and there should be a little moss between every few layers of bunches. E.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.*Retarding Bloom.

Conserving plant energy or, in other words, retarding mature plants from blooming at a time when the market is inactive, requires somewhat different treatment than when plant building in the field. The main object then is to direct growth into the construction of plants bearing numerous shoots, while at present the purpose is to prevent useless consumption of energy and soil depletion.

Instead of cutting back the shoots as soon as stem formation can be plainly seen between nodes or joints, the operation should be delayed until a bud has formed and attained a diameter of about one-quarter inch. If topped at a too early stage there is great liability that, instead of two or three strong shoots taking the place of the one removed, there will appear a mass of weak, spindling growths.

A Common Mistake.

It is important to guard against the common mistake of topping too high on the stem. This is a habit that is easy to fall into, owing to the desire to encourage as many side shoots as possible to produce bloom, but it is obvious that if the plants are to be kept within reasonable bounds and symmetrical in shape, we must prune accordingly. Besides, it is impossible to produce stout stems, of good length, except from shoots springing from the lower part of the plant.

The cutting back of more than two shoots at a time is not to be recommended, as the removal of a considerable number at once tends to encourage crop-piness in a variety otherwise having a disposition to bloom continuously. By bearing this in mind, the grower may gain considerable advantage in the matter of maintaining a continuous supply of flowers.

If relatively small when housed, the plants may receive practically the same treatment as practiced in the field, this to continue at least until a certain degree of maturity is reached.

Take note of those plants which have made vigorous growth from the start, which have naturally preserved a neat habit, which have gone through reestablishment without loss of foliage, or in any way behaved particularly to your liking. We will have a word to say about them from time to time. GEO. S. OSBORN.

TO CHECK EARLY BLOOMING.

I planted my carnations in the greenhouse in the first part of August and there are some that have started to bear small flowers. Would you be so kind as to let me know if it would not be better to pinch the plants again? I do not need the blooms before Christmas. L. V.

The safest plan for you to adopt will be to allow your carnation shoots to run up to bud and let the bud develop until it is almost ready to show color; that is, until the petals are about to push out of the end of the calyx. Go over the plants about every third day and take off these flower stems, the same as though you were cutting blooms, but perhaps one or two joints higher up. I would advise you to leave every joint which will produce a strong shoot. In this way you can change your plans on tolerably short notice, should you find at any time that you can use the blooms to good advantage. If you do not want blooms until Christmas, you will begin to let the flowers develop early in December.

Of course you know your own business best, but are you sure that you do not want the blooms until Christmas? If we had to cut October, November and early December from our business season, we would almost despair of making any profit on the season. They are good months with us, though of course January and February are better. So my advice to you would be, not to work too far ahead with your topping.

SOW BUGS IN BENCH SOIL.

We have a bench of carnation plants that are infested with bugs like the one enclosed, which roll up in a ball. They feed on the leaves of the plants in the night. The soil is new, sod soil, but is on an old bench, which was not thoroughly cleaned off, only dusted with lime. We have also another bench in the same condition. Kindly tell us what would be an effectual and safe treatment.

F. J. K.

The bug you complain of is the well-known and pestiferous sow bug or shot bug or wood louse, or whatever other pet name you may want to call him. Under each and every cognomen his destructive work is the same, and the best and quickest means of extermination is none too good for him. This bug is found mostly where there is decaying wood or vegetable matter, but he is also fond of many plants, such as Rex begonias, ferns, etc. He seems also to be fond of carnations, though he attacks them mostly during the time of reestablishment. After the plants get to growing well there is little trouble along this line.

We use granulated sugar, with enough Paris green mixed into it to give it a lively green color. Drop a pinch of this here and there on the edgeboard of your benches, and if the Paris green is of good quality you will find plenty of dead bugs strewn along the path the next morning. Keep this up until you are rid of the pest.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETYDepartment of Registration.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., registers the following new carnations:

Sangamo—Mrs. E. A. Nelson x Enchantress; brilliant pink; size, three to three and one-half inches; strong, healthy, upright and rapid growth; breaks easily from base of plant; flowers produced very freely on extra long stems; calyx never bursts.

Establishment of R. S. McMurray, at Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Superba—Parentage uncertain; pure soft pink; size, three and one-half to four inches; strong, healthy, upright growth; more slender than Sangamo, but strengthens quickly after benching; flowers fringed and slightly whorled; very fine; extra long stems; calyx rarely bursts.

The illustration gives an idea of the neatness with which Mr. McMurray maintains his establishment. He is one of those who believe that a florist should set an example for his community in the matter of well laid out, well planted and well kept grounds, and he finds that the plants and beds on his own grounds invariably bring him orders for the duplication of the work on the home grounds of his customers.

One of the features of the retail florists' business which is the subject of regular complaint is the necessity, as some consider it, of being practically always open for business, Sundays as well as week days. Mr. McMurray thinks a florist is entitled, as well as any other man, to maintain regular hours for business and he does not sell on Sundays any other flowers than those required for funeral purposes. His place is open Sunday morning until 10 o'clock and again from 4 to 6 in the afternoon, but his advertisements and printed matter all state that the Sunday hours are "for funeral work only."

TO REMOVE WHITEWASH.

Do you know of anything that will remove whitewash from greenhouse glass? I used the pure whitewash, and am surprised that it was not washed off during the summer rains. I am now very anxious to get my glass clean, but find it difficult to get the whitewash off. How shall I do it? S. B. A.

Any of the ordinary household washing powders, such as Dutch Cleanser, will loosen the whitewash. Mix in water and apply with a force pump, syringe or mop, according to the height of your house. This will loosen the wash so that it will come off if rubbed a little with a long-handled brush. Potash water will have the same effect. This, however, will eat the paint from the woodwork, as well as the shading from the glass. Some gritty substance, such as sand, if applied after the glass has been damped, will remove shade if rubbed a little. Give the roof a thorough washing down with the hose as you rub it over. C. W.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business fell down somewhat last week, until Saturday, when it took on a sudden spurt and it is still spurting at the present writing.

Roses are quite plentiful in all lengths. Among the best are La Detroit, Richmond, My Maryland, Kaiserin and Killarney. Some fine Golden Glow chrysanthemums arrive daily and meet with a good demand. Carnations are still scarce, but the quality is improving rapidly and no doubt there will soon be enough to go around.

Asters are about the same as they have been all summer. They can be divided into three grades, good, fair and bad or poor. Few really fine flowers were seen this season.

Club Meeting.

It has been some time since a meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held. Not because the members were tired of meeting, but first it was the convention and then the next meeting night fell on Labor day.

There was a fair attendance at the meeting held September 21. The only special feature was the installation of the new officers. Those who expected to hear some fine speaking were doomed to disappointment, for there were no speeches. As soon as the meeting was called to order the retiring president, W. B. Brown, thanked the club for the support given him last year and turned the chair over to our new president. Mr. Plumb said he hardly expected to do as well as his predecessor, but would do his best to make this a creditable year.

M. Bloy and E. A. Scribner gave their views of the Cincinnati convention. They spoke very highly of the reception received. Mr. Scribner spoke of his visit to Peterson's place, which proved most interesting.

Committees were appointed by President Plumb as follows:

Auditing—J. F. Sullivan, A. Pochelon, A. Sylvester.

Program and Essay—W. B. Brown, J. F. Sullivan, F. Danzer.

Entertainment—J. K. Stock, Louis Charvat, R. Rahaley, A. Sylvester, R. Klagge.

Exhibits—M. Bloy, H. Knope, E. Beard, T. Browne, A. Stahelin.

The meeting was adjourned to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, where luncheon was served by the entertainment committee.

Wm. Dilger left early in the evening to take a train for Cleveland to attend the convention of the American Automobile Association. Mr. Dilger has been appointed a member of the Demonstration of Good Roads committee and is to talk upon this subject.

Cigars were passed by A. Pochelon and smoked to the good health of Miss Pochelon.

Various Notes.

Wm. J. Pearce, of Pontiac, has been spending the better part of the summer near St. Paul, Minn., the home of his parents.

In going west on Putnam avenue, one's attention is attracted by three large canna beds adorning a beautiful lawn. This is Jerry K. Stock's place. Mr. Stock's houses this year are devoted to carnations, mums and ferns. Ferns are

STORING HARDY CUT FERNS.

Will you please advise me through the REVIEW how to keep hardy cut ferns through the winter? H. B.

Probably there is no one question that is asked oftener than the above, and it is a question to which it is impossible to give a categorical answer without the danger that the results will disprove the accuracy of the directions. The fact is, no one really knows how to keep ferns in cold storage, for the oldest and most experienced handlers sometimes meet with severe losses. About all that can be said is that they must be stored in a temperature below freezing. Large dealers have tried using a temperature just below freezing and also as great a degree of cold as the cold storage warehouses afford, with excellent results some seasons and a large waste in others, under circumstances exactly similar. No matter whether the ferns are stored at 28 to 30 degrees, or at a lower temperature, it should be steady; freeze them down and keep them frozen, then thaw out gradually.

The ferns should be put up in cases of 5,000 to 10,000, with auger holes bored in the sides, but the box should be lined with moss, and there should be a little moss between every few layers of bunches. E.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.*Retarding Bloom.

Conserving plant energy or, in other words, retarding mature plants from blooming at a time when the market is inactive, requires somewhat different treatment than when plant building in the field. The main object then is to direct growth into the construction of plants bearing numerous shoots, while at present the purpose is to prevent useless consumption of energy and soil depletion.

Instead of cutting back the shoots as soon as stem formation can be plainly seen between nodes or joints, the operation should be delayed until a bud has formed and attained a diameter of about one-quarter inch. If topped at a too early stage there is great liability that, instead of two or three strong shoots taking the place of the one removed, there will appear a mass of weak, spindling growths.

A Common Mistake.

It is important to guard against the common mistake of topping too high on the stem. This is a habit that is easy to fall into, owing to the desire to encourage as many side shoots as possible to produce bloom, but it is obvious that if the plants are to be kept within reasonable bounds and symmetrical in shape, we must prune accordingly. Besides, it is impossible to produce stout stems, of good length, except from shoots springing from the lower part of the plant.

The cutting back of more than two shoots at a time is not to be recommended, as the removal of a considerable number at once tends to encourage croppiness in a variety otherwise having a disposition to bloom continuously. By bearing this in mind, the grower may gain considerable advantage in the matter of maintaining a continuous supply of flowers.

If relatively small when housed, the plants may receive practically the same treatment as practiced in the field, this to continue at least until a certain degree of maturity is reached.

Take note of those plants which have made vigorous growth from the start, which have naturally preserved a neat habit, which have gone through reestablishment without loss of foliage, or in any way behaved particularly to your liking. We will have a word to say about them from time to time. GEO. S. OSBORN.

TO CHECK EARLY BLOOMING.

I planted my carnations in the greenhouse in the first part of August and there are some that have started to bear small flowers. Would you be so kind as to let me know if it would not be better to pinch the plants again? I do not need the blooms before Christmas. L. V.

The safest plan for you to adopt will be to allow your carnation shoots to run up to bud and let the bud develop until it is almost ready to show color; that is, until the petals are about to push out of the end of the calyx. Go over the plants about every third day and take off these flower stems, the same as though you were cutting blooms, but perhaps one or two joints higher up. I would advise you to leave every joint which will produce a strong shoot. In this way you can change your plans on tolerably short notice, should you find at any time that you can use the blooms to good advantage. If you do not want blooms until Christmas, you will begin to let the flowers develop early in December.

Of course you know your own business best, but are you sure that you do not want the blooms until Christmas? If we had to cut October, November and early December from our business season, we would almost despair of making any profit on the season. They are good months with us, though of course January and February are better. So my advice to you would be, not to work too far ahead with your topping.

SOW BUGS IN BENCH SOIL.

We have a bench of carnation plants that are infested with bugs like the one enclosed, which roll up in a ball. They feed on the leaves of the plants in the night. The soil is new, sod soil, but is on an old bench, which was not thoroughly cleaned off, only dusted with lime. We have also another bench in the same condition. Kindly tell us what would be an effectual and safe treatment.

F. J. K.

The bug you complain of is the well known and pestiferous sow bug or shot bug or wood louse, or whatever other pet name you may want to call him. Under each and every cognomen his destructive work is the same, and the best and quickest means of extermination is none too good for him. This bug is found mostly where there is decaying wood or vegetable matter, but he is also fond of many plants, such as Rex begonias, ferns, etc. He seems also to be fond of carnations, though he attacks them mostly during the time of reestablishment. After the plants get to growing well there is little trouble along this line.

We use granulated sugar, with enough Paris green mixed into it to give it a lively green color. Drop a pinch of this here and there on the edgeboard of your benches, and if the Paris green is of good quality you will find plenty of dead bugs strewn along the path the next morning. Keep this up until you are rid of the pest.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETYDepartment of Registration.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., registers the following new carnations:

Sangamo—Mrs. E. A. Nelson x Enchantress; brilliant pink; size, three to three and one-half inches; strong, healthy, upright and rapid growth; breaks easily from base of plant; flowers produced very freely on extra long stems; calyx never bursts.

Establishment of R. S. McMurray, at Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Superba—Parentage uncertain; pure soft pink; size, three and one-half to four inches; strong, healthy, upright growth; more slender than Sangamo, but strengthens quickly after benching; flowers tinged and slightly whorled; very fine; extra long stems; calyx rarely bursts.
A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

AN OHIO ESTABLISHMENT.

The illustration gives an idea of the neatness with which Mr. McMurray maintains his establishment. He is one of those who believe that a florist should set an example for his community in the matter of well laid out, well planted and well kept grounds, and he finds that the plants and beds on his own grounds invariably bring him orders for the duplication of the work on the home grounds of his customers.

One of the features of the retail florists' business which is the subject of regular complaint is the necessity, as we consider it, of being practically always open for business, Sundays as well as week days. Mr. McMurray thinks a florist is entitled, as well as any other man, to maintain regular hours for business and he does not sell on Sundays any finer flowers than those required for general purposes. His place is open Sunday morning until 10 o'clock and again from 4 to 6 in the afternoon, but his advertisements and printed matter all state that the Sunday hours are "for funeral work only."

TO REMOVE WHITEWASH.

Do you know of anything that will remove whitewash from greenhouse glass? I used the pure whitewash, and am surprised that it was not washed off during the summer rains. I am now very anxious to get my glass clean, but find it difficult to get the whitewash off. How shall I do it?

S. B. A.

Any of the ordinary household washing powders, such as Dutch Cleanser, will loosen the whitewash. Mix in water and apply with a force pump, syringe or mop, according to the height of your house. This will loosen the wash so that it will come off if rubbed a little with a long-handled brush. Potash water will have the same effect. This, however, will eat the paint from the woodwork, as well as the shading from the glass. Some gritty substance, such as sand, if applied after the glass has been damped, will remove shade if rubbed a little. Give the roof a thorough washing down with the hose as you rub it over.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business fell down somewhat last week, until Saturday, when it took on a sudden spurt and it is still spurting at the present writing.

Roses are quite plentiful in all lengths. Among the best are La Detroit, Richmond, My Maryland, Kaiserin and Killarney. Some fine Golden Glow chrysanthemums arrive daily and meet with a good demand. Carnations are still scarce, but the quality is improving rapidly and no doubt there will soon be enough to go around.

Asters are about the same as they have been all summer. They can be divided into three grades, good, fair and bad or poor. Few really fine flowers were seen this season.

Club Meeting.

It has been some time since a meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held. Not because the members were tired of meeting, but first it was the convention and then the next meeting night fell on Labor day.

There was a fair attendance at the meeting held September 21. The only special feature was the installation of the new officers. Those who expected to hear some fine speaking were doomed to disappointment, for there were no speeches. As soon as the meeting was called to order the retiring president, W. B. Brown, thanked the club for the support given him last year and turned the chair over to our new president. Mr. Plumb said he hardly expected to do as well as his predecessor, but would do his best to make this a creditable year.

Wm. J. Pearce, of Pontiac, has been spending the better part of the summer near St. Paul, Minn., the home of his parents.

In going west on Putnam avenue, one's attention is attracted by three large canna beds adorning a beautiful lawn. This is Jerry K. Stock's place. Mr. Stock's houses this year are devoted to carnations, mums and ferns. Ferns are his specialty and many thousands are sold annually at retail. Mr. Stock's greenhouses are located in a fine residence section and an excellent retail business keeps him busy.

It is an easy matter to decorate an automobile, but to decorate one so it will please the taste of hundreds of people and win a first prize is a different matter. August Von Boeselager recently decorated two automobiles, one for the Woodmen's and one for the Maccabees' parade, in Mount Clemens, and in both cases they won a first prize.

The new show room at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is at present brilliant with the large display of glassware. Vases from those for tiny bunches of violets to those that will hold a dozen Beauties are shown in various styles.

September 16 and 17 the annual flower festival was held at Detroit's public schools. Some few years ago only a few of the schools participated, but gradually the number has grown until this year twenty-four schools entered into the contest for the liberal premiums offered by the Twentieth Century Club and the Detroit Florists' Club. In spring the seeds are distributed for a nominal fee to the school children by the Twentieth Century Club, and the children are encouraged to become little gardeners and vegetable growers. The flowers seen this year at the schools in some cases compare favorably with those grown by professionals. Cash prizes are offered to the school making the best display, and a Boston fern to a boy and girl in each school contributing the largest variety of flowers grown from the seeds furnished by the society. The judging is done by members of the Detroit Florists' Club.

The writer made a bad mistake in a recent report. The little girl spoken of as having arrived at the home of Ed. Beard happened to be a boy. Mr. Beard says that even though he did get married late in life, he will still have some help when Father Time comes along. H. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There is not much change in the market conditions and why should there be, with the thermometer loafing around the eighties? Everyone is living out of doors and has little use for flowers. These conditions are not calculated to make wholesalers happy; their growers are shipping in the quantities of flowers forced in by the hot weather, and there is scarcely a market for even a part of them. Asters are the worst; it is nothing unusual to see a truck load pull up in front of a wholesale store, while a small boy can deliver the sales.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements are putting the finishing touches on the last of their new houses and, like everybody else in this business, are still crowded for room to house the stock which must go in now.

Everyone here has his carnation houses in good shape and the stock looks well, though in most cases the plants are not as large as last year. Carnation flowers are coming in every day and some of the stock is excellent.

Walter Breitenstein has gone east to look up novelties for the winter, and he always finds them.

Frank Myers, of Myers & Samtman, Philadelphia, stopped on his way home from the west. Hoo-Hoo.

OBITUARY.

Peter Barr.

Peter Barr, the daffodil king, lies dead, at his quiet English home, in his eighty-fourth year.

Mr. Barr's reputation was world wide, because of his long service in the craft and the fact of his becoming the leading authority on the daffodil, and his personal acquaintance was scarcely less extended, for on his three years' journey around the globe in 1898 to 1901 he visited most of the principal horticultural centers and made it his business to see the worth-while men of the day in each place. He was at that time a hale, hearty old gentleman, spry as a cricket. He was full of good stories, and his delightful chuckle after telling one of his dryly humorous yarns was something few of those who at that time won his friendship will soon forget.

Peter Barr was born on the Clyde, in April, 1826, and began his horticultural career with James Thyne, nurseryman and seedsman at Glasgow, in 1839. He staid with Mr. Thyne seven years, obtaining a thorough, practical knowledge of the business. In 1846 Mr. Barr went with Daly, Drysdale & Co., at Newry, Ireland, where he staid but a brief time, going thence to Richard Smith & Co., at Worcester, England, to be manager of their seed department. It was at Worcester that Mr. Barr at length launched his own bark upon the business sea, under the name of Atkinson & Barr. The partnership lasted only a little while, when Mr. Barr retired to take the management of the seed business of another Worcester house, which he held three years. Removing to London, he located with Butler & McCulloch, seedsmen. In 1861 he began again on his own account, as Barr & Sugden, locating at Covent Garden. In 1882 the partnership ended and the firm name was changed to Barr & Sons, as it is at the present time, the location still being on King street, Covent Garden.

Mr. Barr's first work of importance for the advancement of horticulture was with the lily family, of which he gathered what was probably the largest collection of that period. This work occupied several years, and did much to arouse interest in the family. His work, recorded largely in trade catalogues, was later the basis for the most important monographs on the subject.

But the plant with which Mr. Barr's name is most closely associated is the daffodil. He spent a lifetime on this flower. It was a labor of love, and failed of commensurate public recognition until about 1883, when the daffodil began to rise in popular esteem. About 1884 a committee of the Royal Horticultural Society asked Mr. Barr's opinion as to the feasibility of an international conference on the daffodil. He gave his approval, and it was largely through following his suggestions that the conference proved a great success. From that time the daffodil became more and more popular with the public, and was accepted as a flower of the first importance. A descriptive list of daffodils by Mr. Barr was published under the title of "Ye Narcissus," and is a standard work, found in all botanical libraries.

Mr. Barr traveled widely for the purpose of enriching his collection, and it is of record that he discovered some of the leading varieties. His journeys made southern Europe well known ground to him. In later years Tangiers was visited. In 1896 he went through Norway and Sweden, and in 1897 he traveled through Sicily, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. In 1898 he began his tour of the world, but for pleasure and not plant hunting, his sons having assumed full charge of the business, in which for many years they had served under the father's guidance. Mr. Barr says he never enjoyed in his whole life anything half so much as he did that trip encircling the globe, and the tales that appeared in the horticultural press as he journeyed leisurely onward spoke to that effect. Since returning to England he has lived a life of peace and quiet, but he held his mental strength to the end, and has been the center of many a group of the old guard at the big exhibitions within the year, where he was always to be found near the narcissi, if any were on view. He was a recipient of the Victorian Medal of Honor.

John Forbes.

John Forbes, of the Royal Nurseries, Hawick, England, died September 6, aged 67 years. He commenced business as a nurseryman in 1870, and became well known all over the world as a specialist in florists' flowers and hardy plants. He paid much attention to the improvement of such flowers as pentstemons, phloxes, gaillardias, antirrhinums, delphiniums, pansies and similar subjects. But his nursery firm, which was turned into a limited company last year, also engaged in general plant culture, and was the first to send out a white sport of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which was named Caledonia.

Frank A. Koerner.

Frank A. Koerner, who followed the florists' business in Manchester, N. H., for many years, died September 12, at his home, 228 North Main street, aged 70 years. He was a native of Saxony, but had lived in Manchester since his youth. He enjoyed the distinction of being the senior member of the Manchester turnverein. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Annie Babel and Mrs. Augustus Smith, and two sons, Frank C. and Robert Koerner.

S. B. Chester.

Simon B. Chester, one of the leaders among the growers of vegetables under glass in the middle west, passed out of this life in a hospital at Cleveland, O., September 9, following a week's illness and an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Chester was taken ill September 2 and was taken to Charity hospital, Cleveland, where he was operated on September 5, but his strength did not prove equal to withstanding the shock.

Mr. Chester was in the prime of life, vigorous and forceful, physically and mentally. He put his whole energy into everything that he undertook and was a leader in the adoption of the modern equipment which has revolutionized the growing of vegetables under glass. He was the president of the Cleveland Market Gardeners' Association and treasurer of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association of America, of which E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, is president and which is about to hold its second annual convention. He was held in highest esteem throughout the industry.

Mr. Chester is survived by Mrs. Chester and two children.

C. D. Devinney.

Caleb D. Devinney, a member of a firm of florists at Harrisburg, Pa., committed suicide September 9, by hanging himself with a piece of insulated telephone wire. He had been ill.

T. M. Waters.

Thomas Marion Waters, of Eaton, O., died recently at his home on North Barron street. He was the son of John and Mary Waters, was born on a farm in Preble county, O., almost fifty-four years ago, and practically all his life was passed in that county. Graduating from the college at Ladoga, Ind., in early manhood, he spent several years teaching in the public schools, laboring between terms on the farm and at various other callings until his brother, Will Waters, was elected sheriff of the county, and under him he served as deputy sheriff for four years, to the satisfaction of the public and with honor to himself. He engaged in business as a florist at Eaton in 1892 and continued therein till his last illness. He joined the Presbyterian church at Eaton in 1894. He was one of the best known men in the community, and was loved and honored by all with whom he came in contact. On every moral question he only asked which side was right, and there he took his stand.

July 21, 1889, he married Miss Ida Jay Bell, who survives him. The florists at Richmond, Ind., attended his funeral and acted as pall bearers.

Alexander Bogie.

Alexander Bogie, of Jersey City, N. J., died September 15, as a result of injuries received in a fall down the cellar stairs of his home, at 506 Summit avenue. He was 82 years of age. He was totally blind and it was while wandering about the house unaccompanied that he received the injuries which caused his death. He is survived by a family of five, including Constable James C. Bogie, of the sheriff's office.

Simon B. Chester.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

The long, dreary summer days are about over and business is gradually reviving. Although flowers are not any too plentiful and have not been for the past month, there are just about enough to meet the demand, which at no time has been heavy. Roses are the best stock. Asters are on the wane and will be gone in a few days. Some few carnations are coming in; being cut from young stock, the stems are short, but they come in handy. Some yellow mums are to be seen and they are having a few calls.

The prospects for good stock next winter were never brighter. Carnations are looking exceptionally well. Roses are in grand shape and the mums are hard to beat. Some good cyclamens are to be seen in 5-inch to 7-inch pots, and other stock is in good shape.

Various Notes.

This is State Fair week and a lot of visitors are in town. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, sent down a fine lot of roses, for exhibition, not for competition. It was the center of interest in the cut flower section.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson and niece, Miss Ella Abel, have been at Bay View, Mich., for the last three weeks. They will stop at Chicago on the way home.

The Bowling Club held a meeting Monday night, September 13, at the store of Fred L. Schulz. New rules were adopted and the club will bowl at Grote's alleys, between Fourth and Fifth streets on Jefferson, every Monday night in the future. The club formerly bowled at Hagger's, where the alleys were unsatisfactory to the majority of the members. Jacob Schulz was reelected president and

Fred L. Schulz was reelected secretary and treasurer. The following members were enrolled: George Stark, Andy Brandt, Joseph Wettele, Louis Kirch, Ross Walker, Will Walker, Jr., Jacob Schulz, Fred L. Schulz, George E. Schulz and Karl Rabe. K. R.

Awards at State Fair.

The awards at the state fair were as follows:

Largest and best general collection of decoration and stove plants, arrangement to be considered: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Collection of foliage plants for bedding: First, W. D. Lyman; second, Nanz & Neuner. Best collection of flowering plants for bedding: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Collection of begonias: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Collection of cannas: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Collection of geraniums: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Collection of ferns: First, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

Collection of Roses: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Collection of flowering plants: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Two specimen decoration plants, size considered: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Miss Lillian Thomas.

Two hanging baskets: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Two window boxes: First, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

Two rustic stands or vases: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Largest and best collection of hardy flowers: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Largest and best general collection of cut flowers, arrangement considered: First, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

Best floral design of natural flowers: First, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.

Best decorated dining table: First, Nanz & Neuner.

Bride's bouquet: First, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

Handle basket: First, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

He gave his approval, and it was largely through following his suggestions that the conference proved a great success. From that time the daffodil became more and more popular with the public, and was accepted as a flower of the first importance. A descriptive list of daffodils by Mr. Barr was published under the title of "Ye Narcissus," and is a standard work, found in all botanical libraries.

Mr. Barr traveled widely for the purpose of enriching his collection, and it is of record that he discovered some of the leading varieties. His journeys made southern Europe well known ground to him. In later years Tangiers was visited. In 1896 he went through Norway and Sweden, and in 1897 he traveled through Sicily, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. In 1898 he began his tour of the world, but for pleasure and not plant hunting, his sons having assumed full charge of the business, in which for many years they had served under the father's guidance. Mr. Barr says he never enjoyed in his whole life anything half so much as he did that trip encircling the globe, and the tales that appeared in the horticultural press as he journeyed leisurely onward spoke to that effect. Since returning to England he has lived a life of peace and quiet, but he held his mental strength to the end, and has been the center of many a group of the old guard at the big exhibitions within the year, where he was always to be found near the narcissi, if any were on view. He was a recipient of the Victorian Medal of Honor.

John Forbes.

John Forbes, of the Royal Nurseries, Hawick, England, died September 6, aged 67 years. He commenced business as a nurseryman in 1870, and became well known all over the world as a specialist in florists' flowers and hardy plants. He paid much attention to the improvement of such flowers as pentstemons, phloxes, gaillardias, antirrhinums, delphiniums, pansies and similar subjects. But his nursery firm, which was turned into a limited company last year, also engaged in general plant culture, and was the first to send out a white sport of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which was named Caledonia.

Frank A. Koerner.

Frank A. Koerner, who followed the florists' business in Manchester, N. H., for many years, died September 12, at his home, 228 North Main street, aged 70 years. He was a native of Saxony, but had lived in Manchester since his youth. He enjoyed the distinction of be-the senior member of the Manchester universe. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Annie Babel and Mrs. Augustus Smith, and two sons, Frank C. and Robert Koerner.

S. B. Chester.

Simon B. Chester, one of the leaders among the growers of vegetables under glass in the middle west, passed out of life in a hospital at Cleveland, O., September 9, following a week's illness from an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Chester was taken ill September 2 and was taken to Charity hospital, Cleveland, where he was operated on September 5, but his strength did not prove equal to withstanding the shock.

Mr. Chester was in the prime of life, vigorous and forceful, physically and mentally. He put his whole energy into everything that he undertook and was a leader in the adoption of the modern equipment which has revolutionized the growing of vegetables under glass. He is the president of the Cleveland Market Gardeners' Association and treasurer of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association of America, of which E. A. Anbar, of Ashtabula, is president and which is about to hold its second annual convention. He was held in highest esteem throughout the industry.

Mr. Chester is survived by Mrs. Chester and two children.

C. D. Devinney.

Charles D. Devinney, a member of a family of florists at Harrisburg, Pa., committed suicide September 9, by hanging himself with a piece of insulated telephone wire. He had been ill.

T. M. Waters.

Thomas Marion Waters, of Eaton, O., died recently at his home on North Barrington street. He was the son of John and Mary Waters, was born on a farm in Adams county, O., almost fifty-four years of age, and practically all his life was spent in that county. Graduating from college at Ladoga, Ind., in early childhood, he spent several years teaching in the public schools, laboring between times on the farm and at various other things until his brother, Will Waters, selected sheriff of the county, and for him he served as deputy sheriff for several years, to the satisfaction of the people and with honor to himself. He engaged in business as a florist at Eaton in 1892 and continued therein till his death. He joined the Presbyterian church at Eaton in 1894. He was one of the best known men in the community, and was loved and honored by all with whom he came in contact. On a moral question he only asked which was right, and there he took his stand.

July 21, 1889, he married Miss Ida Bell, who survives him. The florists of Richmond, Ind., attended his funeral and acted as pall bearers.

Alexander Bogie.

Alexander Bogie, of Jersey City, N. J., died September 15, as a result of injuries received in a fall down the cellar stairs of his home, at 506 Summit avenue.

He was 82 years of age. He was totally blind and it was while wandering about the house unaccompanied that he received the injuries which caused his death. He is survived by a family of five, including Constable James C. Bogie, of the sheriff's office.

The Market.

The long, dreary summer days are about over and business is gradually reviving. Although flowers are not any too plentiful and have not been for the past month, there are just about enough to meet the demand, which at no time has been heavy. Roses are the best stock. Asters are on the wane and will be gone in a few days. Some few carnations are coming in; being cut from young stock, the stems are short, but they come in handy. Some yellow mums are to be seen and they are having a few calls.

The prospects for good stock next winter were never brighter. Carnations are looking exceptionally well. Roses are in grand shape and the mums are hard to beat. Some good cyclamens are to be seen in 5-inch to 7-inch pots, and other stock is in good shape.

Various Notes.

This is State Fair week and a lot of visitors are in town. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, sent down a fine lot of roses, for exhibition, not for competition. It was the center of interest in the cut flower section.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson and niece, Miss Ella Abel, have been at Bay View, Mich., for the last three weeks. They will stop at Chicago on the way home.

The Bowling Club held a meeting Monday night, September 13, at the store of Fred L. Schulz. New rules were adopted and the club will bowl at Grote's alleys, between Fourth and Fifth streets on Jefferson, every Monday night in the future. The club formerly bowled at Hagger's, where the alleys were unsatisfactory to the majority of the members. Jacob Schulz was reelected president and

Fred L. Schulz was reelected secretary and treasurer. The following members were enrolled: George Stark, Andy Brandt, Joseph Wettele, Louis Kirch, Ross Walker, Will Walker, Jr., Jacob Schulz, Fred L. Schulz, George E. Schulz and Karl Rabe. K. R.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett,
Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson,
Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick,
Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dörner,
Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg,
Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August
16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.

We both have them.

It doesn't pay to cut short roses in the late summer; one good rose is worth four short ones.

A. J. JACKMAN, of Woking, recently was elected president of the British Horticultural Traders' Association.

By far the largest part of the stock now received in the Chicago market by express is shipped in corrugated paper boxes.

THE offering of F. Dörner & Sons Co., for the season of 1910, will be Crimson Glow, a carnation for which there is thought to be a good opening.

R. VINCENT, JR., & SONS Co. announces the third annual harvest home festival and dahlia show at its place at White Marsh, Md., for September 28 to October 1.

Nor a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

E. S. THOMPSON, of Benton Harbor, Mich., proposes that growers in that section organize the Western Dahlia Society, along the lines of the New England association of growers who specialize on that flower.

McHUTCHISON & Co., New York, have sent each of 3,000 firms in the trade a "Duty Card," carrying in tabulated form the new tariff rates on seeds, plants, trees, bulbs, cuttings, stocks, etc. The card has a string for hanging up.

BOTH SATISFIED.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

In handing you this check it is only fair to state for your own satisfaction that my advertisements in your splendid paper have brought me many inquiries from American seedsmen, and this fact shows that your Review is well read throughout the United States.—Federico C. Varela, Tenerife, Canary Islands, August 25, 1909.

Registration of Rose.

The application of Alex. Montgomery, of the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., for the registration of the rose described below, having according to the rules of this society been submitted to the American Rose Society August 23, 1909, and no reply having been received within the required time, the registration becomes complete and is hereby made public, as follows:

Name—Climbing Killarney. Description—A sport from Killarney, with strong climbing habit, making growths twelve to fifteen feet in length, clothed with strong, heavy foliage; flowers identical with the parent plant and come all along the cane as wood matures.

W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

GOOD ASTERS.

I note an article in the Pacific Coast page of the REVIEW for September 16 regarding the Crego aster. Don't the writers rather mislead the greenhorn element among your readers? If the Crego is the only good aster that they grow, I have an idea that they do not have as long a shipping season as if they used Early Wonder, Queen of the Market,
Early Branching, Late Branching and Roosevelt, together with several other good asters that I do not mention. I grow Crego, and intend to keep on growing it; it is a splendid aster. But there are others. I have customers who will not look at it alongside of the beautiful silvery white of a well grown Late Branching. Certainly Herbert & Fleis-hauer will not say that it ships or keeps as well as this latter? It certainly is easier to get a large flower on Crego, or on any of the Comets, for that matter, but comparing them with any of the other type of asters seems like comparing Paul Neyron with Crimson Rambler. They're both good.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The visit of President Taft, the bankers' ball, the opening of the Hotel La Salle and several department store decorations combined to make an excellent volume of local business last week, from which those who shared in the work must have made an excellent profit, because the market was extremely weak during the larger part of the period. The market was especially in the buyer's favor on roses. Early in the week the receipts were several times what they have been previously, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the wholesalers moved the stock. Later in the week receipts decreased and the market firmed up to some extent, but the opening of the present week again found receipts on the increase because of a return of warm weather.

Beauties, as well as other roses, are in large supply, and the quality generally is excellent, extremely good value being offered at current prices. The way the Killarney, White Killarney, Maryland,
Richmond and others have improved during the last week is notable. It is doubtful if this market ever has had so good roses in the third week in September. Any buyer can get what he wants, be it 6-inch stems or 36-inch stems, in any variety. Killarney is of superb color and easily holds first place in point of supply and demand. Some extra long White Killarney are now seen, of good color and with large flowers. Kaiserin is right at the height of its season, fine flowers being offered on long stems, but unfortunately the demand for white is not for the extra length of stems.

Asters are about at the end of their season. It still is possible to find dozens of buckets of them in the wholesale houses, but the quality is such that only the cheapest class of buyers will use them; really first-class asters are extremely scarce. That the same condition prevails generally throughout the terri-

Beauties

Don't hesitate to take orders for Beauties—we can fill your orders for any length and any quantity—splendid stock, fine large buds of good color, strong stems, perfect foliage. Specially strong on medium lengths.

All this summer we have had the largest supply and the best Beauties on this market. Season after season we have had a steady supply of uniformly high grade stock. Buyers will make no mistake in making this house their regular source of supply on Beauties.

Killarney

We have so added to our supply of this rose that it is a strong specialty for the season of 1909-10. Cuts now are large, in all lengths, and the quality is fine—much the best of the season to date.

Chrysanthemums

Monrovia, the best early yellow, and October Frost, white, are now in daily supply. Excellent flowers on strong stems with good foliage. Can supply any quantity, at least if given time to get the stock in from the greenhouses. Shipments will be heavy in a few days.

Carnations

Our Carnations are coming in freely and the quality improves noticeably day after day—stems are lengthening rapidly and a good proportion of the stock now can be called first-class. You'll know us as Carnation headquarters again this season—order some today.

Kaiserin—Maryland

There are no better white roses in market than our Kaiserin, and for pink our My Maryland are fine. Our supply of Roses is better than ever before—sure to please—and we want to hear from all the buyers who want the best stock and best service.

Green Goods

The best Ferns in the market, in unlimited quantity. Asparagus bunches, Smilax, Farleyense, Adiantum and all other greens in quantity. Asparagus strings are scarce. New crop Leucothoe ready.

tory that looks to Chicago for supplies is shown by the fact that many orders are received calling for good asters, which are supplied with difficulty if at all.

But if asters are on the down grade, carnations are coming rapidly to the front. The improvement has been pronounced, and a fair proportion of the stock now received has satisfactory stem. Of course, the flowers are not large, but the stock is selling better than it did a week or ten days ago.

It is with much difficulty that the gladioli are moved. Increasing quantities of dahlias are coming in, and while some of those put up carefully in boxes, thus avoiding rehandling and bruising, are selling fairly well, the stock handled in the ordinary manner goes slowly. Rubrum lilies find a fair sale. The stringency in the Easter lily market has passed, there being fair supplies on hand, with prices back to normal. Valley is once more abundant.

The Golden Glow chrysanthemums are pretty well cut out and, on the whole, have given the growers a satisfactory profit. Monrovia is now coming in. In previous seasons this has been the first yellow and has realized excellent prices, but this year its value is far below normal, perhaps due to the low price at which Golden Glow has sold during the warm weather. October Frost, for white, is available in good quality and considerable quantity. It will not be long before chrysanthemums are abundant.

Several of the wholesale houses are receiving Rhinebeck violets, and home-grown singles are seen. It is too early for either to possess good quality, but the leading retailers all are carrying a few.

Of all the greens, asparagus strings are the only shortage, and this is being relieved by shipments from the east and south. Smilax in many cases is thin and light, but everything else is not only plentiful but of good quality.

New Wholesalers' Opening.

The two new wholesalers in the Atlas block, Kyle & Foerster and Hoerber Bros., opened auspiciously Monday morning, September 20. All day long there was a stream of visitors; among them were most of the other wholesalers, who called to pay their respects and congratulate the new firms on the excellent equipment of their stores; each firm has fitted up a first-class place, with ample cooling facilities, plenty of good counter space, excellent office facilities and everything that is needed to do a wholesale cut flower business. Miss Elizabeth Mohan is in charge of the office of Kyle & Foerster, permitting both the partners to devote their time to looking after things on the selling floor. George Pieser, son of

G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennico Bros. Co., is with Hoerber Bros.

The State Fair.

George Asmus, president of the Florists' Club, called a meeting of those whom he thought should be interested, at the Union restaurant September 17, to consider the flower show at the state fair, October 5 and 6. The attendance was limited to those who usually take their luncheon at the Union, but the liberality of the premiums offered and the opportunity of reaching many thousands of people seem to justify a larger interest on the part of the local growers. The

A Test of Aphine

The "American Florist" says (September 18, 1909):

So many "Killers" have from time to time been heard from that we confess to having developed a strong disposition to be shown just what they will kill. A representative of the American Florist had recently an opportunity of witnessing a number of interesting tests with "Aphine" at Chas. H. Totty's Greenhouses, Madison, N. J. The tests were made by Geo. E. Talmadge, in the presence of Mr. Totty, Wm. E. Tricker, his foreman, and the writer. Orchids affected with scale, grape vines in which mealy bug had obtained a hold, and black and green aphids on chrysanthemums and roses, were all treated. The solution was applied with a small sprayer. We can say for this preparation that "it does the work," and it is so far from doing any damage to the plants that the foliage soon takes on a better color after it has been applied. The results of these tests show that there is an insecticide on the market that is effective and that is easily and quickly applied, at a comparatively small cost.

The day after these tests were made, Mr. Totty, whose reputation for fair dealing is unquestioned, said: "I have nothing but praise for the new insecticide 'Aphine' that we tested yesterday. The scale on the calanthes and cattleyas was all dead when examined through a glass this morning, and the plants are not injured in the least. The mealy bug was likewise wiped out where the mixture touched it. If Mr. Talmadge will maintain a uniform quality in his product, he will have an enormous sale, for it is unquestionably right every way."

A spray, average 1 part Aphine to 40 parts water.

Andrew Chronis procured the arrest of a man called R. L. Armadale, charging him with impersonating a U. S. secret service officer. The fact appears to be that the "officer" borrowed some money of the florist and neglected to pay it back.

John Poehlmann, president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says that White Killarney is proving a better shipper than Kaiserin, though at present even the longest White Killarney the firm is cutting has no other advantage over the Kaiserin of the big crop now on.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the numerous big decorations last week and this caused a run on wild smilax. They report the wild smilax as of excellent quality this season.

John Mangel says that when he began remodeling his store this summer he threw out everything in the place, so that now the store is new from one end to the other. The fixtures are marble and brass. The window, with a tiled floor, extends to the edge of the sidewalk on both sides of the store, so that those who pass that corner can see everything in the place. ures that business will boom as soon as there is a good frost.

F. Stielow, at Niles Center, says the carnation plants in his section were rather small when housed this season, but that the stock is healthy and promises splendid results, if a little later than usual.

W. H. Hilton, having been around the circuit of the autumn trotting races, is again on deck at his store on Sixty-third street. His horse, Harry S., was a little off his feed most of the season, but he won the 2:28 trot at Valparaiso in such handy fashion that it brought Hilton an offer he could not refuse, so that Hilton's stable is empty at present.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., returned September 16 from his outing in Canada. Mrs. Pieser will be home next week.

The George Wittbold Co. reports fall business opening excellently. They did the bankers' ball decoration last week, and are now at work on a big decoration at Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.'s.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market pendulum swings no faster yet, and business shows little improvement that can arouse enthusiasm. The supply of everything is more than enough to meet any possible demand. Gradually, improvement is apparent in the roses and carnations; the stems are longer, the heads larger, the color brighter. There is a wide demand for Killarney, both colors, and for My Maryland. But the old Maid does not lose its popularity, and though the stems are yet short, it is improving fast, and the best will hold the old prices, no matter how many other varieties make their bid for popularity.

Beauties are now coming thick and fast, but there is a wide demand for them, and the selected easily hold at $25 per hundred. Good carnations now bring from $1.50 to $2 per hundred. They begin to look like themselves again, after a month of eclipse by asters and dahlias. These still arrive in shoals, and until frost comes there will evidently be no cessation. The late asters are superb, and some of the single dahlias are incomparable. Gladioli are on their last legs, and have surely had their day. Apart from the standard and new ones, the less said the better. Before long the common stock will be utterly without a market at any price. There are plenty of lilies and valley. Orchids are coming fast. Every day adds to the perfection of this king of flowers, for which this season a great demand is anticipated. The chrysanthemum is lifting up its head and next demands recognition. There will be plenty of them. All around New York the plantsmen have houses full of them. Before the month ends the wholesale markets will groan with their weight and attract with the beauty of the display.

The violet will shortly protest against its repute for modesty, for the outlook is aggressive. There is no disease reported. The stock looks perfect and abundant, and the preliminary contracts for entire crops are in evidence. Bidding from the west is to be reckoned with again. The

EVERY BUYER IN THE CHICAGO MARKET SHOULD NOTE

Standing Orders Our Specialty

We have on our books a constantly increasing number of regular orders for shipment daily, every other day or twice a week, as required. The buyers alter these orders from time to time, as their needs indicate, and each one knows the hour his order goes out—he can wire additions any day extra business makes necessary. It's a fine thing to know that a certain amount of good stock can be depended on to arrive regularly. That's why so many place these orders with us.

Roses, Carnations, Asters, Mums, Greens

No house has better facilities for filling orders, none has fuller knowledge of the needs of the trade, and none gives so close a personal attention to seeing that every order is correctly and satisfactorily filled. We should like YOUR business this season.

market is larger than ever by natural growth, and it looks now as if the grower was the important factor in this year's violet market. The first of the crop arrived last week, but it is too early for much demand.

Retailers' Smoker.

The smoker of the New York Florists' Retail Association was held at Reisenweber's Friday evening, September 17, and nearly 100 enjoyed a fraternal time, an elaborate lunch, a social smoke and a long and varied vaudeville entertainment, supplied by a professional firm. The society was so well pleased with its success that a monthly banquet is in view, similar to the method of the Canadian club. A goodly number of the prominent Greek florists of New York were present, and an able address on union and fraternity was made by George D. Nicholas, the orator of this nation in New York. A stirring and practical address was also given by Mr. Rosenthal, the attorney of the society. President Dards and Alex. McConnell are still in Europe.

Several visitors received the courtesy of an invitation. Brooklyn retailers were represented by Messrs. Trepel and Hanig. The festivities lasted until midnight. The committee worked harmoniously and successfully, and the spirit of optimism and good will seemed universal.

It is planned to make the next banquet a love feast, to include wholesalers, growers and retailers in one grand celebration.

Dahlia Show.

The seventy-eighth annual exhibition of the American Institute opened Tuesday, September 21, at the Berkeley Lyceum. Will Rickards is manager. Among the well known gardeners there were Messrs. Hale, Duffy, Horn, Kennedy, Murray, Wait, Manda, Bell, McKenzie, Beattie and Seaton. The judges were Messrs. Duckham, Herrington, Totty, Eccles, Stanley, Brown and Turner. The principal prize winners on cut flowers and pot plants were Messrs. Hathaway, Stillman, Lovett, Lothrop, Townsend, Adams, Burt, Weatherbee, Childs, Gugenheimer, Turner, Manda, Noe, Pierson George Burnett, of Burnett Bros., has been traveling in Canada. W. A. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., with Mrs. Sperling will shortly enjoy a honeymoon in the same sentimental and attractive country.

Mr. Good, for many years with H. Hoffmeir, is now manager at the store of John King Duer, on Madison avenue.

Theo. Lang contemplates opening a store on the same avenue, near Fifty-ninth street. This section is fast becoming a hotbed for florists, an even dozen now being within a stone's throw of each other.

O. V. Zangen's wholesale store on West Twenty-eighth street, where R. Gretsches is manager, has had its new suit completed and is ready for the fall boom. All the wholesale houses look wonderfully new and clean and ready. To particularize would include them all. I never saw the street look more spick and span at the opening of a fall campaign.

The Newman Floral Co. is moving uptown, to 16 East Forty-fifth street, close to Fifth avenue, and an excellent locality.

G. Myer had the family order for the Coffin funeral, using large quantities of valley in the pall and decoration, and 200 Beauties. Mr. Barnbaum, one of his force, who has been ill for sixteen weeks with typhoid fever in the Presbyterian hospital, returned to his old position Monday, September 20, having been generously cared for by his employer during his long illness.

R. G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, is putting up two large electric signs for the Hudson celebration. His greenhouses are in splendid order and fully furnished, on Greene avenue. His invention, the corsage bouquet holder, is in wide demand. His inventive mind is always busy. He will build another greenhouse soon on his Brooklyn property.

acres, just opposite John Donaldson's, sold for $60,000 two years ago. It has changed hands at $80,000 and $125,000 since, and the present owner wants $200,000 for it. Mr. Donaldson has an entire block there which he has owned and lived on for over twenty years. He has seven houses on these two valuable acres, or twenty-eight city lots. Figure it up for yourself and wish yourself in the shoes of these fortunate Long Island florists who have grown rich while they slept. Here Mr. Donaldson grows lilies, smilax, Queen, Lawson, White Perfection, Harlowarden and Enchantress carnations, and Ivory, Bonnaffon, Halliday and Mrs. Jerome Jones mums. He is one of the pioneers of the Cut Flower Exchange in New York, and has his son associated with him and a delightful home, with wife and daughter to make his next twenty years as happy as the wealth-producing twenty that are ended. Across the boulevard is the plant of John Miesem. Here, too, are two acres of valuable real estate, three 300-foot houses and a most prosperous business. Over 10,000 Scottii ferns are ready here for the fall demand, and lilies and Easter plants are abundant, with several houses of Maud Dean, Bonnaffon, Halliday and Ivory. One Brooklyn house alone used $4,000 worth of his Scottii ferns last season.

Bowling.

The Astoria Bowling Club, with a membership limited to twenty, began its fall and winter campaign Tuesday evening, September 14. There was a large attendance and much enthusiasm. The club will surely have a grand team at Rochester. W. H. Siebrecht was reelected president, John Donaldson captain and Mr. Einsman secretary and treasurer. BOSTON

The Market.

Last week will go on record as one of the poorest of the season. Supplies accumulated to such an extent that no reasonable offer was refused, and large quantities of flowers could not be cleared out. The Jewish holiday made considerable difference to business. With the Hebrew element out of the market for several days, there was a marked diminution in sales. The present week sees a trifling improvement, but such unwieldy quantities of asters, gladioli and other outdoor flowers still arrive that they cannot be disposed of. Some nice American Beauty, White Killarney, Kaiserin and Killarney roses are coming in. The better quality realize good prices, but there is a veritable deluge of short-stemmed blooms of Killarney, Bride, Maid and Richmond, many of which go at 50 cents per hundred, and some even less.

Carnations are rather more plentiful, but are not selling well. Golden Glow chrysanthemums seem to move a trifle better. One or two Montmorts appeared go at such unsatisfactory prices. Gladioli are abundant and of slow sale. Cosmos, dahlias and helianthus sell poorly. There is an abundant supply of lilies, and callas are still to be seen. Among choice flowers there is now a good supply of Cattleya labiata, oncidiums and Vanda cærulea, relieving the scarcity which existed for some time.

Club Meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, September 21, about 150 members being in attendance. There were as usual some interesting exhibits on the tables. The Blue Hill Nurseries staged herbaceous plants; seedling dahlia W. G. Postings was given a report of merit. Wm. Sim had a fine salmon pink antirrhinum. S. J. Goddard showed fine Pink Delight and Helen Goddard carnations. A. Roper received a report of merit for a new crimson seedling carnation.

The lecturer of the evening was John W. Duncan, who gave an informal but most entertaining talk on his recent journey through the west. Chicago and its fine parks were highly spoken of, also those of Minneapolis, Omaha, Spokane, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Kansas City and other cities visited. The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle was well described and in glowing terms. An ascent of Mount Rainier, the Yellowstone park, Pasadena and the wonderful Santa Clara valley of California greatly impressed the speaker. The native flora, trees and shrubs also came in for considerable attention. A number of queries were asked and answered and the speaker given a hearty vote of thanks.

It was announced that at the October meeting J. K. M. L. Farquhar would deliver a stereopticon lecture on bulbs. The date was set as October 26, the New England fruit show conflicting on October 19. Five new members were elected. Refreshments were served and the first fall meeting proved a rousing success in every way.

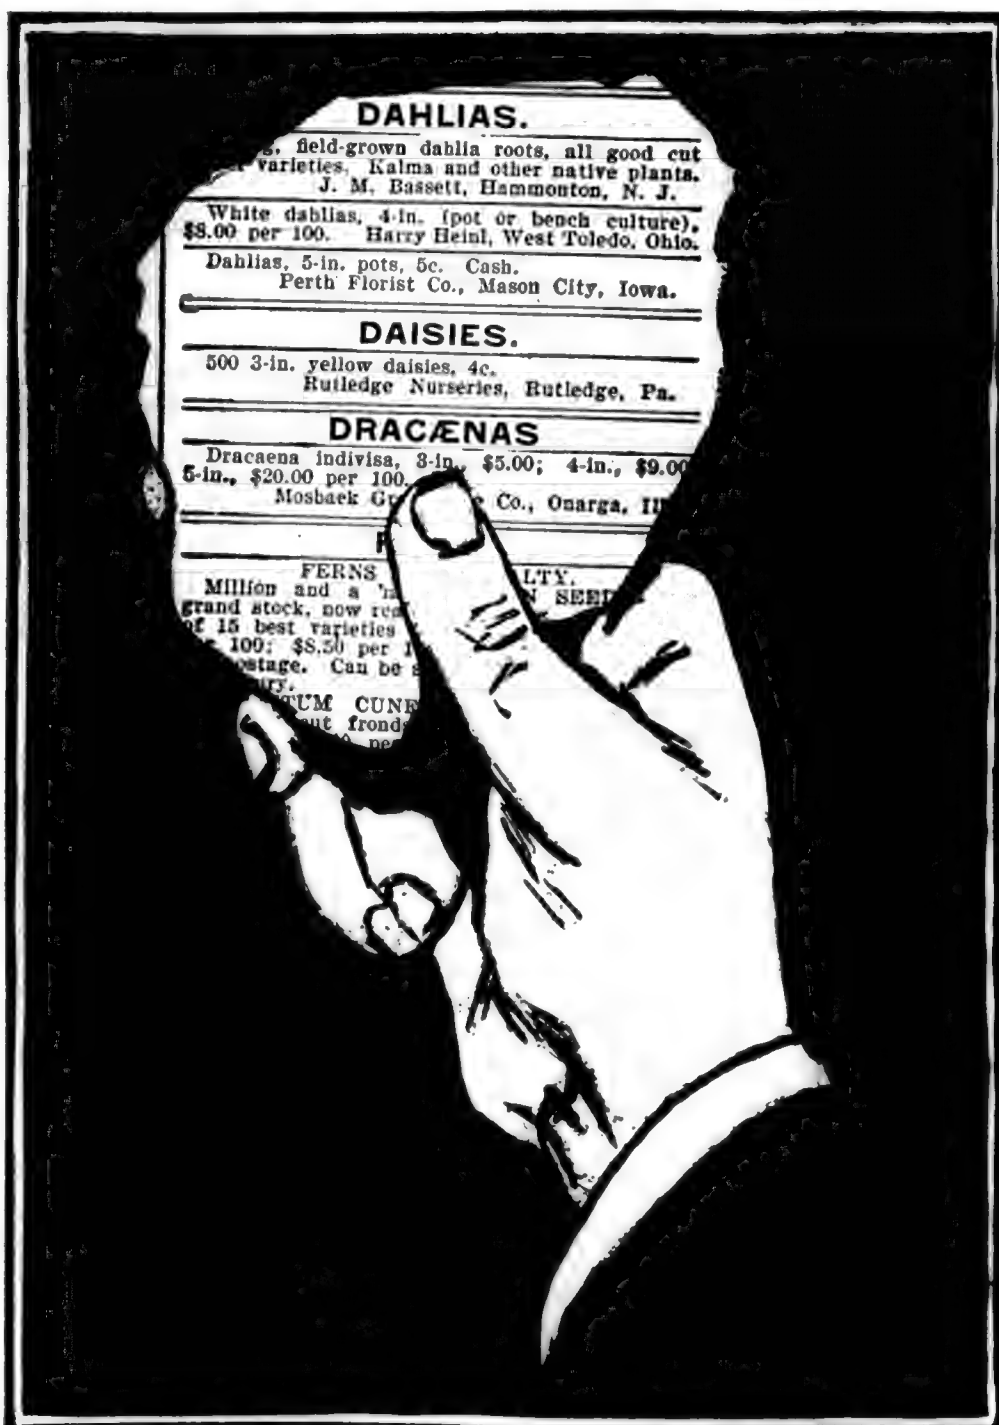

Autumn Exhibition.

The annual fall show of fruits, vegetables and cut flowers of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, September 17 to 19, brought out a fine exhibition. There were no money prizes offered for flowers, but they were shown in large quantities, herbaceous plants, dahlias and gladioli being the leading features. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. were again the largest exhibitors. Their fifth exhibit of herbaceous plants, the last of the season, earned for them a well-merited gold medal. Never have finer displays of hardy flowers been made than by them during 1909. The last group covered 500 square feet of floor space, and the introduction of a pool of water and fountain made a pleasing innovation. The same exhibitors secured a silver medal for a large table of dahlias, artistically arranged, a first-class certificate being given to Bertha von Suttner, a beautiful new salmon-pink peony-flowered variety, with flowers six to eight inches across.

B. Hammond Tracy had hundreds of fine spikes of gladioli, Maiden's Blush, Princess Sandersoni, Harvard, Kathryn, Fireside and Dawn being specially good. William Whitman filled several tables with asters, dahlias, marigolds and herbaceous plants. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, had a group of well-grown anthuriums and other tropical plants. Mrs. E. M. Gill had her usual interesting miscellaneous display, dahlias being fine. Joseph Thorpe had a splendid lot of cactus dahlias. W. A. Riggs had good peony-flowered and cactus dahlias. Mrs. L. A. Towle, John K. Alexander and H. F. Burt had extensive collections of dahlias. Messrs. Alexander and Burt each secured bronze medals. Herman L. Winter had a beautiful amateur's display of dahlias, and other collections came from J. H. Flint, A. E. Johnson and W. D. Hathaway, the last named securing a first-class certificate.

Old Town Nurseries and Bellevue Nurseries each had groups of herbaceous plants. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener, received a silver medal for twenty varieties hardy perennials, the competition closing with the present show. Mrs. J. C. Whitin, William McAllister gardener, had the best collection of indoor grapes, showing two fine bunches each of Mrs. Pierce, Gros Guillaume, Muscat of Alexandria, Golden Queen and Black Alicante. There were unusually good displays of fruits and vegetables.

The sum of $5,000 will be offered in prizes at the coming New England fruit show at Horticultural hall, October 19 to

Various Notes.

Frank Edgar, one of the popular members of the firm of Edgar Bros., Waverly, and son of the late W. W. Edgar, is married at Waverley September 15 to Miss Margaret Burbeck. The young couple were well remembered by their many friends, and have the good wishes of a host of acquaintances.

J. S. Manter is handling some extra good White Killarney and Richmond roses at the Park Street market for the Exeter Rose Conservatories, of Exeter, N. H.

M. Adolphe Buysseus, professor in the school of horticulture, Vilvorde, Belgium, visited Boston last week and made an inspection of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, Mount Auburn cemetery, the park system and several leading private and commercial establishments.

H. A. Barnard, the popular salesman for Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, England, was among our visitors this week. This makes Mr. Barnard's forty-ninth year on the road, and he has been fortunate enough not to lose a single day from sickness during that long period.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, and W. H. Knapp, of Newtonville, are among those handling a fine selection of dahlias at present.

At the last meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society twenty new members were elected.

Work on the excavations under the sidewalk in front of the Park Street market is being pushed ahead rapidly, and 500 additional feet of space will, it is expected, be ready for stallholders within a fortnight.

David Ring, manager of the Rosemere Conservatories, Dorchester, has taken out a second-class fireman's license to operate steam boilers, following the example of some others in the trade.

Col. W. W. Castle, head of the Castle Co., is confined to his bed with a broken leg just at the time when the accident is most trying to his patience, for business is exceptionally brisk.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—Frank Kelley has returned from his annual vacation, spent in the woods of Maine.

INDEPENDENCE, KAN.—Robert Bunyar, the florist and gardener at the south end of Tenth street, is adding two greenhouses, 24x120 and 35x120.

DEFIANCE, O.—The work of constructing the new Scharffenberger greenhouse is progressing nicely. The concrete work has been completed and the work of putting in the glass roof has been commenced.

CAIRO, ILL.—The establishment of Davidson The Florist, on Eighth street, has been purchased by Herman H. Cade, an experienced florist of Greensburg, Pa., who took charge at once. The business was started by Wm. M. Davidson in 1895, and the present equipment includes a range of greenhouses in the upper end of the city. The death of Mr. Davidson made it necessary to dispose of the business.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The opening of the outdoor sporting season, that portion honored by society, has had an exhilarating effect on the cut flower market. International tennis has been replaced by international cricket; home is becoming more attractive than abroad, and people are returning to the city and to the suburbs. There are a few weddings, luncheons, dinners requiring flowers; but their effect on the market is counterbalanced by the increase in receipts, mainly due to the dahlia.

The dahlia is now at its best and, it is pleasant to record, the local flower shops are taking hold of the dahlia in earnest. Prices have been fairly satisfactory, but quality is an important factor. There is no material change in the list of varieties named last week. The aster situation is rather peculiar; much of the local stock is over, but the distant shippers, referred to a few weeks ago, are now sending in superb stock in large quantities. White asters are especially fine. It is probable the aster season will last this month.

The chrysanthemum, not satisfied with its own season, is overlapping on the aster and on the dahlia. Golden Glow, reported in this column in the market August 20, has been joined by October Frost, in fine form September 20.

Easter lilies have again appeared in quantity, fine stock, the price advancing despite the increased receipts, indicating a better market. Both cattleyas and valley are more plentiful, each in a comparative way, the quantity of cattleyas being, of course, extremely small when compared with the quantity of valley. Gardenias have advanced, due to improved quality.

Carnations have taken a step forward in stem and in size. White carnations have been particularly scarce. The rose market has been lively, most of the growers apparently deciding at the same time that the price realized for American Beauties was too low for profit. A decided decrease in production caused a sharp advance in price, more noticeable in flower and in stem than in listed figures. Mrs. Jardine has made its appearance, looking well. The increase in the quantity of pink roses of lower grades is marked.

An improvement is noticed in the demand for asparagus. The first single violets of the season have made their appearance. Tuberoses are scarce and in excellent demand.

Dahlia Show.

The annual dahlia exhibition was held in Horticultural hall September 21. Despite the drought, excellent outdoor flowers of many varieties were shown, the display exceeding expectations.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. showed a fine lot of gladioli, zinnias and marigolds, also well-grown celosias.

David Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J., had an especially fine collection of show, decorative and cactus dahlias. Frantz Listz, magenta; Yellow Century; Gorgeous, scarlet, and Variegated Listz vied with each other for beauty honors. Nellie Stewart, a lovely pink, was much admired, also Mrs. Charles Turner, yellow.

Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., exhibited many varieties of dahlias, mostly one bloom to a vase. Most notable were three blooms of Souvenir de Gustave Doazon, about six inches in diameter.

Wm. Robertson, gardener for John W. Pepper, Jenkintown, displayed outdoor cut flowers and won first, and a vase of single dahlias. He showed a new single, Jack, and Dreer's White, giant perfect flowers, and won first prize for both.

Walter Scott, gardener for Mrs. Clement B. Newbold, had a fine display of vegetables, but John McCleary, gardener for Mrs. F. C. Penfield, took first prize.

Thomas Holland, gardener for Mrs. G. A. Cassatt, won first on a vase of mixed dahlias; 1910 was pointed out for its beauty. Wm. Robertson was first for hardy perennials. Chas. Bustard, gardener for Mrs. W. A. Dick, Chestnut Hill, showed fine blooms of Delace, a new pink dahlia, also a vase of assorted Locust Farm.

The trap met the up train at River-ton, taking a little party of three over the country roads to Locust Farm, the annex to the Dreer Nurseries. Three is an excellent number for traveling purposes (the French, in their ignorance, had an idea that the third person was in the way, and said "de trop," which showed how little they knew about it), because when you travel in threes the third fellow doesn't have to do what the other two do, but can go off and be sulky by himself until he gets in a good humor again, when perhaps one of the two will be ready to take his place. The trio consisted of George A. Strohlein, James C. Clark and Phil. It would be impertinent to introduce the first two and, I hope, the last one.

The special object of the trip was to see the field of hardy phloxes in full bloom. Some misgivings had been felt about that field of hardy phloxes, because Providence had withheld the rain. Sufficient stress had been laid on the effects of persistent deep cultivation. You know the Dreers do things in a thorough sort of way; the Jersey farmers plow three inches, the Dreers ten, and then they cultivate, and as soon as they are through with cultivating they cultivate some more. The result of all this was that moisture had been conserved, as the experts say—preserved would perhaps be plain English—and under that mixture of soil, subsoil, manures and what not there was moisture; yes, there really was, and those phloxes were worth going miles and miles to see. "A rag carpet," Mr. Strohle said, and he added with a touch of humor, "The new fence around the field is intended to keep out the newspaper men." It did not.

As I remarked before, all the phloxes showed remarkable vigor, considering the drought. The colors were beautiful, in rows of scarlet, white and pink succeeding each other; the color contrast was bewildering. One block alone contained four and a half acres. Just think of it! Four and a half acres of nothing but phloxes! The object lesson was the beautiful effect made possible by these evenly growing, free blooming perennials. Fancy one of the grand places at Newport with a long border of scarlet Coquelicots reaching as far as the eye can see, with hedge behind and velvety turf in front. Mr. Strohle is a color enthusiast. He selected fine blooms of Von Hochberg, crimson; Siebold, scarlet; Selma, pale rose mauve, and Mrs. Jenkins, white, calling attention to their beauty in combination. Agla Adanson, snow-white with red center, was especially admired.

Among the varieties selected by Harry C. Sim as of unusual merit are the following: White, F. G. Von Lassburg, Albion, Hermine; scarlet, George A. Strohle, Coquelicot, General Von Heutz; red, Vesuvius; rosy carmine, R. P. Struthers; delicate lilac rose, Mme. Paul Dutrie; deep reddish violet, Le Mahdi; mottled, Antonin Mercie.

Some of the best new varieties are Elizabeth Campbell, Herman Fisher and Frau Rosalie Wildt.

The water-loving propensities of the cannas made conditions more trying to them than to the other plants. Despite this, they look well, showing a robust, vigorous growth, and are free flowering. The varieties were planted in solid rows, giving excellent opportunity for comparison. Among the bronze-leaved varieties King Humbert and Egandale were conspicuous. Florence Vaughan, another old favorite, was beautiful among the yellow variegated. Buttercup was there, too, representing the pure type, but the most striking yellow or yellow variegated in the field was the English variety, R. Wallace, which Mr. Strohle said was uniformly good wherever seen. There were some white varieties, including Mont Blanc. The impression created by the cannas was that of the best standard sorts, that would weather well.

Dahlias had made good growth, but were not generally in flower when seen. Jack, a single scarlet which Mr. Clark approves, was very showy. A number of the standard sorts were in bloom, but a little later will be better for the bulk of the stock. Indications point to an excellent crop of roots.

A passing glance was given to a beautiful field of roses on one side of the road, and on the other one of delphiniums.

A new fertilizer was carefully inspected.

I cannot recall having seen a weed.

At Keith's.

September is the month for closing the parks and opening the theaters, so in September interest naturally centers in the new productions at the playhouses. Keith's theater, the leading vaudeville house of the city, has a new attraction this week. It is a one-act playlet arranged by George Beban & Co., entitled "The Sign of the Rose." The display card shows a little girl presenting the hero with a long-stemmed American Beauty rose. The scene is laid in a flower shop, though not an exact reproduction of our own Sign of the Rose. An incident in the play is the application of a young man for the position of manager of the flower shop. When asked what were his qualifications, he replied: "I worked under Charles Henry Fox." Mr. Beban called on Mr. Fox and explained that he had been attracted by the

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The torrid weather, which sent the mercury soaring to 95 degrees in the shade, ended September 14, and the intense, sultry heat was followed by a delightfully cool and refreshing rain. It not only cooled the atmosphere, but helped late crops wonderfully by breaking the protracted drought. It was just what was needed to lay the dust and help make the West Michigan State Fair the success it deserved to be.

It is now cooler and the effect on carnations and roses is already noticeable. Previously the flowers would keep but one day; now they keep several days and in better condition. Most of the carnations are now housed. Violet benching is beginning and will continue until after hard frost. The day is coming when all violet stock will be grown inside instead of in the field. This has been an exceptionally hot, dry summer, and the difference in real quality of field-grown stock as against plants grown inside and in 4-inch pots is very noticeable, and in favor of indoor-grown violets.

Business has been quiet, although lately there has been enough funeral work, with a few weddings, to use up what little stock there is to be had. The aster crop, as a whole, has been a failure; yet there are enough to supply local demand.

The judge was Wencil Cukerski, our former superintendent of parks, who is just going into business for himself, and his work gave general satisfaction.

The hall is not as good a place to show plants as Fruit hall, of previous years. It is too draughty. The space is not all in one place, but distributed around, and plants dry out too quickly. Fruit was shown in the same hall as the flowers.

At least twenty-eight outside florists visited the fair, and for next year an effort will be made to secure some enterprising firm, from Chicago or elsewhere, to make a trade exhibit, as it would be good advertising.

A fee of $30 was given A. Bole, of Ada, Mich., to put up his collection of dahlias, which were certainly fine, and, judging from the crowd constantly around his table, the public was interested in the display.

The amateurs made a creditable showing and more encouragement should be given them. G. F. C.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

We are now having our Indian summer and, if anything, the temperature is even warmer than we had in July. Tuesday, September 14, was the hottest day ever registered in Buffalo for the month of September. This is naturally hard on stock. Carnations are improving and everything is being helped along as a result. Violets made their first appearance last week, but are small and there is little call at this season of the year for them.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son were in charge of the decoration at Derby in honor of Miss Pierce's wedding. Miss Pierce is the daughter of George N. Pierce, the automobile manufacturer.

The much talked of bowling club started its first weekly roll and it indeed was a grand success. Three games were rolled, which created a large amount of pleasure and friendly feeling for the boys. A light lunch was served, after which Chairman Neubeck called the boys to order and the Buffalo Florists' Bowling Club was formed. Members were enrolled and officers were elected. Two captains were elected, also a secretary and treasurer. L. H. Neubeck was elected captain; Robert A. Scott, vice-captain; Joseph Streit, secretary, and Charles Sandiford, treasurer. It is the purpose of this club to get the boys together each Monday and bowl a few games and the six highest men are to be selected for the convention team. Annual Dahlia Exhibition.

The annual autumn flower show, September 16 and 17, brought out a splendid exhibition of dahlias and other seasonable flowers. Probably in no city in the country are there so many dahlia specialists and the quality of their exhibits is high. Mrs. H. A. Jahn's silver cup for the most meritorious exhibit in the show went to James Garthley for a fine group of palms, hydrangeas, lilies, etc., in which vases of dahlias were used to good effect. The principal prize winners were: W. F. Turner & Co., W. D. Hathaway, Mrs. H. A. Jahn, F. L. Tinkham, J. P. Bodge, Mrs. George Fuller, Joseph Thorpe, T. M. Stetson, H. F. Burt and George H. Walker.

The W. W. Rawson silver medal for best cactus dahlia seedling went to W. F. Turner & Co. A bronze medal offered by the same firm for best specimen of W. W. Rawson show dahlia was also taken by W. F. Turner & Co., also the Farquhar special for twelve blooms of peony-flowered dahlias in not less than three varieties. The society's silver medal for best seedling was taken by Mrs. H. A. Jahn. The Parkinson silver cup for twenty-five blooms for amateurs went to M. McCarthy and for twelve blooms to James McVicar.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The market conditions of last week were about the same as the previous, with the exception that the supply of gladioli and asters is on the decline, making roses and carnations, which are improving day by day, better property. There also was an unusual demand for valley.

State Fair.

With Friday, September 17, this year's state fair came to an end and, by all reports, it was a grand success. While no official report has yet been given out, it is probable that there will be a small surplus, which is gratifying news. It really was a good display in everything except flowers, outside of the flower beds which beautified the grounds. The prizes on these were awarded as follows:

Geraniums, Heitman & Baerman, first; R. Preuss, second.

Salvia, R. Preuss, first; Heitman & Baerman, second.

Cannas, Heitman & Baerman, first; R. Preuss, second.

Any other bed, Heitman & Baerman, first; John Dunlap, second.

Alex Klockner, John Dunlap and H. W. Koerner were the leading exhibitors of cut stock and pot plants. The honors were equally divided among them. Hunkel's Seed Store and W. E. Dallwig each had a creditable display in the seed line.

Various Notes.

Last Sunday the store force of the Holton & Hunkel Co. played a return baseball game with the greenhouse force of the same firm at Brown Deer. The weather was not any too favorable, but they played just the same. The score was 23 to 22 in favor of the greenhouse team.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports having sent out a carload of French bulbs of extra fine quality last week.

The following were visitors: John Peterson, Escanaba, Mich.; Otto Sylvester, Oconomowoc; Jno. Rheinfisch, Beloit; Mrs. C. J. Lotz, Watertown; J. Tremain, Hartford; T. Helfrich, Burlington; Mrs. T. Hinchliffe, Mrs. Miller and Jno. Bourgaize, Racine; Adam Zender, Park Ridge, Ill.

JOLIET, ILL.

After a visit to the fair, the writer paid a visit also to the various carnation companies. At the houses of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. everything was spick and span and ready for fall. The genial foreman, P. W. Peterson, took special delight in showing the visitors over their establishment. I must say that the outlook is certainly promising for fine crops this winter.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has all its stock housed and will soon be cutting carnations.

Joseph Labo has everything well in hand. Stock looks fine, and Mr. Labo is just preparing to take a well earned rest. A. O.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The weather has been favorable all along to chrysanthemums, which will be plentiful for All Saints' day, if nothing turns against them. This year we will have two holidays on that occasion, and everybody is preparing for a large business.

Marie Henrietta and Marechal Niel, the two leading roses in New Orleans, are fine and ready to be potted for winter and spring trade. There is an all-around complaint about caterpillars destroying Boston ferns, the tenderness of the leaves making it difficult to find an insecticide strong enough to kill this pest without injuring the foliage.

Club Meeting.

Warm weather, dull business and the absence of many florists prevented the holding of the society's meetings for quite a while, but September 17 we had the largest meeting since the annual election of officers, who now took their new positions. There was an abundance of refreshments and at the table some interesting topics were discussed.

The few who had been happy enough to go to Cincinnati and the surrounding places spoke highly of what they had seen. P. A. Chopin admitted that roses, geraniums and soft bedding plants are in the north superior to ours, but when it comes to general vegetation, such as hedges, palms, trees, etc., we are far ahead. The growing of some plants down here for the northern markets should be more generally attempted. B. M. Wichers made a few remarks about the way the plants are handled at the markets in Cincinnati, stating that pot ferns are sold at retail a good deal higher than here, but that gladiolus spikes are offered at 25 cents a hundred. C. W. Eichling said he would like to correspond with a grower who would ship him these flowers at this price, being short of them all the time and having to pay much more for them at other places.

Charles Eble came back quite satisfied with his trip, having created a good impression of what we can do here with palms and having disposed of a lot of Phoenix Roebelenii.

The members had a long discussion about the possibility of having the S. A. F. convention in this city in the near future. H. Cook first spoke on the subject. He said the time was right to take the matter in hand and offered to head the subscription list with a nice sum. Charles Eble said that, having approached several florists from Chicago, Philadelphia, New York and other centers, he was quite certain that our chance was good and that we should organize at once. C. R. Panter warned the society on the responsibility of the undertaking. His long experience in the different organizations to which he belongs had a good deal of weight on the subject. H. Papworth said that for years he had been considering the idea of having the convention down here, but he was afraid that New Orleans was not centrally enough located. Besides, he said, the month of August is not exactly the ideal month to see our city, in our hot climate. Furthermore, there is a business question, and in the eyes of many florists New Orleans may not offer inducement enough. He regretted to say that he did not see much chance of success for some time at least. So the matter stands for the present.

President A. Alost had an interesting communication read to the society by Secretary C. R. Panter, referring to the importance of tree planting in New Orleans and making several propositions to the society. His remarks were quite appreciated and show the interest he takes in the welfare of the horticulturists.

Various Notes.

We had the pleasure lately of visiting the place of Abele Bros. They are busy now with vegetable plants. There is a large demand for cabbage plants, which are an important crop in Louisiana with the truck gardeners. The hot weather, insects of many kinds and fungi shorten the existence of thousands of plants, and they require much attention and constant care to grow them with success. Their crop of mums is in perfect condition. Their Robinsons are better than ever and a bed of Monrovia is quite promising. They will soon erect a new greenhouse to protect a large bed of Asparagus plumosus, already growing on the open ground.

J. A. Newsham has been disposing of a number of orchids and he invited the club members to call and inspect his stock, some sorts being now in bloom.

Circular No. 27 of the State Crop Pest Commission of Louisiana, on "Common Insects Injurious to Crops," by Wilmore Newell and Arthur H. Rosenfeld, has been distributed among the growers. It is quite interesting, many of the insects spoken of being troublesome to florists. A chapter on insecticides is well worth being preserved.

Charles M. Flynn, inspector of the State Crop Commission of Louisiana, was in town, making his tour among the growers.

C. W. Eichling called the attention of the club members to the state fairs. One will take place in Jeanerette, La., September 30; another in Shreveport, La., November 1. From his experience at pre-

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. O. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

G. G. STUMPP, president of Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, resides at Bridgefield, N. J., where he has just been nominated for mayor of the town.

It is reported that an important American seed house has placed a contract with an English grower for early peas of 1910 crop which is expected to return him 1,400 bushels.

A PORTRAIT and brief biographical sketch of Peter Barr, old time London seedsman and of world-wide fame as a daffodil specialist, will be found in the obituary column this week.

H. FRANK DARROW, New York, states that Alfred Emerich, representing Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, will arrive in New York about September 25 and will make his usual visits to the American seed trade.

At a meeting of the board of directors of J. F. Noll & Co., Inc., Newark, N. J., September 15, Edward C. Dungan, who for over thirty years has been with William Henry Maule, Philadelphia, was elected president and general manager of the company.

THE September number of "Plant Talk," issued by W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, is devoted largely to bulbs, and has an interesting article on "Potting Bulbs for Winter Flowering," in which cocoanut fiber is recommended as a substitute for soil.

THE Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., has employed C. E. Smith, a seed analyst formerly in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and now is prepared to issue certificates of purity on all seeds. The company has fitted out a laboratory that will be appointed with the same apparatus in use at Washington and the analyst will employ the same methods to obtain tests now in use at the U. S. Agricultural Department.

do not yield a tenth of what the old varieties did, and this in a favorable season. This year the proportion will be nearer that estimated by Hugh Aldersey, viz., one twenty-fifth or one-thirtieth. In the seed-growing districts of Essex the sweet pea crop is giving growers anxious concern. Seed pods on plants on the flat, which have not been stuck, are almost a blank—in many instances the amount of seed used for stock will not be returned. Crops which have been stuck are far from satisfactory. The spring was late and cold, frosts continued into June, and right through the summer the temperature was low, especially at night. This condition of affairs, combined with rain almost every other day, except for a fortnight in August, prevented the flowers setting."

this year. It is reported that the farmers in the Gronigen district have contracted with German and other seed growers, as well as with Dutch firms, for considerable acreages of turnips for 1910 crop. Caraway is an important item in this district and has been harvested in large quantities, but the quality is inferior on account of the wet season. Rye grasses were harvested in July and are making good prices, as the old seed was exhausted. Dactylis glomerata has become an important item in the Gronigen district.

FESTUCA ELATIOR.

Conrad Appel, the Darmstadt seedsman, writes under date of September 10, as follows: "The new crop of Festuca elatior, true rhenish tall fescue, which sort is grown in my next neighborhood near the Rhine, is now brought in and the result is smaller than the year before. I am at present occupied with grading and dressing this species on a very large scale and up to the various grades of quality." I have ascertained that this year's seed is of excellent quality and of

DUTCH BULB GROWERS' SOCIETY.

The following awards were given by the tulip and mixed bulb committees at the recent meetings of the Dutch Bulb Growers' Society at Haarlem, Holland:

First-class certificates—B. H. Van Lijl, for double early tulip, Van Tubergen, a new variety, raised from the double early tulip, Couronne d'Or, with golden yellow flowers.

C. Jonkheer & Sons, for single early tulip, Yellow Queen, an excellent tulip for forcing, with clear yellow flowers, apparently raised from the White Pottebakker, as the form and growth are much like that variety.

Awards of merit—W. Blour & Sons, for single early tulip, King of the Scarlets, a fine dark red variety, with large flowers; a good variety for bedding.

P. Heemskerck Johs, for single early tulip, President Taft, with large and long flowers, white, feathered rosy. This variety had already received an award of merit at a former meeting, where it had been exhibited as Joost van Vondel.

C. P. Alkemade, for Gladiolus Lemoinei Pink Beauty, an early flowering variety with dark rosy flowers, with a striking dark red blotch; also Gladiolus Gandavensis Lily Lehmann, a new seedling variety with large, pure white flowers, shaded rosy.

John Van Til & Son, for Gladiolus Gandavensis, pure white, raised from seed.

C. P. Alkemade, for Gladiolus Gandavensis Alida Geertruide, a new seedling variety with creamy white flowers, rosy feathered in center.

E. H. Krelage & Son, for Phlox decussata Nymph, a large flowering variety, soft rosy colored, white center.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—John Spiess is building a greenhouse, 9x100, on Orange street near High street.

ATHOL, MASS.—J. B. Sutherland, who has been with Geo. W. Sutherland for the last two years, has now opened a store of his own at 522 Main street.

GOSHEN, IND.—The decorations for the Montgomery-Storer wedding were furnished by Miss Dora Brown, of the Colonial Flower Shop, and were said to be exceptionally well done.

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from the middle of August to the end of September is the best time. The seedlings should be grown on to the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool, the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue (new). A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.00; 1000, $7.50.

Collection of the above nine selected varieties, one pkt. of each, for $1.00.

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, 75c; 1000 seeds, $6.00.

PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen. Color, pink, with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25.

SALMON QUEEN. Undoubtedly one of the most distinct and beautiful salmon colors found in Cyclamen. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum Salmonium splendens. The finest salmon-pink variety. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.75.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Rocco, Mixed Colors. The beautifully fringed flowers measure 5 inches in diameter. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.75.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Bush Hill Pioneer. A beautiful new feathered Cyclamen in various colors. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $2.00.

Six Grand Novelty Cyclamens

Peach Blossom. An exceptionally handsome variety of an intense rose color. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.75.

Purple King. The best of all crimson varieties, and strikingly beautiful. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.75.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced. Trade pkt., 50c.

Rose of Marienthal. Soft shell pink; a very pretty variety. Trade pkt., 50c; per 100 seeds, $1.25.

Salmon King. Rich color. One of the very best of this beautiful shade. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Trade pkt., 50c.

Collection of the preceding six varieties of up-to-date Novelty Cyclamens for $2.50.

The Market.

Florists were much pleased with the business last week. There was nothing of a rushing nature, but trade was much better than for a long time. There was quite a bit of funeral work, of which all received their share. There were also some weddings and a number of department store openings, which made things look as though the florists' business had opened up for a good season's trade. The wholesalers, too, were much better pleased with the business done last week, and all of them seem to have plenty of stock of everything in season, although fancy stock is limited in this market at present.

In all varieties of roses the quality is becoming much better each week, and the cool nights should improve them greatly. The bulk of the rose consignments are shipped into this market. Carnations, too, are showing better quality among our home growers. In these the situation is the reverse of that in roses, as the bulk of the consignments are from home growers. St. Louis county alone supplies more than half of all the carnations.

A large crop of California violets is expected this season from our Kirkwood growers. More sweet peas will be grown for this market than in any previous year, as all are going in quite heavily on them.

When Writing Advertisers

There were heavy shipments to this market last week of asters and tuberose, which sold well. There was a good demand for wild smilax, fancy and common ferns and asparagus.

Various Notes.

Harry G. Rackham, son of George Rackham, of Detroit, spent Monday, September 13, in the city on his way to Denver, where he is employed by the Park Floral Co.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., has returned from her summer vacation, spent at the northern lakes.

George Waldbart surprised his many friends in the trade by returning home from his trip abroad sooner than expected. He looks the picture of health.

Grimm & Gorley have opened a branch store at 702 Washington avenue, with Walter Retzer in charge. It will be known as the American Beauty Store.

William Bouche, the famous landscape gardener, has the contract to lay out the grounds of Excise Commissioner Caulfield's new home, in Park View place.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber and Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Miller are expected home next week. They have been traveling through Europe all summer.

Dominic Bova, whose marriage to Miss N. Mercurio took place Sunday, September 19, was presented with a handsome cut glass water set by his friends in the trade, many of them attending the wedding, at the home of the bride's parents, 1008 North Sixth street.

J. D. Carmody, of Evansville, Ind., spent a few days with the trade here. He is always a welcome visitor.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, spent the biggest part of last week with the trade here. He always leaves here well loaded with orders.

Alex. Johnson, in Wellston, has just finished six new houses, 18x150, or about 18,000 feet of glass. He will grow a general stock for his own use.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, spent a day with us last week.

Henry Ostertag reported that his firm furnished its first large wedding decoration of the season last week. They have a number of large decorations for the first week in October.

Walter Sanders, son of C. C. Sanders, stole a march on his many friends in the trade when he was married to Miss Eva Harper September 9. The happy couple are living near the old folks on Henly road, in the new bungalow specially built for them. Congratulations are now in order.

All our Kirkwood growers will be in great shape this season with carnations, violets and sweet peas. Hugo Gross, William Winter and F. W. Ude, Jr., who have the largest amount of glass, with a number of new firms who built this summer, will almost double the output of last season.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society held a meeting at the Mercantile Club Tuesday, September 14, to perfect arrangements for the annual flower show and pomological exhibition, to be given in the new Coliseum, November 9 to 12. F. W. Brockman presided over the meeting. The chairmen of the different committees were appointed. All committees will meet at the Coliseum this week to make further plans. The Market.

There has been a slight improvement in business conditions here during the last week. This is partially due to several large funerals, as well as the opening of the theatrical and social season. It will be six weeks or two months before the social demand is in full cry, but the returning of families from the seashore and country has given a slight impetus to the local situation.

Various Notes.

Francis Leland Schellinger, who is associated with his father, Joseph F. Schellinger, at Riverside, was married on the evening of September 15 to Miss Margaret MacDonald Walsh at the home of the bride's parents in this city. At the reception that followed the ceremony there were about 200 present. The decorations were entirely in yellow, golden rod, Golden Glow mums and marguerites being tastefully combined. The young couple will spend their honeymoon in Nova Scotia, and on their return will reside at Riverside.

Charles Macnair had a theater party of about a dozen at the Imperial theater on the evening of September 13, at "The Florists' Shop."

The Providence Motor Cycle Club held its annual run to visit the grounds of W. H. Tarbox, the dahlia king, at East Greenwich, September 19.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, exhibited about 300 varieties of dahlias at the Connecticut State Fair at Hartford last week, taking first prize on his collection. He also took first prize on his collection at the Washington County Agricultural Society's fair at Kingston last week, and at the New Haven County Horticultural Society's dahlia exhibit. Varido Flora, a green dahlia, shown by him, was the center of attraction.

Matthew Macnair has been nominated by the prohibition party as a member of the lower branch of the General Assembly from this city.

Alexander H. Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, who is city forester, made a trip through the western part of Massachusetts last week, in search of young trees for Roger Williams park and with which to start the new nursery.

The number of floral pieces at the funeral of Superintendent of Public Schools Walter H. Small, September 18, was one of the largest ever seen in this city. Nearly every florist in the city was represented and the variety of designs was unusually large. The school committee sent an immense broken wheel of asters, roses and other blooms. This was made by Frederick Dietz. W. H. M.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Former Alderman C. Harry Woolsey has purchased the Dempsey greenhouses, in South Rockford, and will conduct these in connection with his east side business.

Vegetable Forcing.

A PORTRAIT and brief sketch of S. B. Chester, South Brooklyn, O., will be found in the Obituary department this week.

BEST TOMATO FOR FORCING.

Will you kindly give me your judgment of the best tomatoes to grow under glass, for fruit from April to September? Our inclination has been toward English varieties.

A. R. C.

This is the paramount problem with hothouse tomato growers all over the country. Until recently English varieties have been used exclusively, but never with entire satisfaction. They seem to fruit more abundantly than our American varieties, but in quality and size of fruit they are greatly inferior to our American or outdoor varieties. The difference is so marked that it is readily noticed by the customers. Of all the imported varieties Comet is considered the best. Sutton's Perfection and Eclipse are also good. The French variety Marvel of the Market is fairly good, but nearly all the other varieties have serious faults and most of them are either too crooked or so small that they are almost worthless and unsalable varieties.

For fall and winter I still feel safer with Comet than any other, but for spring and summer growing inside I believe that the improved New Stone is the best. It has been given careful tests and proves itself to be a good forcing variety, especially in the spring, when it is necessary to compete with the outdoor grown tomatoes from the south, which are usually large and good.

CHANGING THE SOIL.

I am located in Spokane, Wash., and have a small greenhouse which I built last fall to grow vegetables in. I grew one crop of lettuce and one of cucumbers, which I took out a month ago. The soil is dry and hard and looks as if it were not of much account. It is black soil of good quality, but it seemed to get hard when the lettuce was in it last winter. Now, I should like to know if there is any way for me to get this soil to last this winter. The lettuce was slow of growth, taking between 100 and 130 days to mature, and then was small. I shall be grateful for any information you can give me.

H. B.

Your soil is evidently well spent and you will be wasting time and money in trying to get along without changing it. Both lettuce and cucumbers like best a good, black soil, made soft, light and loose by mixing in a good deal of well rotted manure and a generous supply of sand, if the soil seems to be too sticky. My soil is sticky, like putty, and I find it necessary to use one load of sand and two loads of rotted manure to three loads of soil, to make the soil right for lettuce. For cucumbers I do not care if the manure is not rotted, as fresh manure is best for cucumbers, but it should be well mixed with the soil. Most black soils have some sand in them and would require little or no more. Plenty of well rotted manure will usually loosen the soil in good shape.

I would suggest that you empty the house and refill it with new, fresh soil, well mixed, using about one load of rotted manure to three of soil and adding a little sand if necessary. See that the benches have good drainage—plenty of cracks in them. This should grow you a nice crop of lettuce. Later, before planting cucumbers, put a thick coat of fresh, short horse manure on the beds and turn it under thoroughly, breaking up the lumps, etc.

CONVENTION OF GROWERS.

The second annual convention of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' and Market Gardeners' Association of America will be held at Ashtabula, O., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 12, 13 and 14, 1909. This association was organized in Cleveland, O., last year and numbers in its membership vegetable forcers in the states of Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas.

The meeting at Ashtabula promises to be largely attended. An interesting program is being prepared, which will include addresses and papers by prominent authorities on vegetable forcing and discussions by practical growers from all sections of the country. In addition there will be an exhibit of greenhouse supplies and materials and of greenhouse products. One feature that will draw many to the convention will be the opportunity afforded visitors to see the famous greenhouse establishments at Ashtabula, where many acres of glass are devoted to vegetable culture.

All who are interested in greenhouse vegetable growing or market gardening will be welcomed at the meeting. Those who wish programs and additional information should write the undersigned at 508 Walker building, Louisville, Ky.

The Market.

It is almost impossible to give any particulars on market conditions prevailing here, for, with the exception of design work, there is practically no business. Asters are plentiful, the bulk of the stock being shipped to the large markets, as there is practically no local demand. This section being devoted to asters, everybody has his own supply.

The aster business will no doubt be far from satisfactory to the growers, values being far below those of any previous year. There are far too many grown for the demand, and it is to be hoped the overambitious aster grower will not attempt to grow all the asters himself another year. Overproduction is certainly responsible for the gluts we have had, and we shall continue to have them as long as the grower ignores the law of supply and demand.

Club Meeting.

The first fall meeting of the Commercial Florists' Association was held September 8. The chief business of the evening was the discussion of the flower show, to be held in Convention hall, November 2 to 4. Considerable interest was shown by the members present, and nobody seemed to have any doubt but that the show would be a success. However, it seemed necessary to Chairman C. H. Vick to urge that members enter into the spirit of the show to a greater degree than heretofore shown, and in view of this it was decided to make C. H. Vick director general of the show, with full power to select committees, to give each man his work to do and to see that he does it.

It was decided to hold the first annual outing in the way of a clam-bake, to be held Wednesday, September 22. George B. Hart was unanimously chosen as director general for this occasion and, from what can be gathered from the cir-

We are having much sunshine, and flowers are in their full glory again. There had been a scarcity of good stock on account of the cool, cloudy weather, and the change is much appreciated by the florists. Violets have put in their appearance, but are not plentiful yet. Valley, gloxinias and Gloire de Lorraine begonias are selling well as potted plants. Ferns in the newer varieties are also much in demand.

BUSINESS CHANCE IN PORTLAND, ORE.

For sale on account of dissolution of partnership, a long established and exceptionally well located wholesale and retail business in seeds, grain, poultry and orchard supplies; a rare opportunity for one or two men to invest $10,000 profitably in the great northwest. Address No. 222, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—E. A. Bailey is now sole proprietor of the A. Mitting Calla Lily Bulb Co., Mr. Mitting having relinquished to Mr. Bailey his remaining interest in the business.

OAKLAND, CAL.—For the third time during the present year the store of H. M. Sanborn, at 517 Fourteenth street, was recently burglarized. Entrance was gained through the rear of the store and, after ransacking the place and rifling the cash register, the thief got away without being discovered.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Flowers are scarcer than they have ever been in the history of San Francisco. All the growers are changing their houses or else the newly-planted stock is not yet sufficiently started to produce any blooms, and as a consequence no really good stock is offered. In addition to this, the outside stuff, which should be abundant at this time, is badly spoiled by the excess of unexpected hot weather with which we have been blessed for the last ten days. It quickly dried up the few remaining asters and burned the tips of the dahlias and gladioli, so that good stock of any kind has been at a decided premium for the last two weeks.

No roses are seen, with the exception of short-stemmed Brides and Maids, and everyone is longing for cooler weather, which we are fully entitled to at this time.

Sweet peas are practically out of market, and mums have not yet made their appearance in sufficient quantities to give them a standing. There is a general rise in prices on all kinds of stock. Carnations that went begging at 1 cent each all summer cannot now be bought for less than $3 per hundred. Violets have made a place for themselves already, and cost the retailers about $1 per dozen bunches. They are of the Princess of Wales variety, but are short of stem and small of flower. With a few cool nights, however, they will rapidly assume a better form and color.

Business is fair, considering the disadvantages under which the trade is laboring at present. Funeral orders are plentiful, with a generous sprinkling of decorations for weddings and other social functions.

Various Notes.

Thos. Heatherington, until recently gardener to Lieutenant Winship, at San Rafael, is now located at 20 De Wolf street, Ocean View.

Charles Mack, of Denver, Col., is on a visit to the Pacific coast, and is at present in San Francisco.

Henry Ruehl, of the Ruehl-Wheeler Co., San Jose, is spending a few days in town.

Joseph M. Wiesel, representing the Barteldes Seed Co., of Denver, Col., is interviewing the local dealers in the interest of his firm.

John Fronmiller, head gardener for many years to F. M. Smith, the "borax king," has accepted a similar position with P. E. Bowles, the local banker.

Gill's Floral Depot is erecting two propagating houses, 20x100 feet each, on their Twenty-eighth street nursery grounds, at Oakland, Cal.

The Thorsted Floral Co. has been offered a large bonus for its lease in the new Phelan building, in which it recently opened a store.

It may interest readers of the REVIEW to know that the rebuilding of the new Palace hotel is nearing completion and it will be opened in November of this year. An interesting feature in the old Palace, from the point of view of florists, was the plant decorations in the glass-covered court, called the palm court. This feature will be repeated in the new house, only the decorations will be less extensive, on account of the fact that the roof in the new house will be only two stories high, while in the old house the roof was over all, that is, six stories high. So the top gallery will be dispensed with, but I hope that the quality will be better this time.

It is a noteworthy fact that the outside lath house grown palms, like kentias and seaforthias, especially larger specimens, are coming more and more into use on this coast. I made a trial in Fairmont hotel of a number of these palms, from the Exotic Nurseries, Santa Barbara, Cal., and they are doing finely.

The coming Portola festival, in October, has caused a revival of the use of pampas grass. One sees it more and more as decorations in store windows, and on wagons, horses, etc. It is colored red and yellow, the Spanish colors, the colors of the discoverer of San Francisco bay. The Portola Pacific Horticultural Society is more active than ever. The members are working hard to make the coming show in October a great success, and it is a sure thing that this

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Current Comment.

Business in our line has kept up wonderfully all summer, the demand for good stock keeping pace with the supply.

Mr. Hills, formerly of Maywood, Ill., is again in town and says he intends to make his home here permanently.

O. C. Saakes, for the last ten years located at Second and Spring streets, has opened an up-to-date store on Fourth street, between Spring and Broadway. This is considered the best location in the city for a florist's store. There are now four fine flower shops in this one block, and there is some talk of a fifth, to be opened soon. Mr. Saakes still has his old stand, but expects to close it in a short time, that he may give his entire attention to the Fourth street store.

The writer was invited to pay a visit to the new establishment of Messrs. Dieterich & Turner, located at Montebello, seven miles east of Los Angeles. The ground, five acres in extent, was purchased last March. They have since erected two handsome houses, each 56x300 feet. They are built of the latest and best materials and certainly are a credit to Mr. Turner's skill as a mechanic, he having planned and built them himself. He has one house planted to carnations in solid beds; there are ten beds in each house. The other house is planted to Beauty, Rhea Reid, White K. Marney, My Maryland, Richmond, and several different varieties of his own that show promise of being highly satisfactory commercial roses. He also has worked on carnations for a number of years and has one in particular which he has named Dorothy, after his youngest daughter. It is a magnificent flower, something like the Rose-pink Enchantress, and is a free bloomer. They also have a lath house of asparagus, etc., 250x300 feet. The surface of the ground is taken up by some 12,000 Cocos plumosa, 8,000 aspidistras and several thousand new varieties of carnation plants, all in excellent condition. C. E. M.

TO INVADE SPANISH AMERICA.

The Good & Reese Co. is making special preparations for the extension of its trade among Spanish races of people, and will, as stated by a local newspaper, "invade the Spanish speaking countries of the world in an attempt to gain new business."

Professor Silvio Salicrup y Guma, who has taught the Spanish language in Wittenberg College, will have charge of the literature of the new department. He will get out the catalogues, translate all letters received and carry on the Spanish correspondence. He will teach in the morning at the college and work at the florists' business in the afternoon.

All the lines of flowers now shipped to English speaking countries will be advertised in the Spanish language and the broadening of the business is expected to add a number of workmen to the local plant in a few months.

POMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The thirty-first biennial meeting of the American Pomological Society was held at St. Catharines, Canada, from September 14 to 17, a part of each day being devoted to excursions into the fruit belts surrounding the city. The attendance was large, and many interesting topics were discussed.

Resolutions were adopted urging upon Congress the necessity of legislation providing for the most effective prevention of the importation of insect pests and plant diseases which may be practical. Also, a resolution endorsing the bill introduced in congress (H. R. 21318, S. 6515 of the Sixtieth congress), entitled, "An Act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded Paris greens, lead arsenates and other insecticides, and also fungicides, and for regulating the traffic therein," and urging upon the horticultural interests of the United States the necessity for such control of the purity and quality of commercial insecticides and fungicides. J. C. Van Lindley read a paper on "Peach Culture," giving the results obtained from an orchard of 32,000 trees located 600 feet above sea level, near Pomona, N. C. He shipped over 14,000 crates this year, and banked, clear of commission, $23,500. These results had been obtained by continuous hard work, spraying with lime-sulphur solution and cleaning the trees from borers.

trifoliata, which is generally being accepted as stock for growing oranges in cooler climates than those in which oranges are generally grown. It has been possible to grow oranges much farther north now than was originally supposed possible; Texas and other Gulf states have taken up the industry quite largely and successfully.

"Little Peach" was the subject of a talk by B. M. Waite, who gave a history of attempts made to control the disease, described the symptoms and stated that the only effective method so far found for preventing the spread of the disease is the total eradication of affected trees.

Prof. F. T. Shutt, chemist of the Dominion Experimental Farms, read an exhaustive paper on the "Effect of Various Cover Crops on Amount of Soil Moisture." The writer stated that there are few crops so detrimental to a young orchard as oats, barley and rye. Legumes and rape may be sown in midsummer, to hasten the ripening of the wood for winter, but until that time clean cultivation is recommended. Sod is also a destructive element in an orchard, and should not be tolerated under any conditions.

There was a symposium of discussions on the question of "Adaptation of Varieties to Soil Conditions," led by Col. G. R. Brackett, U. S. Pomologist, and followed by H. J. Wilder, Bureau of Soils, Washington, D. C. Both speakers agreed that varieties differed greatly in their requirements of soil and climatic conditions, and Colonel Brackett said: "Nature makes no mistakes in the geological and geographical distribution of her plants. It is always advisable for the prospective planter to get all the information possible at first hand from those growers who have already tested the varieties in the vicinity where he wishes to locate."

"Pecan Growing" was the subject of a paper by H. Harold Hume, of Glen St. Mary, Fla. Owing to the increased consumption of nuts in America, and the increased price being paid for them, it is safe to assume that pecan raising will become one of the profitable industries of the south. Pecans can be raised wherever cotton can be raised, and instances of successful culture may be cited as far north as Iowa. The trees must be planted not less than forty feet apart, fifty and sixty feet apart is recommended, and other crops can be raised among the trees sufficient to pay for culture until trees mature and come into bearing, which is likely to be within ten or twelve years. A pecan orchard, however, is not set out for one generation only—it is planted for a century of growth.

"Oriental Pears and Their Hybrids" were spoken of by John S. Collins, of Moorestown, N. J., who mentioned the Le Conte and Garber as being among the leading varieties.

Murray Pettit, of Winona, Ontario, spoke on the subject of "Grape Growing." At the present time there are 14,500 acres of grapes growing in the famous Niagara district, the average yield of the Niagara grapes being about three tons to the acre.

Prof. W. M. Scott, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, contributed a paper on "Self-Boiled Lime-Sulphur as a Remedy for Brown-Rot and Scab of the Peach." Experiments of two years have given sufficient evidence in favor of this form of treatment to warrant its recommendation for general use in peach-growing districts affected by these diseases.

"How to Grow English Gooseberries Free from Mildew" was the subject of a talk by R. B. Whyte, of Ottawa, his method being to grow them in the shade of trees, to prevent their cooking in the sun, and pruning severely, so as to keep an open bush. Desirable varieties are: Sportsman, Slaughterman, London Red, Victoria, Lofty, Green Ocean, Weatherall and Alma.

The exhibit of fruits was unusually large, owing to the annual exhibition of the Niagara District Horticultural Society being held at the same time. The main floor of the large armory was filled with a display of flowers, the most prominent of which was the aster, in all its varieties. Cold storage fruits and canned

The Market.

Trade in general is on the increase, with the outlook good for the coming season. Stock is in much better shape at this date and looks promising.

Roses are fine, with good stems, and of good color. Brides and Maids are still the leaders here, with some good Killarney, Rhea Reid and Richmond. Carnations are getting better right along and they are commencing to look like those of old. The bulk of the cut at present is Enchantress. Asters are about done here; what few there are on the market are of poor quality. Gladioli are a back number, with a light demand and a fair supply. Mums are looking fine and promise to be even better than last year. Some growers are cutting Golden Glow, but not in any quantity. The demand for them is light, as the weather is too warm for selling the queen of autumn.

Several fall openings last week called for a good number of palms, etc., and quite a little cut stock. The convention of the National Association of Stationary Engineers, held at Memorial hall, created a big demand for decorative stock, as there were 150 booths in the exhibit and nearly all of them used a few plants. Besides, the hall was nicely decorated with palms and bunting.

Various Notes.

There was to be a meeting of the Florists' Club September 14, but there were not enough members in sight on that date, so the next meeting will be September 28.

C. A. Roth reports stock coming on well and he looks for a busy season.

Sherman Stephens says stock at Greenlawn is in the proper shape to create business.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business picking up in good shape, with stock looking fine.

Graff Bros. have been making a run on carnations for the last ten days, at 35 cents per dozen.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting quite heavily from its new carnations and the stems are good for this early in the season.

The Munk Floral Co. reports things in good shape for the coming rush.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor here last week, calling on the trade in general. J. M.

NEW CARNATIONS

We have two wonderful new seedling Carnations, DEEP CRIMSON and BRIGHT PINK, which we now offer for the first time, and after a thorough trial we unqualifiedly recommend them as the strongest growing, freest blooming, healthiest and most satisfactory varieties of their color; large flowers, extra long, stiff stems; fine fragrance; calyx never bursts. As we are Rose growers and not Carnation specialists we will sell these varieties in strong, field-grown plants, clean, healthy and thrifty, while the stock lasts, and it is limited, at $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club for the fall was held on the evening of September 13, with a good attendance and a lively interest in all proceedings, principal of which was the annual election of officers. Geo. H. Mellen, who served as president for the year 1907-1908, and Geo. D. Leedle, who has been secretary for the last two years, had both been renominated, but each advocated rotation of officers and moved the election of the opposing candidates by acclamation. The corps of officers elected is as follows: Roger H. Murphey, of Urbana, president; Charles M. Niufter, vice-president; Carl E. Glenn, secretary, and Harry C. Reeser, treasurer.

Mr. Murphey responded to calls for a speech by inviting the club to become his guests at the next meeting of the club, Monday evening, October 11, which invitation was unanimously accepted, and the members then attending will leave on the 6:05 p. m. interurban car for Urbana.

The florists of Urbana, O., not being sufficient in number to maintain a club of their own, are affiliated with the Springfield Florists' Club to the extent of four members. Florally speaking, this beautiful little town is considered a suburb of Springfield, its florists having for the most part obtained their experience here. The distance is only fourteen miles over either steam or trolley lines, and transportation is quick and convenient. As a matter of fact, Springfield considers florists anywhere within a radius of 100 miles as being eligible to membership in its club.

The new Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora alba was the subject of a considerable amount of discussion, our alert and keen-eyed florists having discovered that two similar sorts are on the market, the true variety producing larger florets and panicles and forcing readily. Attention was called to a fall circular issued by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., the language of which might cause the impression that Springfield stocks are of the inferior sort, whereas the opposite is true, the original plants from which the greater portion of stock grown here was propagated having been purchased from the E. G. Hill Co. GE. DALE.
